50 TO 75 DIE IN ARSENAL BLASTS

3 HURT IN STORM ENDING HOT WAVE; 3 ARE PROSTRATED

Heavy Damage Is Done to Property; Windows and Roofs Wrecked.

TREE CRUSHES MAN FASTENING AUTO TOP

Artery of Woman's Arm Is Severed at Her Home by Flying Glass.

OFFICIAL TEMPERATURE, 99, IS YEAR'S HOTTEST

Capital Again Leads East in Torridity; Cooler Weather Promised for Today.

Three persons were injured in a sudden and violent thunderstorm which early last night broke a two-day heat wave, the second day of which saw three more persons prostrated by the heat.

Scores of persons escaped serious injury in the brief storm seemingly by as many miracles. Scores of trees were blown down, limbs were torn from hundreds of others and whirled about the streets, chimneys were blown down, roofs torn from houses and windows were broken in many residences, business houses and government buildings.

Damage in thousands of dollars was done to property during the storm which began shortly before 7 o'clock and lasted less than a half hour.

While only six persons were taken to hospitals suffering from heat or storm injuries, many others suffered less severely and were treated in their homes or on the streets.

Motorist Badly Injured.

Thomas Roth, 27 years old, 1326 Connecticut avenue northwest, was seriously injured when a tree was blown down on him while he was seated in his automobile in front of 1302 Euclid street northwest attempting to fasten storm curtains on his car. He was struck across the abdomen and pinned to the back of the seat. At Emergency hospital it was said he had suffered internal injuries and his condition was serious.

Mrs. Marie Brozinski, 29 years old, 263 Fifteenth street southeast, had an artery in her arm severed by flying window glass blown out by the wind as she was lowering a window in her home. She was taken to Casualty hospital. She will recover, it was said.

Matthew MacDonald, colored, 34 years old, 1626 Fifteenth street northwest, a doorman at the Metropolitan club, was severely cut about his face when the storm blew out the glass of one of the club windows as he was closing it. He was treated at Emergency hospital. He will recover also, it was said.

Collapses Near Church.

Mrs. Mary Evans, 25 years old, 808 Sixth street northwest, collapsed from the heat in front of St. Patrick's Catholic church, Tenth and G streets northwest, and was taken to Emergency hospital. She is expected to recover.

A man believed to be Gilbert Cornell, 65 years old, of Bath, N. Y., fell to the street at Ninth and F streets northwest, another sufferer from the heat, and was taken to Casualty hospital. Unable to identify himself, his identification was determined by papers found in his clothes. These indicated he had been discharged Friday from the New York Soldiers home. He was later taken to Gallinger hospital.

A woman who did not give her name walked into Casualty hospital on the verge of collapse from the heat, was treated and left for her home.

Holiday a Life Saver.

That there were not more persons prostrated by the heat yesterday probably was due to the Saturday half holiday of government employees and the all-day holiday given employees by the large department stores and many business firms.

Storm and Heat Victims as Torrid Wave Ends

Three persons were treated at hospitals for injuries sustained in the storm early last night. They were:

Thomas Roth, 27 years old, 1326 Connecticut avenue northwest. Serious internal injuries. Mrs. Marie Brozinski, 29 years old, 263 Fifteenth street southeast, artery in her arm severed by flying glass.

Matthew MacDonald, colored, 34 years old, 1626 Fifteenth street northwest. Face severely lacerated by flying window glass.

Three persons were treated at hospitals for heat prostrations. They were:

A man believed to be Gilbert Cornell, 65 years old, of Bath, N. Y., collapsed at Ninth and F streets northwest. Condition serious.

Mrs. Mary Evans, 25 years old, 808 Sixth street northwest, collapsed in front of St. Patrick's church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

375 CONVICTS IN MINE YIELD TO HUNGER PANGS

Kansas Men, Realizing Warden and Governor Are Firm, Agree to Surrender.

FED AND SENT TO CELLS

Lansing, Kans., July 10 (By A. P.).—Mutineers in the mine of the Kansas penitentiary here capitulated early tonight and came to the surface.

The convicts, who had remained in the mine since yesterday, defying prison officials, gave in without having gained their demands. Hunger and the futility of further resistance in the face of the stern attitude adopted by Warden W. H. Mackey, supported by Gov. Ben S. Paulen, brought the collapse of the rebellion.

The convicts released the cage in the mine shaft, which they had tied down yesterday, and were hoisted up in groups of 12.

Shortly before they sent word over the mine telephone that they were ready to surrender, a threat had been made that the mine would be destroyed.

Warden Mackey held firm, however, and warned that any damage to the mine would result in prosecutions on charges of destroying State property.

W. Gleason, one of the thirteen guards who had been marooned in the mine with the prisoners, was the first officer to reach the top. He made a dash for the kitchen to obtain food.

As the convicts reached the surface they were immediately marched to the bathhouse. After bathing, the 375 prisoners were fed and locked up.

Warden Mackey said the men tonight, but that a thorough investigation would be conducted next week and the guilty men would be punished.

WOMAN DIES IN FALL; CHILD, 3, BADLY HURT

Leaning on Porch Is Fatal to Mrs. Kissell; Girl Stumbles From Window.

Falls from the second story of their homes yesterday caused the death of Mrs. Julia Kissell, 36, 1011 K street northwest, and seriously injured Olive Wall, 3, 3628 O street northwest.

Mrs. Kissell died in the afternoon at Casualty hospital from a fractured skull received when she fell to the sidewalk from the back porch of her home. Police say the railing of the porch gave way when she leaned upon it.

Olive Wall is in a serious condition at Georgetown hospital, suffering from a broken jaw, cut tongue and possible internal injuries, received when she fell from a second story window of her home, where she had been playing. She is said to have stumbled against the blinds and crashed through the open window.

FENNING REPORTED IN DISAGREEMENT WITH HIS ADVISERS

Assurance Is Held Given Without Consulting Commissioner.

INDICATES INTENTION OF RETAINING PLACE

Rudolph Hints That He Will Serve Until His Term Expires in April.

There were strong indications yesterday that Commissioner Fenning and his political advisers were not in tune. It became apparent that some one in whom the President has confidence has given the assurance that Mr. Fenning's resignation would be forthcoming and a quiet but summary action was necessary.

But Mr. Fenning has given every indication that he is not of this mind.

At the District building it was indicated that in so far as Commissioner Rudolph is concerned, the reports about his resignation may delay rather than hasten it. If he resigns, it was said, it will not be because of ill health.

Another view of the Fenning situation was given in advice last night from the summer White House to the effect that his resignation was expected as soon as he had had an opportunity to discuss the situation with his advisers. These advisers, the advice said, were not at present in Washington.

Expected to Retire.

This followed the plain and reiterated statements from the White House, both here and at Paul Smiths, N. Y., that Mr. Fenning was expected to retire. The President was represented in the advice as not seriously considering a successor until the resignation was received.

In view of the conflicting reports from Paul Smiths and the District building, coupled with the tenor of last night's advice, the impression was gained that those who had assured the President just before he left here that Mr. Fenning would retire, had not counseled with Mr. Fenning. Last night's advice were taken as a hint to the local Republican leaders to see the commissioner and acquaint him with what the President had been assured would come about.

HAWLEY GIRL FINED AFTER NIGHT IN CELL

No Bath With Wine in It in the Chicago Jail, Court Advises Her.

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—Joyce Hawley, whose abductions in wine brought to Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, a sentence for perjury, was fined $50 here today for ignoring two court lights as she motored up Congress street.

"And I guess you'll pay it," remarked the court, "because there's no bath with wine in it at the Bridewell."

She posed for photographers while the obligation was discharged by a cabaret publicity agent. She had passed a night in a cell after "sassing" arresting officers.

Bobby Jones Is Winner Of Open Golf Tourney

Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, Ga., who won the British open golf championship less than a month ago, was winner of the United States open golf tournament yesterday over the Scioto course at Columbus, Ohio. Jones turned in a card of 298 for the 72 holes, one stroke better than that of Joe Turnesa, New York professional, who finished just ahead of Jones. Mehlgorn, who led for 86 holes, Sarazen, Hagen, and more than two score other great golfers, finished back of the two who fought it out for the lead. Details of the tournament will be found in the sports section.

COOLIDGE WILL TAKE TRIP TO PLYMOUTH EARLY THIS WEEK

White Pine Camp Astir in Preparation for an Immediate Journey.

PRESIDENT STUDIES POLITICAL SITUATION

Withdrawal of Stickney in Vermont Declared Due to His Request.

(By Staff Correspondent.) Paul Smiths, N. Y., July 10.—There is no place like home, even to a President.

Because this is fundamentally true, White Pine camp, the summer White House, was astir today with President Coolidge's preparations for a trip to Plymouth, Vt.

The President was born and raised in a farmhouse at Plymouth. It was there under the uneasy rays of a kerosene lamp that he took the presidential oath. His father, Col. John Coolidge, is buried there and his son, Calvin, Jr. The house holds his dearest memories. It is home in his heart.

A greater contrast could hardly be imagined than the difference between the $500,000 camp where President Coolidge is now situated and that weatherbeaten homestead in the Vermont hills.

Eyes Look to Vermont.

Yet, the President hadn't been in the Adirondacks an hour before his thoughts followed his straining eyes, straight east over the hazy blue mountains toward Plymouth.

At that, no one had thought he would go so soon. It was presumed he would test awhile longer the joys of millionaire camp, and the excitement of fishing the quiet waters of Lake Osgood or the St. Regis river rapids.

The President indicated, however, at his first newspaper conference here yesterday that the homing instinct was strong in him. He will probably leave early next week for a few days' visit with his old neighbors.

Since Col. Coolidge's death the Coolidge house has been kept open and ready for occupancy at a minute's notice.

Attend Church Today.

Tomorrow the President and Mrs. Coolidge will attend the morning services at the First Presbyterian church, Saranac Lake, of which the Rev. G. K. Newell is minister. Here (CONTINUED ON PAGE 2, COLUMN 5.)

HUNDREDS HURT, TOWNS LEVELED NEAR NAVY DEPOT; FIRES SPREADING TOWARD ARMY EXPLOSIVES PLANT

The Known Dead.

MRS. FRANCES FEELY, of Brooklyn.

Among the Injured.

Injured persons taken to the Dover General hospital, as reported by the Associated Press, included: Casmer Kensigh, a marine, of Hamtramck, Mich. Samuel Boggs, of Hugo, Okla., attached to the depot. Mrs. Mathilda Koch, 42, of the depot. Mrs. Burdick, of the navy depot. Louis Marvin, naval depot, 4110 Shaw avenue, St. Louis, Mo. Charles Hunter, naval depot. Charles O. Downing, of the naval depot. Mrs. H. H. Zornich, living at the Picatinny arsenal. Mrs. O. Crump, Picatinny arsenal.

Three Officers Missing.

Capt. Dowling, in a telephone message late last night to the Navy Department from Picatinny arsenal, reported that Lieut. Comdr. Brown, Lieut. Schrader and Capt. Russell H. Clarke were missing. This did not indicate, however, that they had been killed, he said, as it was impossible to check up the personnel.

Navy Men at the Depot.

The personnel of navy men stationed at the Lake Denmark, N. J., naval depot follows:

Capt. Otto C. Dowling, in command, of Glen Ridge, N. J. Lieut. H. C. Schrader, of New York. Lieut. Comdr. Edward Allen Brown, of Virginia Beach, Va. Chief Gunner Josiah M. Gately, of Rhode Island. Man, 15 Miles Away, Sees And Hears the Explosions

Montclair, N. J., Resident Tells of Thundering Rumble and Hissing Shock, and Brilliant Flames Lighting Up the Sky.

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—Frank A. Gale, Montclair, N. J., tonight described the explosion of the naval ammunition depot at Lake Denmark, N. J., as he witnessed it from Oak Ridge, N. J., 15 miles distant.

The first indication of an accident was the appearance over the Sparta mountains, which separate Oak Ridge and New Foundland, N. J., from the valley in which the arsenal is located, of a huge cloud of white smoke.

A sharp explosion, deafeningly loud, followed the appearance of the cloud. Immediately afterward a thundering rumble and hissing shock the ground. A brilliant cloud of flame spread over the sky in the direction of the arsenal. A second and heavier explosion followed almost immediately.

The rumbling continued without intermission until some 40 minutes later when a third explosion spread another brilliant flame across the sky. This third explosion was not as intense as the two which preceded it.

The rumbling continued for almost two hours after the first explosion, punctuated at brief intervals by sharp reports as of bombs and mines.

Mr. Gale said that the villages of Oak Ridge and New Foundland suffered little damage from falling debris, as they were protected by the mountain ridge. He added that he feared greatly for the lives of Detonations Continuing in New Jersey, Blocking Efforts to Combat Flames; Residents of Countryside Terrified by Shocks.

CONFLAGRATION STARTED BY LIGHTNING; MOST OF THE DEAD SAID TO BE MARINES

Force of Explosions Felt 30 Miles Away, Flaming Embers Carried Over Vast Region; 1 Woman Dies in Hospital; Most of Victims Believed to Be in the Ruins.

Dover, N. J., July 10 (By A. P.).—From 50 to 75 persons are believed to have been killed in a series of terrific explosions today at the navy munitions depot near here which destroyed the depot and spread destruction through the surrounding territory.

At midnight tonight flames still roared through the depot and repeated smaller explosions made it impossible for rescue workers to enter the danger area to remove the dead and assist the injured. Soldiers and marines formed a guard around the depot, allowing no one to pass.

Hundreds of persons living in a radius of a few miles of the depot were injured when the blasts leveled their homes.

EXPLOSION STRIKES ENTIRE FORCE.

Most of the dead were marines stationed at the depot. A bolt of lightning late in the afternoon struck an arsenal which exploded. The entire force at the depot, 70 men, was called out to fight the fire which followed, and a second and greater explosion caught them, leaving them dying or injured.

The terror and confusion spread through the surrounding country made it almost impossible for some time to determine the number of casualties.

Fifty persons were taken to the Dover general hospital, many seriously injured, 50 were taken to an emergency hospital at the American Legion headquarters, thirteen seriously injured were taken to Morristown hospital, Morristown, N. J., and scores of others with minor injuries were treated by physicians here and in nearby towns.

MANY INJURED AT MT. HOPE.

The entire town of Mount Hope, a few miles from the depot, was reported destroyed and many injured were found there. It was reported that the town of Hibernia also had been leveled. The explosions were felt for 30 miles around the depot and pieces of steel and concrete, flaming embers and ashes fell miles away, starting many fires.

Late tonight the fire in the navy depot was reported by Capt. O. C. Dowling, U. S. N., commandant of the depot, to have spread to Picatinny arsenal, an army arsenal about a mile from the depot.

The first death reported was that of a woman who died in the Dover General hospital. It was believed, however, that the greater number of the dead would be found in the ruins of the depot when workers are able to enter it.

ALL KEPT 5 MILES FROM SCENE.

The danger lines, beyond which no persons were allowed to pass, were extended late tonight to about 5 miles from the arsenals. They had previously been maintained at 3 miles.

This followed reports that fire had spread to the Picatinny arsenal. It is thought here that none of the big concrete magazines at Picatinny had blown up; but only the stores of 16-inch shells at the naval reservation a mile away.

About midnight the explosions at the naval arsenal were not occurring as frequently as earlier in the evening.

FIRE LIKELY TO RAGE FOR HOURS.

Dover, N. J., Sunday, July 11 (By A. P.).—In a statement to the Associated Press at 12:30 o'clock this morning Capt. O. C. Dowling, U. S. N., commandant of the navy munitions depot, said that he saw no one killed in the explosions which wrecked the depot last night.

He said he had no way of checking the number of casualties before daylight and that he expected the fire which followed the explosions to rage for hours.

The depot, he said, contained 200 magazines, small buildings filled with T. N. T. depth charges, high explosive shells and smokeless powder. Every building in the depot was wrecked, he said, and virtually every magazine exploded.

At the time of the first explosion, he said, there were at the depot 61 marines, 20 sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard on special duty, 3 other sailors, and an undetermined number of civilians, including the wives and families of some of the men stationed at the depot.

WISP OF SMOKE FIRST SEEN.

Describing the disaster, he said: "At 5:25 p. m. I was sitting in my quarters with my wife, when the fire alarm sounded. Some one had seen a wisp of smoke coming from a magazine containing T. N. T. depth charges. I got into my car and drove toward the magazine.

3 HURT IN STORM ENDING HEAT WAVE: 3 ARE PROSTRATED

Violent, but Brief Wind Fells Trees and Blows In Windows.

MANY MIRACULOUS ESCAPES REPORTED

Temperature Will Rise Again
Tomorrow, the Weather Forecaster Says.

Thousands of persons sought relief from the heat in nearby summer resorts and amusement parks. Down-town streets were almost deserted by pedestrians.

The storm which broke the heat wave smashed it with a quickness that was almost record breaking. The mercury in the thermometer at the weather bureau fell 27 degrees, from 98 to 71 degrees in the half hour from 5:50 to 6:20 o'clock. After the storm the temperature rose again slightly but to nothing like its former peak.

Cooler Weather Today.

The heat wave was definitely broken by the storm, the United States weather bureau said. Things will be partly cloudy and cooler with the drop in temperature continuing tonight. Tomorrow will be fair with a slightly rising temperature, but there is now no prospect of a return of the high temperatures in which the city has sweated for the last two days, the forecaster said.

Yesterday was the hottest day Washington has had since early in June of last year, the weather bureau officially recording a maximum temperature of 99 degrees at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Only two cities in the eastern section of the country reported higher temperatures, Raleigh and Charlotte, N. C., reporting a high temperature of 100 and 102 degrees respectively.

Baltimore suffered yesterday with a maximum of 98 degrees. The break in the heat wave which enveloped Washington and other sections east of the Rocky mountains, however, did not affect another heat wave on the Pacific coast where Washington and Oregon report record high temperatures. Portland, Ore., reported 104 degrees and Roseburg, Ore., reported a temperature of 106, the highest temperature in the history of that section of the State.

Although the wind instrument at the weather bureau reported a velocity of only 33 miles an hour a much higher velocity tore things up in other localities. All of the parks in the city suffered broken trees and shrubbery.

Tree Misses a Woman.

A heavy limb torn from a tree in front of the Department of Justice narrowly missed a woman hurrying along under an umbrella. Startled, the woman ran up the street through the downpour.

The Rev. A. H. Zimmerman and his dog Ben, watched freaks of the storm from a construction car on the Cushing Construction Co. on I. near Thirtieth street northwest. Several persons on the corner escaped injury from falling trees and limbs only by racing.

Trees Crash on Autos.

The wind tore a heavy limb from one tree and whirled it high in the air, close to the top of an apartment house. It twisted as it fell and an unidentified person dodged back and forth as the limb twisted and turned as if some evil fate had determined it should find a victim.

Another man just left his parked automobile on I street, between Twelfth and Thirtieth streets, when a tree crashed on it. Another tree crashed between two automobiles, in which there were six persons, a short distance north of Thirtieth street.

The wind tore the roof from the home of Alfred Ambrose, at 1819 A street southeast. Mr. Ambrose, an engraver employed by the Linman Engraving Co., hurried home but his family was uninjured.

Dodges Falling Trees.

K. F. Griffin, accompanied by his wife and two children was driving on Thirtieth street, near K, when a tree crashed just in front of his automobile. Stopping, he started back, when another fell just behind him.

A young man and young woman narrowly missed injury when their automobile was struck by a heavy tree limb at Seventeenth and L streets northwest.

A chimney on the Treasury Department was blown down by the wind, but the bricks fell on the Treasury Department roof and no one was injured.

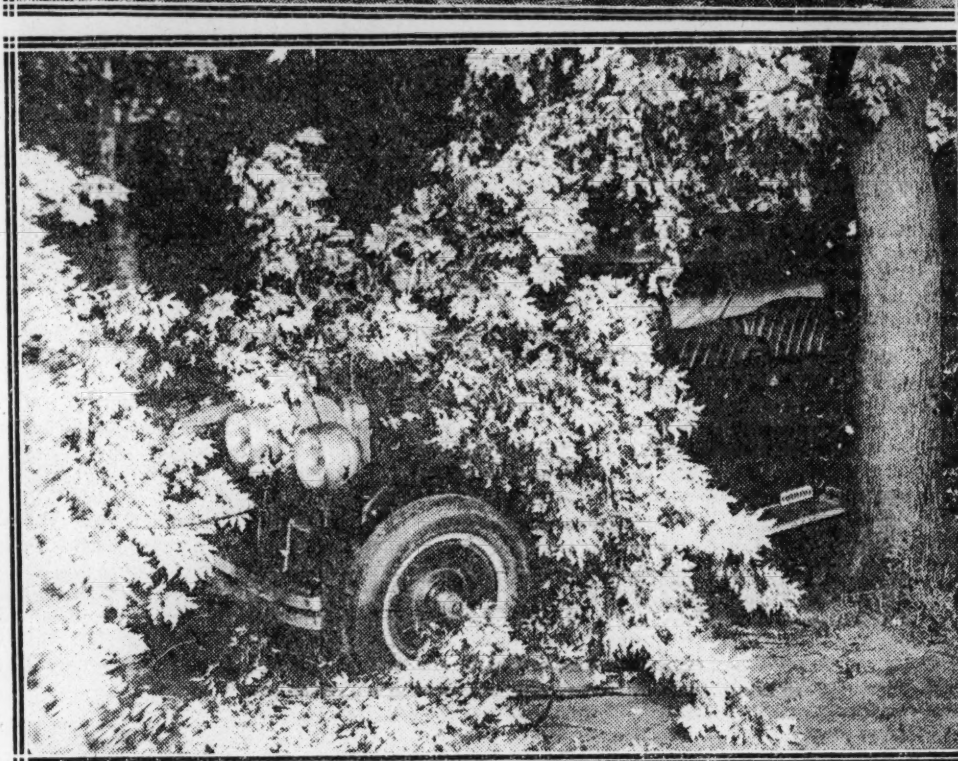

Leslie Walker, 20 years old, 1223 M street northwest, was saved from injury by his liking for playing his new saxophone. Mr. Walker was about to leave his home and drive downtown, bring home his mother, but he delayed five minutes to play a few more notes. As he started to leave his home a tree crashed on his automobile parked in front of his home.

Another Auto Crushed.

B. H. Goldstein's caution cost him a damaged automobile. Mr. Goldstein is manager of the Askins clothing store, 703 Seventh street northwest. He had parked his automobile across the street just in time for a large sign, blown from the Bert clothing shop at 705 Seventh street, to crash through the roof of the sedan. Mr. Goldstein was not injured. The sign's fall smashed two plate glass windows in the Morris Hardware store.

The Seventh street shopping district from Pennsylvania avenue to K street was hard hit by the storm. Two windows were broken at Goldenberg's, the show windows of the McCrory Five and Ten cent

ONE ESCAPES, ANOTHER HURT AS TREES HIT AUTOS

Upper—Leslie Walker, about to go for his mother, stayed in his home, 1223 M street northwest, to play his saxophone for five minutes more and consequently missed injury when the storm crashed down a big tree on his automobile parked in front of his home. store at Seventh and I streets were blown out, as was also the plate glass show window of Stewart's women's wear shop at 806 Seventh street.

Store Sign Is Missing.

The United Cigar store window at Ninth and F streets was blown out, strewn the sidewalk with watches, cameras, clocks, cigarettes and cigars. A 50-by-4-foot sign on top of the Palace laundry was blown away, and could not be found last night. A piece of tin blown by the wind narrowly missed two men emerging from a lunchroom at Ninth and F streets.

George D. Miller, of 812 Sixth street northwest, assistant manager of the damaged McCrory store, had a narrow escape when two trees fell beside his car, parked in front of his home. The trees fell one in front and one in back, and did not injure the car. A giant tree at Seventh and F streets fell upon a parked car and damaged it slightly.

Tree Near Church Felled.

A touring car parked at Ninth and F streets, bearing a Maryland license, had its top blown off by the storm. The owner was enjoying a movie, oblivious of the storm. Another large tree fell beside the Calvary Baptist church, at Eighth and H streets and blocked traffic on H street.

Motorists from the outskirts of the city reported that many trees had been blown down on the outlying roads leading into the city.

Several telegraph poles and light wires were down, they said. A traffic policeman stationed at Seventh and F streets was unable to run to shelter of the sidewalk when the wind became so strong he could not battle against it.

Hotel Lobby Nearly Wrecked.

The suddenness with which the storm broke nearly wrecked the lobby of the Willard hotel. Papers were blown about and the heavy floor lamps about it and along Peacock Alley were nearly blown over before the doors could be shut.

When the Rev. Albert Zimmerman returned to his home at Thirtieth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast after the storm he found the windows of his library blown out and his books and papers wet and scattered about.

An automobile parked at Thirtieth and Euclid streets northwest was smashed by a tree blown on it. Two hundred telephone lines were put out of commission, the Potomac Telephone Co. reported. This damage was not excessive, company officers said, and would cause no serious inconvenience to subscribers.

Some of the telegraph lines of the Western Union Telegraph Co. were broken between Washington and Baltimore, and some of those of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Co., between Washington and Richmond, were broken, but in neither case was communication interrupted.

The automobile of Elmer Spencer, 1232 Twenty-eighth street northwest, and another, parked at Thirtieth and Euclid streets northwest, were smashed by trees blown on them.

Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parks in the District, made a tour of inspection immediately after the storm stopped.

Virtually all of the damage caused by the storm, Lanham said, was centered in the section bounded by Pennsylvania avenue and Florida avenue and New Jersey avenue and Washington circle.

A severe thunderstorm, accompanied by a deluge of rain caused a washout which derailed a locomotive on a 24-hour run from St. Albans, Vt., and the engineer was scalded to death. At Northfield lightning struck and destroyed a house.

A man and a boy were drowned near Poughkeepsie when they sought relief from the heat in the water. Two other men were drowned at Albany and Cohoes, N. Y.

Baltimore, Md., July 10 (By A. P.).—With the temperature reaching 98 degrees in mid-afternoon, after a steady rise from a 24-hour minimum of 77 at 6 o'clock this morning, Maryland steamed in its hottest weather of the summer to date. The humidity stood at 66.

One death, that of a Baltimore copper plant worker who, physicians said, overdressed in ice water, was recorded.

Heat Wave Swept to Sea,

But Another Is on Way

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—

The season's first heat wave is being swept out to sea by a wave of cooler weather 30 to 40 degrees lower than the middle west peak of 90.

Two days of cool weather were promised tonight by the forecaster, but he added that another warm spell is collecting on the Pacific slope, which may reach the central West by Wednesday.

The tornado which took four lives in Michigan Friday evening, swept down the St. Lawrence valley to bring thundershowers and relief to northern New England.

The hot spell was broken in the Western wheat belt, after two weeks of temperature in the 90s, by beneficial rains, which almost reached the proportions of a cloudburst at Kansas City, Oklahoma received two inches of rain, Chicago and northern Indiana, an inch and a quarter, and a cloudy day in the upper 50s today gave the corn belt courage to prepare for the next upward surge of the mercury.

Storm Fatal to Woman

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—

A tornado-like storm struck the Bronx tonight, killing one woman, unroofing houses and blowing down trees. Several buildings were struck by lightning and a Ferris wheel in an amusement park was blown over by the gale.

The storm spent itself after half an hour. Mrs. Betty Feltman, 34 years old, was fatally injured when a small automobile in which she was riding with her husband was blown across the slippery pavement into the path of a large truck. The car was demolished. Mr. Feltman escaped uninjured.

The East, sweltered today in a Turkish-bath atmosphere that caused eight deaths and numerous prostrations. New York city led the list of fatalities with four deaths when the mercury climbed to 92 degrees late this afternoon.

Philadelphia reported three deaths and a temperature of 96. The other death occurred at Elizabeth, N. J., where unofficial thermometers in exposed places registered 106 degrees.

Relief from torrid heat reached the northern New England coast in the form of an easterly breeze. In Boston the mercury tumbled from 84 early in the forenoon to 64 later in the day.

Electrical storms abated in the New Hampshire and other Northern sections.

A severe thunderstorm, accompanied by a deluge of rain caused a washout which derailed a locomotive on a 24-hour run from St. Albans, Vt., and the engineer was scalded to death. At Northfield lightning struck and destroyed a house.

A man and a boy were drowned near Poughkeepsie when they sought relief from the heat in the water. Two other men were drowned at Albany and Cohoes, N. Y.

Baltimore, Md., July 10 (By A. P.).—With the temperature reaching 98 degrees in mid-afternoon, after a steady rise from a 24-hour minimum of 77 at 6 o'clock this morning, Maryland steamed in its hottest weather of the summer to date. The humidity stood at 66.

One death, that of a Baltimore copper plant worker who, physicians said, overdressed in ice water, was recorded.

Heat Wave Swept to Sea,

But Another Is on Way

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—

The season's first heat wave is being swept out to sea by a wave of cooler weather 30 to 40 degrees lower than the middle west peak of 90.

Two days of cool weather were promised tonight by the forecaster, but he added that another warm spell is collecting on the Pacific slope, which may reach the central West by Wednesday.

The tornado which took four lives in Michigan Friday evening, swept down the St. Lawrence valley to bring thundershowers and relief to northern New England.

The hot spell was broken in the Western wheat belt, after two weeks of temperature in the 90s, by beneficial rains, which almost reached the proportions of a cloudburst at Kansas City, Oklahoma received two inches of rain, Chicago and northern Indiana, an inch and a quarter, and a cloudy day in the upper 50s today gave the corn belt courage to prepare for the next upward surge of the mercury.

$13,500,000 SCHOOL BUDGET IS APPROVED BY CITY FEDERATION

James G. Yaden, Spokesman, Takes Issue With Citizens Council.

DISTRICT HEADS UPHELD IN INCREASING ESTIMATES

$12,000,000 Called Insufficient to Assure Building Program, He Says.

James G. Yaden, chairman of the committee on education of the Federation of Citizens Associations and president of the District of Columbia Public School association, has lined up with the District commissioners against the citizens advisory council in the matter of suggested appropriations for school purposes in the 1928 budget.

This was conveyed to the commissioners in a letter received by them from Mr. Yaden yesterday. Mr. Yaden, spokesman for the federation in school matters, has been one of the avowed friends of the council and took the lead recently in quelling criticisms of that body by citizens associations affiliated with the federation.

He said in his letter that the limit of $13,500,000 recommended for 1928 public school appropriations by the council would defeat the five-year school building program, which, he asserted, has the support of not less than 85 per cent of the people of the District. Mr. Yaden's letter, in part, follows:

Approves Action, He Says.

"I take this opportunity of advising you that I approve of your action, as represented in the public press, in fixing a tentative estimate for public schools of $13,500,000, instead of $12,000,000, as suggested by the citizens advisory council. "My objection to the estimate of the council is that they allow only $3,668,000 for the building program of public schools for the next year and of that sum only $2,500,000 is suggested for actual building operations. This, I feel reasonably sure, would only be sufficient to continue buildings already under contract.

"At least 85 or 90 per cent of the people of the District of Columbia want to see the five-year building program carried out and it is not possible if only $2,500,000 was appropriated next year for buildings.

Feels Certain of Support.

"I am quite sure that the Federation of Citizens Associations, as well as the 46 organizations composing it, will approve of your tentative estimates rather than those of the citizens advisory council and in my judgment the residents of the District as a whole will applaud your action in preference to that of the council on this item."

The council will meet tomorrow night to begin a more detailed study of the District departmental estimates.

COOLIDGE WILL TAKE

Police are certain to figure in the coming days at White Pine camp. The very fact that the President repeated his laudation of Congress is accepted as indicative of the intention of the administration to take some active part in the fall campaign.

President Coolidge is already studying the political situation. It was at his suggestion that former Gov. Stickney withdrew as a candidate for United States senator in Vermont. Although Mr. Stickney is a relative of Mr. Coolidge, the latter at no time favored his entering the political field. Mr. Stickney finding that the President would not support him again left the field.

Reports that it was because Mr. Stickney feared defeat would injure the prestige of the President are denied. It was said here he retired because President Coolidge and the Republican national committee would not support him against Senator Dale.

President Coolidge is expected to be active in the coming campaign.

May Fight for Butler.

If he does go into any congressional elections, the most likely one will be the fight in Massachusetts between Senator Butler and former Senator Walsh.

President Coolidge is a resident of the Bay State. He can not be accused of interfering there as an outsider. Senator Butler managed his campaign and has been regarded as his spokesman in the upper house.

But as yet, the President has given no hint that he will take up Mr. Butler's battle any more than he will wage a fight for Senator Wadsworth, in New York.

Electric Storm Darkens House.

White Pine camp was besieged by a heavy rain and electric storm early this morning, which put the powerhouses furnishing electricity to the camp out of business. The President and Mrs. Coolidge's bedrooms were in darkness this morning and the camp grounds presented a doleful appearance, with the rain and swampy places—breeding places for mosquitoes—flooded with rain.

The sun shown this morning for the first time about three hours, since the White House was established Wednesday. It had rained every day, and on most days continuously. This has not made living in the woods any too comfortable, especially when the rain brings an army of mosquitoes.

Between rainstorms this morning, while the sun was resplendent, President Coolidge tried his hand at casting for pike in Lake Ogeed.

Before his arm grew tired the rain

14 ZONING REQUESTS WILL BE SETTLED AT HEARING JULY 22

Changes in Present Areas Are to Be Brought Before Commission Meeting.

BUILDERS WILL SEEK NEW CLASSIFICATION

Different Assignments to Be Asked for Northwest and Southeast Sections.

Fourteen requests for changes in zoning will come before the District zoning commission in public hearing July 22, beginning at 10 a. m. They include three large items involving important real estate operations.

One concern wishes to build semidetached houses on property in North Cleveland park, bounded by Upton, Thirty-sixth, Thirty-eighth, Warren and Alton streets, Reno road and Wisconsin avenue northwest, and has asked to have that territory changed from a restricted to A area.

A similar change is sought as to property bounded by Rock Creek park, Woodley road and Twenty-eighth and Overt streets northwest, to permit erection of apartment houses. Two parcels north of Reservoir road and east of Foxall road northwest are up for rezoning from A restricted to B restricted area, to permit extension of the Foxall village development in row houses.

Many Changes Asked.

The other items coming up for consideration in the northwest section of the city are as follows:

North side of D street between Third and Fourth streets, 303 to 305 P street inclusive, one-third of the lot at 722 Eighteenth street, rear of southeast corner of Georgia avenue and Gallatin street, and 1407 Thirty-fifth street, residential to first commercial; south side of L street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, first to second commercial.

In the southeast section the following changes will be considered: Northeast corner of Seventeenth and A streets, north side of B street from Eighteenth street to the next alley east and 538 First street, residential to first commercial.

It is proposed to change the east side of Fifteenth street northeast, between Isherwood and E streets and the south side of Irving street northeast, from Eighth street to the B. & O. railroad tracks from second commercial to industrial area.

Prisoner Twice
Escapes; Retaken

After escaping from the prisoners' cell at police court, where he was awaiting trial, Bertrand J. Murray, colored, 18 years old, was again taken into custody yesterday while in hiding at his home, 1503 Ninth street northwest, by Detectives Connors and Jett.

Police say this was Murray's second escape in three days, he having broken jail Thursday at Hammond, N. J., where he was arrested on an automobile larceny charge. He was recaptured in an adjoining wood.

Smoke Causes Fire Scare.

Smoke coming from the basement window of the French embassy, 2416 Sixteenth street northwest, led a passerby to call out fire apparatus, blocking traffic on Sixteenth street for several minutes yesterday. The smoke was caused by an employee burning papers in the furnace of the embassy.

Mrs. Ward Gets Divorce.

Mrs. Mollie L. Ward, 1740 Euclid street northwest, was awarded an interlocutory decree for absolute divorce yesterday, by Justice Smith in equity court, against Joseph D. Ward. She was married January 10, 1909. She is allowed $44 a month alimony, and Ward is assessed counsel fees and court costs.

Woman Burned by Acid.

Lillian Bowie, colored, 35 years old, 26 Benjamin place northwest, was treated at Emergency hospital yesterday for burns on the face and breast, caused, police say, by carbolic acid taken with suicidal intent. The bottle containing the acid was knocked from her hand by a companion.

Elevator Victim Improved.

Miss Mary Agnes O'Connell, thought to have been fatally injured when she was crushed by an automobile elevator at the Library of Congress Friday, showed decided improvement yesterday. Physicians say there is a chance for her recovery.

Mrs. Brandt Leaves $25,000.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brandt, who died June 18, left an estate valued at more than $25,000, according to the petition for letters testamentary, filed yesterday in probate court by her son, Arthur A. Brandt, and her daughter, Annabelle Brandt. The estate includes the premises at 1103 Clifton street northwest.

descended and he returned to shelter without landing his second fish. Many trout flies were resold today by President Coolidge, and the mails report the coming of fishing rods and other paraphernalia.

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, returning here today, brought news that he, like the President, had caught a fish—a pickerel, hooked at Kennebunkport, Me., where he passed several days at the home of Kenneth L. Roberts. After August 1, he will have ten days of fishing at the ranch of Col. A. E. Humphreys in Colorado.

LAST OF 18 DEAD IN S-51 IDENTIFIED; 7 ARE YET MISSING

Three Officers, Including the Commander of Vessel, Unaccounted For.

BODIES OF THESE MEN MAY NEVER BE FOUND

Court of Inquiry is Expected to Take Up Sinking of Submarine Monday.

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—The last of the dead taken from the submarine S-51 were identified today as thousands of civilians journeyed to Brooklyn navy yard to view the wrecked undersea craft in which the men perished.

The identifications accounted for all but seven of the crew of the submarine that was rammed and sunk off Block Island last September. Thirty-six men were on the vessel at the time of the prow of the Savannah Line steamer City of Rome crashed into her. Three were rescued. Eighteen were taken from the S-51 while she was in dry dock at Brooklyn navy yard. Eight were taken from the wreck while it was on the ocean floor.

Of the seven missing when the final roll call was made, no trace ever may be found, navy officers said. Three of the men were officers, among them Lieut. R. H. Dohson, commander of the S-51, who was last seen on the bridge as the vessel sank.

Others Unaccounted For.

Those unaccounted for, besides Lieut. Dohson, are Lieut. Harlow M. Pine, Lieut. T. A. Glass, Walter E. Lawton, electrician's mate; Oscar J. Millot, fireman; Ralph E. Cassidy, gunner's mate, and Brady D. Lindsay, engineer.

The eight identified today were: James Marland Schofield, radio man first class, Bridgeport, Conn.; Herbert Eadelman Snyder, chief signalman, Philadelphia.

Ryde Firm, motor machinist's mate, first class, Klein, Mont.; Augustus Alexander Smith, torpedo man, first class, Milton, Fla.; Frank Archibald Shea, electrician's mate, first class, Gloucester, Mass.

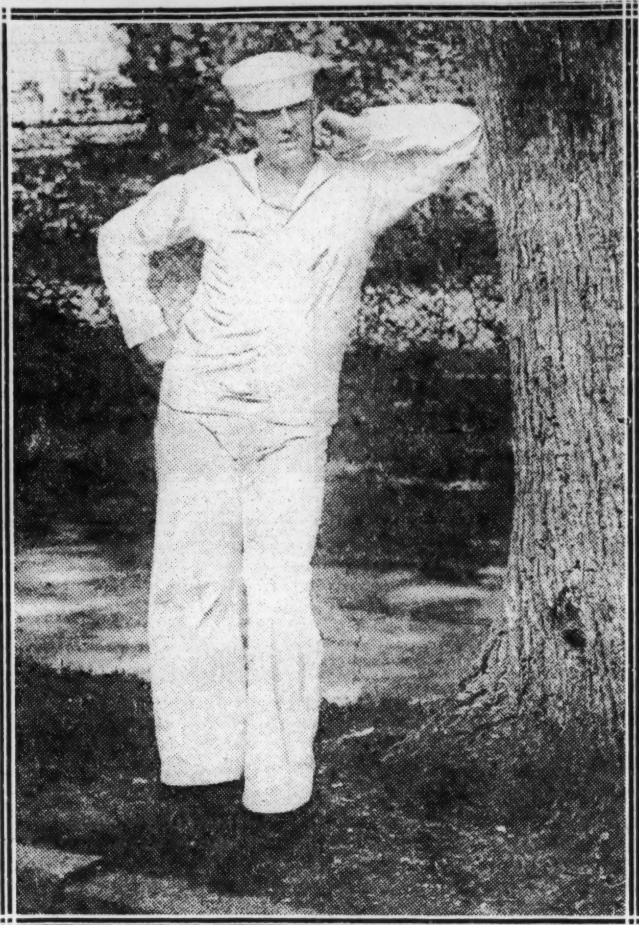

John Joseph Sheehan, motor machinist's mate, first class, Groton, Conn.; Franklin P. James, chief machinist's mate, Stratford, Conn.; Stephen Hartley Triffitt, torpedo man, Pawtucket, R. I.

Ten were identified yesterday.

Court is Adjourned.

The court of inquiry that had been investigating the cause of the S-51 going aground in East river, while being towed to the navy yard last Wednesday, adjourned until Monday. It is expected to take up investigation of the sinking of the Three to be Buried Here.

Bodies of Lieut. F. D. Foster, Nutley, N. J.; Coxswain Harry Dick Elser, Columbus, Ohio, and Fireman Charles Carroll Thomas, Chillicothe, Ill., S-51 victims, will be buried at Arlington National cemetery, in the afternoon. The Navy Department announced yesterday. While there are requests that four more bodies be buried at Arlington, the Navy Department is withholding announcement regarding these pending final identification of all bodies.

DURKIN, SENTENCED TO 35 YEARS, FACES NEW MURDER TRIAL

State Plans to Push Charge of Killing H. I. Gray, Police Sergeant.

"MIGHT BETTER HANG ME," SAYS PRISONER

Slayer's Counsel Will Ask for a New Hearing and May Take Appeal.

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—While Martin J. Durkin pondered in his cell today a prison sentence of 35 years, imposed by a jury which found him guilty of murder for the killing of Edwin C. Shanahan, a Federal agent, assistant State's attorneys moved to put the youth again in jeopardy of the death penalty which the jurors declined to inflict for the Shanahan shooting.

An indictment charging Durkin with the murder of Harold I. Gray, a police sergeant, killed in an effort to trap the fugitive after the Shanahan killing, is on the court calendar and may be called for trial, prosecutors said, in a new effort to get a verdict of death by hanging.

The jury which found Durkin guilty of Shanahan's murder early today, had little difficulty in agreeing on his guilt, but deliberated for six hours on the penalty before compromising on the 35-year term. Only two jurors wanted Durkin hanged.

State Is Disappointed.

The Gray case has been regarded as less sound than the Shanahan indictment by several prosecutors, but the State's admitted disappointment in failure to win at least a life-imprisonment verdict resulted in conferences today looking to the demanding of the death penalty for the Gray shooting.

Gray was slain last fall, a few weeks after the Shanahan killing, when Durkin, who had fled Eastward returned to the city and the police attempted to ambush him at the home of Lloyd Austin, an uncle of Betty Andrews Werner. Betty was preparing to flee with him to California. The plans to trap Durkin, however, Austin and Gray were killed in the shooting, and Durkin himself was wounded in the arm.

It was generally agreed that Austin was killed by cross-fire of the officers, but the State charges that a bullet from Durkin's gun brought death to Gray.

Counsel Seeks Appeal.

Durkin may still find a legal channel through which to evade the prison sentence imposed today, for his attorneys will argue a motion next Saturday for a new trial, and will appeal to the State supreme court if that is denied. His hopes of acquittal was mirrored in a letter to a girl acquaintance who had not come into the spotlight of Durkin's lawyers until Capt. George F. Weidling, of the Cook county jail, revealed an intercepted letter from Durkin to the girl.

Durkin said, after today's verdict, that he did not get justice. "I was tried for everything but murder," he declared. "It's a fine state of affairs when a man can't use a revolver to protect himself."

Durkin expressed a dread of prison life. "They should have hanged me, instead," he told questioners when asked what he thought of 35 years behind the bars.

Duggan at Camocin, Brazil.

Camocin, Brazil, July 10 (By A. P.).—Bernardo Duggan, Argentine sportsman, who is flying from New York to Buenos Aires, arrived here shortly before noon today. He left Maranhao early this morning. Maranhao is about 300 miles from Camocin.

The lucky yeoman is 25 years old, and has been in the navy eight years. After the accident he left the service for a time, but returned after a month. He "missed the gang too much," he explained.

There were two other men on leave and one man in the hospital on September 25, the day on which the S-51 embarked from the New London, Conn., submarine base on its fatal voyage. The boat was rammed by the City of Rome off Block Island that night.

Ship With Alcohol Released by U. S.

Boston, July 10 (By A. P.).—United States Attorney Harold P. Williams today ordered the release from custody of the British schooner Sunner, seized off Cape Cod Wednesday with a cargo of 2,500 cases of alcohol, when it was found that there was no legal evidence for holding her.

Counsel for the schooner declared that the craft was nearly 11 miles from shore at the time of the seizure; that she had had no contact with the shore, and that she had no intention of landing cargo in this country. The Sunner was towed out of the harbor today to resume her voyage to Havana.

SCORES DIE IN DISASTER AT NAVAL AMMUNITION DEPOT

FIRE AND BLASTS ARE THREATENING THE ARMY PLANT

When I was about 200 feet from it there was a terrific explosion, which wrecked my car and threw me out of it."

There was nothing to do but run before the rain of shells which followed as magazine after magazine blew up. Capt. Dowling made his way to Dover, where he was treated for cuts on the face, and where his wife was confined to a hospital with minor injuries.

INHABITANTS ORDERED OUT.

Morristown, N. J., July 10 (By A. P.).—Following the explosion of the magazines at the United States naval arsenal at Lake Denmark, near here, inhabitants of nearby towns were ordered out.

About twenty refugees from adjoining towns arrived here tonight and meager reports from Dover, which is several miles from the scene, stated that 50 persons were in the general hospital. One of these, a Mrs. Feeley, died of injuries.

FOLLOWS ELECTRICAL STORM.

The explosions were caused by fire at the naval arsenal which followed an electrical storm. Adjoining the naval arsenal are the army magazines of the Picatinny arsenal. Reverberations were heard in Orange, about 30 miles away.

Refugees said that scores of ambulances, with their complement of doctors and nurses were being held within about a mile of the danger zone, waiting for the explosions to subside before venturing into the two arsenal reservations.

Most of the refugees were from Rockaway and Mount Hope, about 2 miles from the arsenal.

ARSENALS A MILE APART.

The arsenals are about a mile from each other and are small communities in themselves.

Residents of Mount Hope and the adjoining town of Rockaway evacuated their homes before their lives were threatened.

Robert Richards, a native of Dover, told friends that an officer had telephoned him from one of the arsenals at about 7:30 o'clock and advised him to move his family out of Dover. Richards said he would leave immediately. Who the officer was and what arsenal he called from could not be learned.

The naval arsenal is located on Lake Denmark, a small body of water about seven miles northwest of Dover. Mount Hope, with a population of close to 1,000 was about two miles southwest of the plant. The shells bombarded Mount Hope, a few landing in the army arsenal at Picatinny and setting off the powder there.

Buildings in Rockaway, about five miles southwest of the arsenals, were damaged by the concussion of the explosions. No shells were reported to have landed there, but several houses crumbled when the major explosions occurred.

FOUR MAJOR EXPLOSIONS OCCUR.

The men and officers reported missing made up the detachments stationed at the Lake Denmark plant. Laborers who worked at both places lived in Rockaway and Mount Hope.

The lightning struck at the naval reservation shortly after 5 o'clock and that was followed almost instantly by a major explosion. At approximately half hour intervals after that, three other major explosions were heard. Lesser explosions occurred at more frequent intervals. Persons familiar with the naval plant believed all the magazines had blown up.

NAVY DEPARTMENT ADVISED.

(By the Associated Press).

The Navy Department was advised last night that the naval ammunition depot at Lake Denmark, Dover, N. J., had been struck by lightning and that approximately two-thirds of the personnel was missing.

The depot was struck by lightning at 4 p. m. First official reports did not reach the Navy Department for several hours, and one of the first messages was garbled.

Informal reports that more than 100 marines had been killed, Brig. Gen. Dion Williams, assistant to Maj. Gen. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps, said that not that many marines were stationed at the depot as guards.

CAPT. DOWLING INJURED.

A later message, from Rear Admiral Plunkett, Commandant of the Third Naval District, at New York, said that Capt. O. C. Dowling, in command at the depot, had been injured about the legs.

Admiral Plunkett said the depot had been struck by lightning at 4:30 p. m., and had been completely wiped out. The number of dead and injured was not known, he advised the department, adding that medical aid and a marine guard had been sent to the scene.

At 9 p. m. the Navy Department was advised that explosions were still occurring at the depot, and that the fire department was unable to cope with the situation.

Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams, chief of army ordnance, and Brig. C. L. Ruggles, assistant chief, prepared to leave at once for the army arsenal at Picatinny to survey the situation.

The army arsenal, Ruggles said, contains approximately 10 per cent of the army's stores of ammunition. The 700 workmen employed there, he added, had quit work at noon and most of them had gone to their homes in nearby towns. There were only half a dozen soldiers and a dozen officers stationed on the reservation along with three superintendents and less than a dozen guards.

A check up of the personnel at the navy depot revealed that 59 marines, 1 captain of marines, 5 naval officers, 4 men of the naval hospital unit, and 20 to 30 civilians were on duty there.

Considerable high explosives were in storage, part of it of a "death charge" for them.

Late at night the department was advised that Lieut. Comdr. Brown, previously reported killed, was alive, although it was not established whether he had been injured.

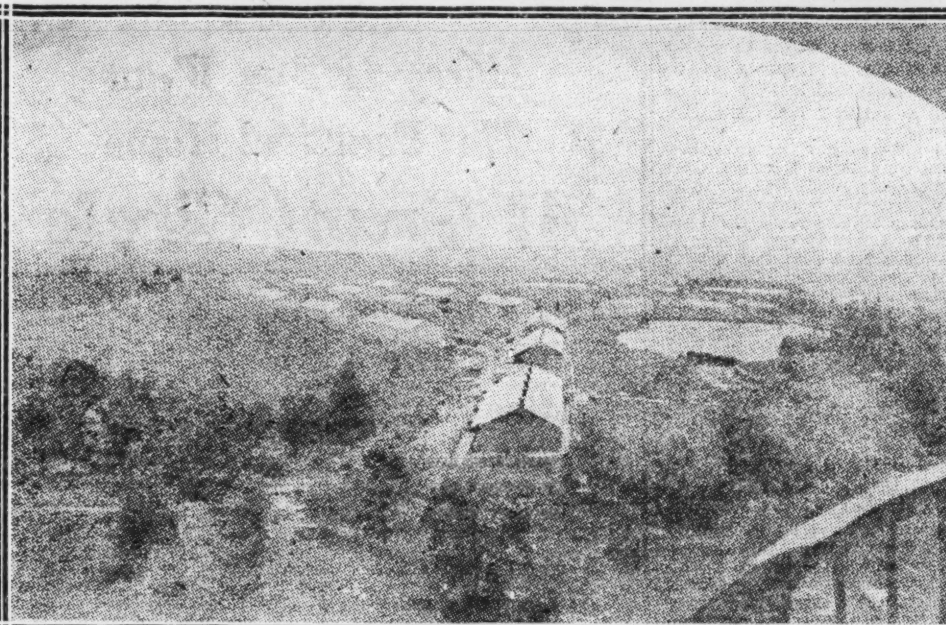

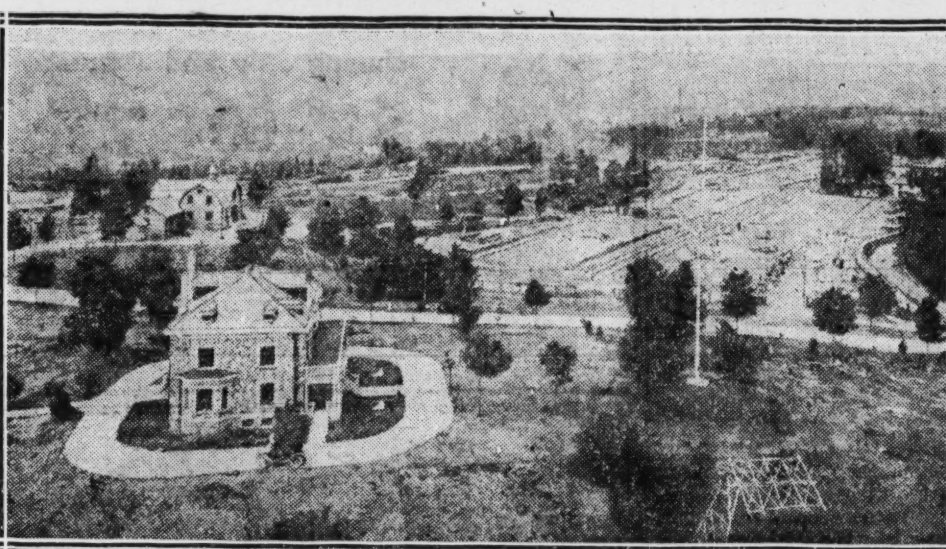

FIRE STARTS AT ARMY PLANT.

Additional advice to Gen. Ruggles from Picatinny arsenal said that fire had broken out there in gun cotton, stored in boxes outside the warehouses there, but that it was not believed explosions would result. While at that time none of the ammunition at Picatinny had exploded, projectiles had been falling from the nearby naval depot, and all persons were keeping clear of the army magazine for fear explosions would occur.

Gen. Ruggles was informed that considerable damage had been done to buildings on the army reservation, some of them having been wrecked. He also told that no estimate could be made on the loss of life or property damage as no one could get near the danger zone.

Only one death, that of a woman, had been definitely established, although it was believed many had been killed, and it was estimated that at least 20 or 30 persons had been injured.

PICATINNY PARTLY DEMOLISHED.

Capt. Dowling, reporting by telephone, said that the naval arsenal was on fire from end to end and had been demolished and that the Picatinny arsenal also was partly demolished.

Rear Admiral Plunkett advised the Navy Department just before midnight that a relief detachment made up of three medical officers, seventeen men of the Naval hospital, two marine officers and 46 marines were en route with medical supplies to Lake Denmark from New York. He said also that an ambulance, two medical officers, six special medical corps men and surgical supplies had been dispatched from Picatinny.

He said he was without advice as to the casualties.

American Red Cross headquarters announced that it had sent Guy Storey, director of camp activities at Governors Island, N. Y., to the scene of the disaster to see what the national organization could do to supplement the relief work of local Red Cross units.

Also Miss Alice Brock, field representative, had been ordered to West Morris, N. J., to cooperate with the Red Cross chapter there in relief activities.

"Like Touch of Hell," Says Marine, Badly Hurt, Found Running on Road

Paterson, N. J., July 10 (By A. P.).—Marine Private James M. Weaver, 19, of Birmingham, Ala., who with two other marines was found running on a mountain road near Oak Ridge after the arsenal explosion today, was brought to Peterson General hospital by Harry Barkley, a motor vehicle inspector.

The upper portion of Weaver's body was a mass of cuts and bruises and about his bleeding feet was wrapped the remnants of a shirt. The other marines did not appear to be seriously injured. Barkley said, and he left them by the roadside after calming them.

Weaver told physicians that he had just returned from a week-end leave and was in the act of changing his clothing when fire call was sounded. The blaze was believed to be trivial, and he with five or six others responded with a hose cart.

He did not recall what building was on fire, but when they got into action the first of the magazines blew up. He saw his companions hurled 15 feet in the air. The concussion tore the rubber boots from one of the marines, he said.

When he recovered sufficiently from the shock, he said, he joined the other two and they began running. All he remembered of the rest, he said, was that it "felt like a touch of hell."

Weaver had no idea of how many men were on leave, but he believed many escaped the catastrophe because it occurred during the week-end.

Washington Woman In List of Injured

First Serg. Bernie Burdick, the only known Washington man in the disaster, at the time of his enlistment lived at 743 Seventh street southeast. Approximately a year ago he was transferred from service in this city to Lake Denmark, N. J. With him went his wife and small son, Lawrence.

Serg. Burdick had no blood relations living in this city. One of his wife's brothers, Herman Brown, a member of the fire department, lives at 705 East Capitol street.

Mrs. Burdick's name appeared in the list of injured.

METHODISTS ASKED TO BOYCOTT SESQUI

Clergy Urged to Tell Flocks to Keep Away Until Gates Close Sunday.

Philadelphia, July 10 (By A. P.).—A nation wide endeavor to have the Methodists of the United States boycott the sesquicentennial international exposition because its gates are open on Sunday was under way today.

Headed by Bishop Joseph F. Berry, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, the plan calls for sending letters to 4,000 ministers of his denomination, signed by himself and seven other bishops, urging the clergymen to advise their congregations never to go near the exposition as long as it remains open on Sunday.

At the conclusion of the meeting at which other clergymen, representatives of church organizations, and several business men, denounced the Sunday sesqui idea, a resolution was adopted urging the directors to close the exposition on Sunday.

MILLIONS OF POUNDS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES AT NEARBY ARSENAL

Picatinny, Which Adjoins Lake Denmark, Important Army Storage Point.

TNT AND GUN COTTON ARE KEPT AT PLANT

Powder Manufactured There, Along With Loading of Bombs and Shells.

Picatinny arsenal, which adjoins the Lake Denmark naval arsenal, is the only army ammunition arsenal of the country, and the only arsenal that manufactures gun powder. Brig. Gen. O. L. H. Ruggles, assistant chief of ordnance, explained last night.

Stationed at Picatinny are perhaps 100 magazines, and these range from a distance of a few hundred yards to several hundred yards from the naval depot, the scene of the explosion, Gen. Ruggles said.

Although he did not know the exact amount of the gun powder stored at Picatinny, Gen. Ruggles estimated the quantity at several million pounds. Approximately 10 or 15 per cent of all the powder in the country is stored there, he said.

High Explosives There.

A slightly smaller proportion of the quantity of the high explosives in the country is also stored there. The chief explosives are TNT and explosive D, used in sea coast guns, according to Gen. Ruggles. The total amount is also several million pounds. This includes a quantity of gun cotton for smokeless powder. All the research work of the army in explosives, and experimentation with kinds of explosives, and designs of shells is carried on at Picatinny, Gen. Ruggles explained.

The principal work going on at the arsenal now is the loading of bombs and shells, he said. The amount of gunpowder now manufactured is small—about 700 pounds a day. The arsenal employs about 700 men.

Men Were Not Working.

These men, according to Gen. Ruggles, were not at work when the explosion occurred, since they stop work at noon on Saturdays. The only men there then, he said, were about 12 guards. No soldiers are stationed at the arsenal.

The arsenal comprises several hundred buildings, he said. These are scattered about over a wide range, and are in the immediate vicinity of the naval depot. In fact, the two arsenals are right together. The enormous blaze at the naval depot and the flying shells striking adjoining buildings menaced the thousands of tons of explosives at the army arsenal.

Powder Manufactured There.

The Picatinny arsenal was formerly a depot, just as the naval depot adjoining. It was established about 40 years ago. About 15 years ago, however, according to Gen. Ruggles, it was decided to establish a powder factory there.

After the war the experimental work in explosives and shells was located there, and it was made a base for the loading of shells and bombs.

Gen. Ruggles and Maj. Gen. C. Williams, assistant chief of ordnance, left Washington at midnight for the scene of the explosion.

Radio Takes News Of Blast to Wilbur

Newport, R. I., July 10 (By A. P.).—Wireless messages from the naval radio stations at Lakehurst and the New York navy yard tonight kept Secretary of the Navy Wilbur informed of developments in the Lake Denmark, N. J., naval ammunition disaster.

Secretary Wilbur went aboard the U. S. S. New York today. He had planned to remain aboard for a rest until Thursday. Whether or not the New Jersey disaster had changed his plans could not be learned tonight.

Fire Stopped in 1925 At Picatinny Arsenal

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—An explosion, followed by fire, May 28, 1925, at the Picatinny arsenal, near the naval ammunition depot, where today's explosion occurred, caused the death of one man. The flames, however, were checked before they reached buildings where explosives were stored.

NEW YORK BANKS PLAN TO HAVE NIGHT SHIFTS

Billion-Dollar-a-Day Business Means Two Clearings: 2 A. M. and 10 A. M.

RULE EFFECTIVE AUGUST 1

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—With New York bank clearings—that barometer with which the financial world measures the rise and fall of business activity—running daily around the billion-dollar mark, the big local banks are getting ready to work nights.

No longer will the vast canyons of Wall street be steeped in quiet and darkness after the business day is done. Bright lights will twinkle at night in the 31 member banks of the New York Clearing House while an army of clerks make ready thousands of checks for clearance at 2 o'clock each morning.

So large has become the ebb and flow of the money current that it has been decreed that two bank clearings are necessary to expedite the business. Beginning August 1 all checks received during the course of the day's business up to 3 o'clock must be cleared by 2 a. m., and that all checks coming in by messenger or mail in the night or morning must be in the clearing house for a 10 o'clock clearance.

Wall street is looking for even greater volumes of money to float into the metropolis for the conduct of industry or for deposit for the account of out-of-town banks. Bank clearings for five days this week totaled $5,230,000,000, a gain of about 10 per cent over the same period last year.

Night staffs will have to be organized to handle the clearings, which must be at the clearing house promptly at 2 o'clock in the morning. The night staffs will be recruited from the large number of clerks that are now required to arrange for the clearings before 10 o'clock in the morning.

Bankers are looking to increased business here by reason of the amendment to the clearing house association making it optional with banks to charge for exchange and collection on checks of out-of-town banks. This is expected to draw business from banks of other cities.

DIAMONDS and DIAMONDS

As with all else on sale in the marts of trade, so with diamonds.

They are of varying and contrasting qualities and values.

Some diamonds are fine and perfect.

Others—neglected a little by Nature, possibly, or marred in the cutting—are relatively imperfect and therefore less safe as investments, less attractive in beauty.

We stress, invariably, the importance of considering diamonds from the point of view of their investment value.

Therefore, notwithstanding the fact that fine, perfect diamonds are growing increasingly scarce, we insist upon buying—for the protection of our customers' investments—fine, perfect stones.

It is true that inferior diamonds are plentiful.

It is a fact, moreover, that few prospective purchasers of diamonds are expertly advised on the distinctions that set fine, perfect stones far apart from the diamond of inferior quality.

Yet we are not tempted in even the slightest degree to add stones of inferior grade to our always impressive stocks.

For we are, you know, the largest dealers in diamonds in Washington.

And our diamond business is built upon a growing reputation for safeguarding the diamond expenditures of our patrons.

Our pride in our reputation, our keen concern for the safety of our own investments:

These are your guarantee of satisfaction and of safety when R. Harris & Company counsel you in your diamond purchases.

Nor is quality in diamonds measured, we remind you, by the size and weight of the stone.

Flying Projectiles Prevent the Fire-Fighters From Reaching Flames.

Special to The Washington Post.

Dover, N. J., July 10.—In the series of explosions at Lake Denmark tonight which destroyed the naval ammunition depot and damaged the army arsenal at Picatinny, scores of persons, mostly marines, were killed, and hundreds injured, the barracks and officers' homes surrounding the arsenals, and hundreds of homes within a radius of several miles razed and scores of other buildings more remote from the big supplies of explosives ruined. Property was damaged for thirty miles around and the entire stricken area is under an emergency form of martial law late tonight.

The catastrophe was caused by lightning striking a powder magazine. Blast followed blast as other magazines blew up. The marine barracks, near the concrete munition houses, was swept by fire.

All available ambulances within a radius of 25 miles were rushed to the scene, and like so many ambulances from a battlefield in France, rolled back to hospitals and temporary morgues, filled with dead and wounded.

Hospitals Soon Filled.

Hospitals in several New Jersey towns were soon filled to overflowing. Extra cots were installed. Still the casualties poured in. Many residents, their own homes shattered by the blasts, opened what remained of their houses to the victims.

The navy ammunition depot is seven miles from Dover. A railroad track separates it from the Picatinny army arsenal. A west wind, it was said at 8:30 o'clock, had prevented the flames spreading there.

From the moment the lightning struck one of the magazines, the area was a roaring, seething inferno. Maj. Young, of the Picatinny arsenal, telephoned for aid and withdrew his men from the army barracks. When fire apparatus arrived from surrounding towns the fire fighters were helpless. They could not safely get apparatus within a mile of the scene of the disaster.

Fifty Hurt at Rockaway.

Fifty were reported hurt in Rockaway, N. J., eight miles from the depot. An unoccupied automobile on the road a quarter of a mile from Lake Denmark, was hurled 500 feet across a field.

Ambulance and fire equipment were delayed in their rush to the depot by thousands of curious motorists drawn to the scene. Their cars clogged the roads for miles in all directions.

Panic-stricken residents fled the mining village of Mount Hope, three miles away, believing there was an earthquake. Screaming women, many cut by glass and debris, fled with their children into the fields as their homes tottered and sagged, or collapsed.

Many of the less seriously injured were obliged to reel to safety on foot, so great was the demand for ambulances. Like the walking wounded from the trenches, they tottered, bleeding and broken along the roads and fields, through the sultry night, under the flame-lighted sky.

Major Hurt by Shell.

Maj. Ramsey, United States army, was seriously injured by shell fragments as he helped lead his men from the army barracks. His home, a half mile away, was blown to bits.

Practically every building within a 3-mile radius was damaged. Scores of civilians were injured in their own homes, some seriously by flying glass and falling debris.

The shock of the blast was felt for a radius of 30 miles. A heavy pall of smoke covered a wide area.

Commander Robert Hoch, of the Dover American Legion headquarters, called for volunteers from the membership to go guard and patrol duty and to assist the injured and homeless to obtain relief.

After the blaze, resulting from the explosion, had raged for two hours, the men of the Dover fire department made an heroic attempt to get near the flames. Crouching in their trucks for cover from whistling shells, they worked up to within a half mile of the inferno. More shells burst each moment and fragments whizzed perilously near. Flames roared with renewed vigor and the fire forces were soon forced to retreat in disorder.

Phone Service Fails.

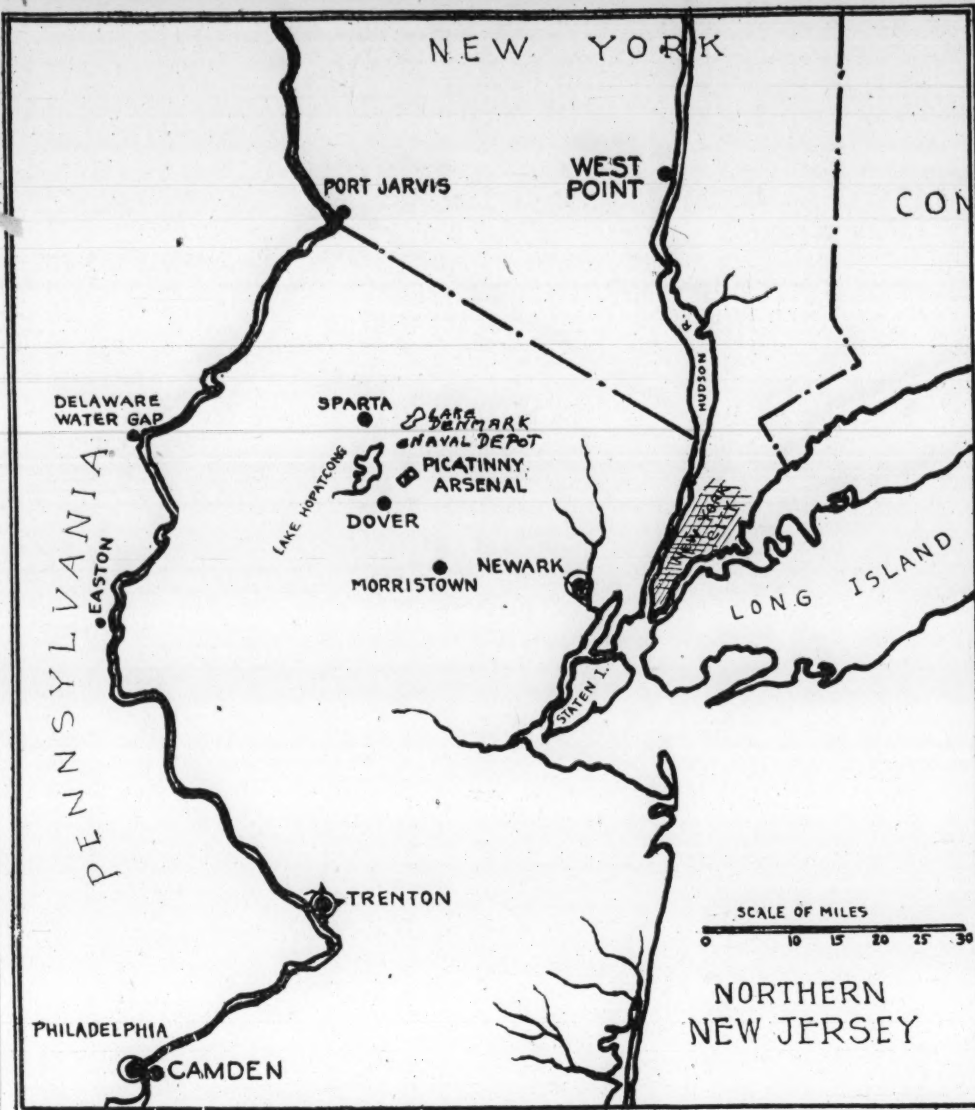

A few minutes after the first call for aid went out the telephone service failed and the stricken depot was cut off from the outside world.

Shortly before 9 o'clock the flames, fed by a new series of shell explosions, shot across the railroad tracks and attacked the great Picatinny army arsenal, previously protected from the fire by a west wind.

The arsenal force had been marched away, and the fire made short work of the deserted barracks. Then it lapped at the arsenal itself, causing fresh terrific explosions. Came a steady roar as the blasts duplicated the havoc wrought in the naval institution. Officers and men stood a mile back and watched helplessly.

At 9:15 p. m. the entire town of Mount Hope was ablaze from shell fire and collapse of houses resulting from the terrific detonations. Many houses were razed also at Dover, Rockaway and Denville. It was understood here that every member of one company of marines at the Lake Denmark naval depot was killed. Calls went out for ambulances and physicians from every section of the State, and Red Cross forces from New York city were asked for.

State police cooperated with military authorities and halted civilian traffic on all roads leading to the scene of disaster. Within a large area the citizenry was in a state of terror.

Like refugees fleeing before an invading army, men, women and children began a frantic retreat when the great magazines of the principal Eastern army arsenal began to let go, one by one.

Large crowds had crept toward the conflagration under the shelter of the army buildings, despite efforts of State and army officers to keep them back.

Projectiles shrieked through the air and fragments from the exploding shells thudded into the earth.

Seven marines, on liberty when the explosions started, were formed into a fire detail on their return. In a desperate charge, they got within 800 feet of the depot gates. A sharp concussion hurled them into a ditch. Cut, bruised, uniforms in tatters, they ran back.

The nearest of all to approach the fire, they said they believed 50 or 60 persons, at least, perished in the barracks.

Two witnesses of the explosion were Max and Henry Mindlin, of East Orange, N. J.

"We were driving in our automobile through the army reservation," they said. "A thunderstorm seemed right on top of us. We saw a big flash of lightning. Then, before the thunder stopped rolling there was a terrible explosion. Our car was overturned, we got up, badly cut. Another blast rolled us into a ditch. We crawled down to Picatinny on our hands and knees with shells shrieking over us."

Dover in a Panic.

Charles Nathan, jr., of Morristown, went through all the towns surrounding the scene of tragedy. In Dover he found the city of 14,000 in a panic. Residents feared that if the main naval arsenal blew up it would wreck the whole community.

Terror reigned also in Hibernia and Morristown. Residents were ordered out of Rockaway, a town of 5,000 population.

RITCHIE DEDICATES CITY CLUB COUNTRY HOME AT LANDOVER

Governor Is Hailed as the Next President at Beaver Dam Exercises.

OPENING IS FEATURED BY SPORTS PROGRAM

Maryland Executive Makes an Attack on Inspectors From Capital Bureaus.

A dream of many years was realized yesterday when the City club formally took over the Beaver Dam Country club at Landover, Md. More than 1,500 men and women attended the dedicatory exercises.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland formally dedicated Beaver Dam as the City club's new suburban home, and at the same time heard himself acclaimed as the next President of the United States.

The Beaver Dam club, which a few years ago was a cow pasture, spreads over 250 acres of Maryland hills. The nine-hole golf course is to be extended to an eighteen-hole course. The clubhouse, once a huge barn, quartering cows, has been converted into a charming colonial mansion.

Athletic Features.

The roar of airplane motors, the crack and whine of golf sticks and flying balls, and the rat-a-tat of trap shooters resounded throughout the morning and afternoon.

W. H. White had the lowest gross score in the golf tournament. He did eighteen holes in 81, which gave him a "first leg" on the Cadillac trophy, donated by Rudolph Jose. To gain permanent possession of the cup, he must win three times. White had a handicap of twelve, which gave him a net score of 69.

Bryn Curtiss, 16 years old, finished with the lowest net score, and his gross was only one behind White. His gross was 82, which, with a handicap of fifteen, gave him a net of 67. He got a first leg on the Dulin & Martin trophy. H. B. Shipley finished with a net of 68, he having had a handicap of 24, and won a pair of golf shoes.

The formal dedication started at 5:30 o'clock when Edward S. Brashers, president of the Beaver Dam club, and Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, president of the City club, made addresses. After this, Mr. Brashers turned over the key of the clubhouse to Gen. Stephan. From now on the two clubs will use Beaver Dam jointly.

Mentioned for Presidency.

Mr. Brashers, president of the Beaver Dam club, was the first to mention Gov. Ritchie and the White House in the same breath. Then Gen. Stephan took up where he left off, and made the flat prediction that Gov. Ritchie would be the next President.

Mr. Brashers, after telling Gov. Ritchie that Maryland was the favorite playground of Washington business men, said: "We want you to come out here often and stay long. The distance is not so great from Annapolis. It is even shorter from the White House."

Gov. Ritchie ducked his head while the White House talk was going on, and later said that if Maryland would refer him to the governor's office he would not care what the nation did.

The Maryland executive predicted that the friendly relationship between Maryland and the District of Columbia would become even stronger as a result of the City club's taking over of Beaver Dam. He praised the centuries-old traditions in Maryland regarding religious freedom and popular government, and then went on to condemn bureaucratic government.

Attacks Inspectors.

In a discussion of personal liberty, Gov. Ritchie made a satirical attack on government inspectors who are worrying the "life out of us every day. The people of Maryland," he said, "believe that Americans are inherently good and don't have to be told how to live by bureaus in Washington. They further believe, he said, that righteousness is a matter of conscience and can't be legislated into the people by Congress or State legislatures."

Gov. Ritchie said he was extremely anxious to have the defense highway finished, and he hoped that the State would be able to build a good road from the Country club to the State road.

Shortly after 3 o'clock a squadron of planes appeared from the north. It was the flying unit of the Twenty-ninth division of the national guard, commanded by Maj. W. D. Tipton.

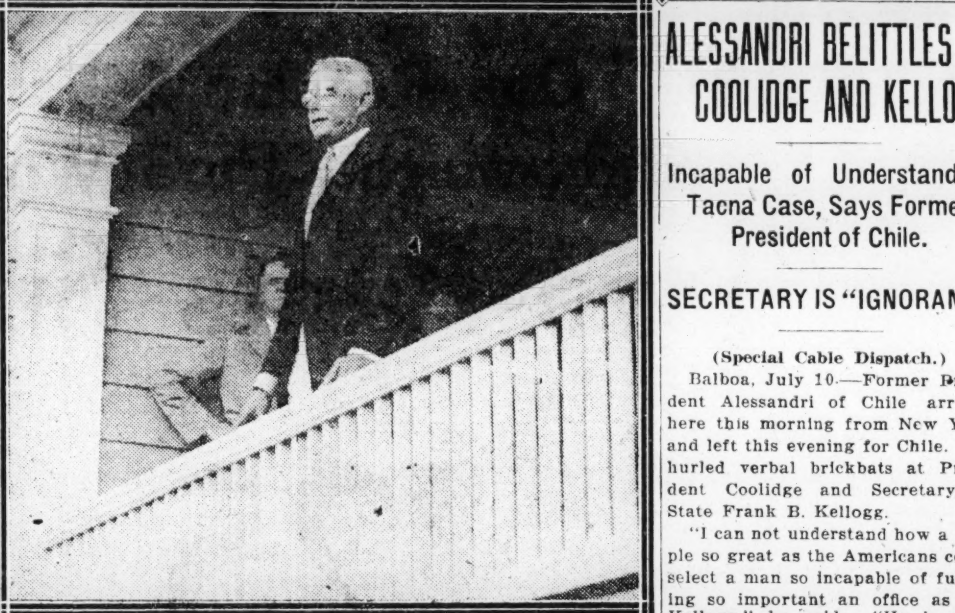

Like drunken swallows, the planes flew over the golf course, dipping and soaring in a variety of thrilling stunts. The golfers below fled from the fairway and gathered in little groups to one side. Only one of the planes landed. The pilot of the plane, Lieut. T. B. Bourne, leaped from his plane and joined in the festivities that marked the dedication. His colleagues returned to Baltimore.

The trap shooting contest, which was staged in a ravine south of the clubhouse, was won by F. H. Constantine, who broke 9 out of 10 clay pigeons. H. R. Stutzman broke 8 out of 10 pigeons, thereby capturing second prize. Mrs. F. H. Constantine was the only woman in the contest. She broke 3 out of 10 pigeons. The contest was directed by George A. Emmons, captain of the Washington Gun club.

A dinner, vaudeville entertainment and dancing rounded out the program.

A Lot Means a Lot. The rapidly appreciating value when through listing as a home site in the most quickly rising class of land in the suburbs in Washington, D. C., is used to get attention when attention is needed.

AMERICANS SWINDLE CHINESE; SENTENCED

Received $14,500 for Army Rifles That Were Never Delivered to Buyers.

Seattle, Wash., July 10 (By A. P.).—For a swindle perpetrated on a northern China military chief, James J. Underwood, 30, an aviator, and E. A. Miller, 29, are in Seattle today awaiting removal to McNeil Island penitentiary, the former to serve 30 months and the latter 18. They were brought here last night on the steamship President McKinley.

Using an army rifle owned by Miller as a sample, the two arranged with the Chinese leader to sell him 1,500 rifles and several thousand rounds of ammunition. Agents of the Chinese paid the pair $14,500, with delivery to be made last April. When the Chinese arrived to receive the goods they found neither rifles, ammunition nor Americans.

American authorities arrested Miller and Underwood on a train bound for Tientsin. Underwood's wife, whom he married in China, was convicted and placed on probation for a year. The cases were tried in the United States court in China.

J. H. THOMAS ISSUES ULTIMATUM TO REDS

Outside Bodies Not to Fix Policies of English Rail Union, He Says.

Weymouth, England, July 10 (By A. P.).—J. H. Thomas, railwaymen's secretary, who for weeks has been the subject of attacks from extremists in the labor party for his part played in calling off the general strike, today delivered what the press interprets as an ultimatum to the conference of the National Union of Railwaymen here, the famous leader declared: "I don't propose to follow the policy of the National Union of Railwaymen to be dictated or influenced by any outside bodies, whether they are called the 'minority government' of this country or the saviors of any other country."

Boyle Withdraws From Alaska Race

Juneau, Alaska, July 10 (By A. P.).—Frank A. Boyle, of Juneau, today withdrew as a Democratic candidate for delegate to Congress from Alaska in November elections. He endorsed Thomas A. Marquam, Fairbanks, as independent, who is opposed by Dan Sutherland, of Ruby, Republican, incumbent.

Boyle said a merger of Democratic and Republican forces in three of the four Territorial districts had deprived him of much of his support. He is a former receiver of United States land offices in Juneau and Anchorage.

Florida Bank Closes Doors.

Kissimmee, Fla., July 10 (By A. P.).—The Bank of Osceola County, of this city, with deposits of more than a million dollars, failed to open its doors for business this morning.

TWO GET NEW TRIAL IN FINDING OF BONES

Bennett and His Wife Were Deprived of Rights, Says Tennessee Court.

Nashville, Tenn., July 10 (By A. P.).—The Tennessee supreme court today reversed and remanded for new trial the case of W. H. Bennett and his wife, Mrs. Mae Bennett, convicted in Hamilton county in 1924 of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the alleged death of Miss Augusta Hoffman, Bennett's aunt.

Their indictment followed the finding of a woman's skeleton in a crude grave in the basement of a house formerly occupied by the Bennetts in Chattanooga. The court ordered a new trial on the grounds that the State relied on circumstantial evidence to establish the corpus delicti to connect the Bennetts with the alleged homicide and that the remains, consisting of bones, produced no proof as to the character of violence.

It was held that the defendants were deprived of the presumption of innocence that attends every person accused of crime throughout the progress of the investigation in the trial court.

BULGARS NOW CHARGE ROUMANIAN ATTACK

Sofia Calls for an Inquiry; Bucharest Says Raiders Penetrated 3 Miles.

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 10 (By A. P.).—The Bulgarian government has requested the Roumanian government to investigate an alleged attack upon a Bulgarian outpost by Roumanian soldiers on July 8. While the result of the Roumanian inquiry is awaited, calm reigns along the frontier. The feeling in official circles is that the matter will be settled amicably.

Bucharest, Roumania, July 10 (By A. P.).—The ministry of war, after an inquiry into the recent raid by Bulgarian comitadjis (irregulars) in the Dobruja section, has fixed the casualties as 26 Bulgarians dead and six Roumanian soldiers wounded, with ten missing and believed to be dead.

It is stated that the raiders, numbering about 250, fully armed men, penetrated three miles into Roumanian territory before coming into conflict with Roumanian infantry. No punitive measures or expeditions of reprisal have been undertaken by the Roumanians.

Edna Hibbard Given Divorce From Seager

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—Edna Hibbard, actress, has been granted a divorce from John C. Seager, Jr., identified by her counsel as a son of the president of the Seager Steamship Co., of New York.

Miss Hibbard, who is a member of the cast of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," said they were married in 1922. She charged desertion, nonsupport and cruelty.

ALESSANDRI BELITTLES COOLIDGE AND KELLOGG

Incapable of Understanding Tacna Case, Says Former President of Chile.

SECRETARY IS "IGNORANT"

(Special Cable Dispatch.) Balboa, July 10.—Former President Alessandri of Chile arrived here this morning from New York and left this evening for Chile. He hurled verbal brickbats at President Coolidge and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg.

"I can not understand how a people so great as the Americans could select a man so incapable of fulfilling so important an office as Mr. Kellogg," he said. "He is altogether lacking in intelligence and has not the remotest idea what the Tacna-Arica problem is all about. He is incapable of comprehending the principles involved, and the same applies to President Coolidge. I conferred with both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Kellogg and found them without the slightest idea of what the Tacna-Arica problem means."

When questioned on his opinion of the Washington negotiations he said: "Everything is finished now." He declined to amplify his statement. He concluded by saying that Chile always has believed the land here and will continue to believe so.

28 Slain in Attack Upon Italian Column

Rome, July 10 (By A. P.).—Twenty-two soldiers, five civilians and one native were killed by Cyrenaican brigands in a surprise attack on a wagon train proceeding from Apollonia to Cyrene, the colonial office announced.

The train, consisting of four camions of civilians and one camion of soldiers, with a military escort, was going to Cyrene as part of a concentration of forces in an effort to break up brigandage between Tarich, Aziza and the sea.

Reinforcements, arriving after the attack, dispersed the brigands and captured a number of chiefs. Severe penalties are being inflicted.

Admits He Robbed Dentists' Offices

Cumberland, Md., July 10.—The mystery surrounding the robbing of several dental offices in Hagerstown, on July 4, is believed to have been solved by the arrest here today of a man who said he was H. C. Vanderzee, 36 years old, of New York.

He was arrested in a jewelry store after the police had been told of his attempt to sell gold. A vial of gold particles, a number of sheets of gold and old gold fillings were found in his possession, according to the police, he admitted robbing the Hagerstown dentists.

NAVY RESERVES HAVE FIRST SEA "COMBAT"

Drills and Submarine "Fights" Precede Visit of Volunteers to Newport.

Special to The Washington Post. Newport, R. I., July 10.—Following maneuvering drills and imaginary combat with enemy submarines Thursday night, the fleet of destroyers bearing the naval reservists, including the detachment from Washington, D. C., steamed in column into Newport harbor yesterday, where an inspection tour was made of the naval torpedo factory and station. Half of the men were on shore leave all day in the city of Newport.

The destroyers left Long Island sound on their cruise early Thursday, after all hands had turned to, in giving the vessels a general cleaning. Steaming all night the fleet anchored early Friday in Narragansett bay. A heavy fog prevented entrance of the narrow channel until noon.

Saturday morning ship inspection was held with all men in dress blues. Half of the men were given liberty ashore, with the opportunity of visiting the city of Newport. Many visited historic Jamestown Island and the old Norristown tower. Newport is the fleet's second port of visitation.

COMPLETE TRAFFIC TIE-UP IN NEW YORK GOAL OF STRIKERS

Brooklyn-Manhattan Men Are Eager to Go Out, Subway Workers Assert.

300 PICKETS SENT OUT TO SEEK ENLISTMENTS

Interborough Officials Called to Court; Incompetents Hired, It Is Charged.

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—Striking subway employees of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. today planned to spread the strike to Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. and threatened an almost city-wide tie-up of transportation on subway, elevated and trolley lines.

Three hundred pickets were sent by the strikers to Brooklyn, calling upon employees of the Brooklyn and Manhattan system to quit work. The Brooklyn system has not been affected, except that it is now carrying the bulk of passengers for-nearby carried by the lines of the Interborough into Brooklyn and Queens. The B. M. T. system, after its strike a few years ago, raised the pay of some of its employees to a scale higher than that paid by the Interborough.

Eager to Join, Is View. According to the strike leaders, the Brooklyn men are eager to join the movement.

"We expect to have them in full swing in four days," said Harry Bark, one of the leaders. Meanwhile the strikers announced that powerhouse employees, towermen and others were joining the original ranks of the striking motormen and switchmen on the Interborough system.

Emergency forces kept the trains running and the Interborough officials said that they were prepared to fill the places of all men who walked out. Students at technology institutes and electrical companies were used to replace some of the powerhouse men, the company said. The company policy was to keep during the four days of the strike it had carried 5,584,609 persons without injury. This is considerably less than the average, however, estimated by the company as falling off 50 per cent to 70 per cent.

Subway Traffic Lighter.

The subway traffic today was somewhat lighter than usual, but this was partly explained by the half holiday in many stores. The company's ultimatum to its striking employees that if they do not return to work by Monday noon their places will be filled permanently has not caused any stampede, the strike leaders say. They claim their lines are holding and that desertions are comparatively few.

District Attorney Banton today obtained a summons directing Interborough officials to appear in Tombs court Monday to answer a charge of violating the State railway law by employing an incompetent motorman. The action was the result of the derailment of a subway express early yesterday. Penalty for violation of the statute is a fine of $500.

Forest Fires Burn In Northwest States

Seattle, Wash., July 10 (By A. P.).—More forest fires dotted the Pacific northwest today than at any time this year. The United States weather bureau forecast no immediate relief. In western Washington high temperatures, winds and low humidity have combined to make conditions serious.

Two and a half million feet of logs, two treesties and some logging equipment were destroyed in a blaze that swept 1,500 acres near Tenino, Wash.

In eastern Washington and Idaho, where land is not so heavily timbered, most of the blazes were small. Near Coeur d'Alene, 35 fires were reported. From Wilbur, Wash., dispatches of fires started by lightning numbered 25.

British Dance Chief Opposes New Styles

London, July 10 (By A. P.).—George Chester, president of the British Association of Teachers of Dancing, has joined the objectors to the modern styles of dancing. "Ballroom dancing has developed into a general walk-around," he says. "Sixty per cent of the dancers do no dance at all and it is getting worse and worse with the popularity of novelty dancing and untimed music."

U. S. Cruiser to Visit Mexico.

Veracruz, Mex., July 10 (By A. P.).—The American vice consul here has been notified that the United States cruiser Rochester will arrive Tuesday, en route from Panama to New York, to pay a visit of courtesy.

RUSSIA IS MAKING DRIVE TO COLONIZE WRANGELL ISLAND

20 Siberian Eskimo Families on Way to Land Where 18 Have Died.

IMPORTANCE AS PLANE LANDING PLACE IS SEEN

Territory Will Be Renamed Lenin Isle in Honor of Late Soviet Chief.

Nome, Alaska, July 10 (By A. P.).—Russia has launched another attempt to colonize Wrangell Island, a barren bit of ice-locked land in the arctic ocean, which has already claimed the lives of eighteen colonists and explorers and has been considered uninhabitable.

An expedition of twenty Siberian Eskimo families, fully equipped for a three year's stay on the island, is on its way to Wrangell from the west side of Bering strait, aboard the Russian ice breaker Red October (Krasny Oktibr). The island is to be renamed Lenin Island (Lenin Mitroff), in honor of the Soviet leader. The colonists are taking 100 dogs, 25 reindeer and six large Eskimo boats.

Equipment of the colony includes 3,000 reindeer pelts for clothing. Possession of the island, which has been claimed in the names of several nations, including the United States, has been declared increasingly important in some quarters, in view of the opening up of aerial navigation above the arctic, with the flight of the dirigible Norge across the north pole to Alaska.

The island is said to be possibilities as a landing place for aircraft. Russia after the evacuation of that country laid claim to Wrangell and to Herald islands, 50 miles east, which had been considered American territory by map makers. So far as known here, however, the United States has manifested little or no interest. This Russian claim was based upon assertions that a Russian party had visited Wrangell Island in 1911.

MEAT WAR EFFECTS FELT IN ARGENTINA

American-British Struggle Is Closely Watched by the Small Companies.

Buenos Aires, July 10 (By A. P.).—The meat war between the leading British and American packing interests in Argentina for the supremacy of the English market has affected a number of smaller companies engaged in the same trade. Two of these companies, with British and Dutch capital, have curtailed their operations sharply. A third, composed largely of local capital, virtually has closed down. These companies are represented as awaiting the outcome of the fight between the Swift, Armour and Wilson companies on the one side, and the Vestey interests, representing the British. In the meantime the Vestey company is expanding its operations here and building near Buenos Aires one of the largest refrigerating plants in the world. This company has also entered the shipping business to maintain its own refrigerator steamers.

Vestey withdrew last year from the London shipping conference, by which refrigeration space was apportioned among the packers for shipments to the United Kingdom. It is understood that the British asked for increased tonnage; the conference then dissolved, and a scramble for space followed.

Tangier Agreement Accepted by Italy

London, July 10 (By A. P.).—In consequence of an exchange of views between the British and Italian governments, it is stated in authoritative quarters, the Italian government has agreed to adhere to the Tangier pact, provided Italy is granted certain concessions with regard to the local administration.

Before this can be definitely settled, however, it is expected conversations through the usual diplomatic channels will take place among the British, French and Spanish governments.

Tangier is governed as a neutral zone by representatives of Great Britain, France and Spain, under an agreement signed December 18, 1923. The convention, which forbids the construction of fortifications of any sort within the zone, came into force on December 1, 1924.

Broadcast Licenses Ready to Be Issued

(By the Associated Press.) The Commerce Department will begin this week the issuance of broadcasting licenses to all applicants who have equipped stations.

This action will be taken in accordance with an opinion by the Attorney General that the department must grant licenses to all applicants ready for operation, but as to the assignment of wave lengths this will be left to the broadcasters themselves. They are expected, however, to use only the normal wave band found necessary for their particular needs and to cooperate with existing stations in the avoidance of confusion.

Queen, in Locomotive, Drives 50 Miles an Hour

Resita, Roumania, July 10 (By A. P.).—The versatile Queen Marie of Roumania has surprised her subjects with a display of mechanical skill by driving a locomotive at 50 miles an hour.

The engine, the first ever built in Roumania, was the product of the great Metallurgical Works at Resita.

Queen Marie christened the locomotive then. Garbed in a blue duster, leather gloves and high boots, she climbed into the cab and seized the throttle. Her majesty drove the huge machine about 3 miles with the chief engineer of the Resita plant at her side. The king and prime minister, Gen. Averescu, also were in the cab.

Thousands of peasants flocked to the railroad tracks to watch the royal steam engine whiz by.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS BARS STUDENTS' AUTOS

Poor Scholarship, Accidents and Moral Lapses Given as the Reasons.

WARNING SENT PARENTS

Special to The Washington Post. Urbana, Ill., July 10.—Believing that the student operation of automobiles is detrimental to scholastic standing and contributes to moral delinquencies in addition to involving a constant and serious waste of time, the council of administration at the University of Illinois today announced a regulation has been adopted barring the student operation of automobiles at the State co-educational institution effective September 1.

A letter citing five reasons for barring automobiles at the State institution is being mailed by the council of administration to the parents and guardians of all students scheduled to reenter the university next fall, and to those prospective freshmen students who are applying for admittance. The reasons advanced are:

1. The scholastic standing maintained by the majority of students owning or operating automobiles has been below the average scholastic standing of the university.

2. The owning of automobiles has involved a constant and serious waste of time.

3. There have been numerous accidents involving considerable damage and serious bodily injury.

4. There are constant violations of local and State laws governing motor traffic, and a wholly unnecessary and dangerous congestion of traffic in streets adjacent to the campus.

5. The use of cars has contributed to moral delinquencies which resulted in the dismissal from the university of the students concerned.

BARRETT MAY AGAIN ENTER SENATE RACE

Former Pan-American Union Head Considers Present Conditions in Vermont.

Grafton, Vt., July 10 (By A. P.).—John Barrett, once director general of the Pan-American union, a former Minister to Spain and one of the formative of Coolidge-for-President clubs, may again become a candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate.

Mr. Barrett, who was one of the field when former Gov. William W. Stickney announced his intention to run, came to the fore again last night on the heels of Mr. Stickney's withdrawal for reasons of health.

His decision, he said, would depend on advice of leaders of public opinion in Vermont, and whether he is convinced that another Progressive candidate could poll a larger vote than Senator Porter H. Dale.

Senator Dale has announced his intention to seek re-nomination.

$142,800 in Stock Reported Missing

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—Disappearance of $142,800 of stock of the Postum Cereal Co. was being investigated by police today.

The loss of the stock was reported by Alfred Tyrill, chief auditor for the National Surety Co. Brokerage and stock houses were notified that transfer of the stock had been stopped. The loss was discovered yesterday.

Bonzano Guest of Hayes.

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, who presided over the eucharistic congress at Chicago, stayed in New York today to remain until he sails for Rome on July 24. He was met at the Pennsylvania terminal by a special reception committee, headed by Cardinal Hayes of New York.

Noted Fliers Escape in Crash. Paris, July 10 (By A. P.).—Capt. Ludovic Arrachart and his brother Paul, who established a nonstop record by flying from the Le Bourget field, near Paris, to Basra, on the Persian gulf, have met with a mishap on their return. Sixty miles south of Budapest, their plane fell and was smashed. Both men escaped without serious injury.

BIG DEBT PROTEST BY WAR VETERANS ALLOWED IN PARIS

Cabinet, Overruling Objection by Herrick, Says That Americans Concur.

DRAPINGS OF BLACK ARE TO BE OMITTED

Stone at Washington Statue Will Say Settlement Ends Independence.

Paris, July 10 (By A. P.).—Between 20,000 and 50,000 former soldiers of the French army, many of them wounded, will take part in the protest parade tomorrow morning against ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement. The march will take place with battle flags, though not draped in mourning as previously planned, to the Arc de Triomphe, the Alan Seeger monument and the equestrian statue of George Washington, at each of which a wreath will be placed.

The culminating feature of the demonstration will be the setting up of a stone at the foot of the Washington statue with a message carved in French to the people of the United States.

Word on Stone.

The message reads: "Over the head of diplomacy and far from political and financial combines, the war veterans of France appeal straight to the people of the United States. After the deceptions of peace, the proposed debt settlement would consecrate the ruin of France and the loss of its independence."

"Americans understand that the war veterans of France, who are honest, sincere and loyal, are asking in a friendly manner that the study of the question should be taken up once more."

The French government withdrew its prohibition order against the parade after it was assured that the parade had no political significance. No American organization will take part, although some members of the American volunteers in the French army may be present at the Alan Seeger monument, in a private capacity.

Route of Parade. The parade will form in the Avenue George V and march to the Arc de Triomphe, thence to the Alan Seeger statue in the Place des Etats Unis and then to the George Washington statue in the Place d'Alena. After the three wreaths are deposited the paraders will disband.

M. Durand and M. Jourdain, members of the cabinet, explained at a cabinet meeting this morning why the ban against the demonstration had been removed. Americans in Paris, they said, in general were of the opinion that the veterans were quite logical in protesting.

But were annoyed at the wording of the posters which had been distributed throughout the country describing the Washington agreement as the "Calvary of the Victims," and the statement that the debts had been reduced only 5 per cent.

DISTRICT, MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA GUARD CAMPS OPEN TODAY

Company A to Depart for 15 Days, Training at Saunders Range.

ENGINEERS TO BEGIN DRILLS NEXT MONTH

Capital Militia Troops Will Take Up Activities at Fort Humphreys.

National guard camps for troops of the District, Maryland and Virginia will open during the next month. DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S AIDS

THREE NEW ASSISTANTS FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Shea, Williams and Littlepage Are Appointed to Aid Maj. Gordon.

COURT FOR KENTUCKIAN

Walter M. Shea, of Chillicothe, Ohio, chief clerk in the office of Maj. Peyton Gordon, district attorney; John B. Williams, formerly with the prohibition unit, and John M. Littlepage, son of Thomas P. Littlepage, widely known Washington attorney, were sworn in yesterday as assistants to Maj. Gordon. Shea is 27 years old, Williams is 57 and Littlepage is 23. The father of the latter was associated with Frank J. Hogan in the defense of Commissioner Frederick A. Penning in the recent House investigation.

Shea was formerly private secretary to Maj. Gordon and was promoted to chief clerk. He was graduated from the University of Dayton, Ohio, and took his law degree at the Georgetown University Law school. He was admitted to practice last year. Before coming to Washington he was traffic manager at Camp Sherman, Ohio, from 1919 to 1922, when he was transferred to the War Department.

Littlepage is a native of this city. He took his law degree at the Georgetown University Law school and was admitted to practice last March.

Williams is a native of Kentucky. Because of his knowledge of the liquor situation he will be assigned to police court to try liquor cases.

The flying time between the two cities will be one hour and a half. William M. DeWald, local manager, announced yesterday. Reservations for the maiden trip have been sold out. The plane, named after Mayor Kendrick, of Philadelphia, is of the Fokker type.

3 Lumber Employees Held in Door Thefts

Three employees of the J. Terry King Lumber Co., all colored, 37 New Jersey avenue northwest, were held for the grand jury in police court yesterday charged with grand larceny of doors aggregating $722 in value, belonging to the lumber firm.

Those held were E. A. Carter, 1600 Meigs place northeast, W. G. Cook, 19 Chase court northwest, and Richard Cook, 8 L street northeast. The cases of Jacob Dodd, 4611 Mead street northeast, and Randolph Dodd, 928 Forty-eighth street northeast, charged with receiving the stolen property, were continued.

APPEAL FOR PENSION BOOST TO BE DECIDED

Commissioners to Act on Fennig Proposal to Increase Policeman's Allowance.

The District commissioners will consider next Tuesday a proposal by Commissioner Frederick A. Fennig for creation of a special board to consider renewed appeal by Commodore M. Lockwood, retired member of the police force, for increased pension.

Lockwood was retired a long time ago, and the police and fire retirement board failed to recommend a pension. The late Commissioner James F. Oyster, overruling the board, granted him an annuity of $50 a month. There have been several efforts to have this increased, but they have been unsuccessful.

On advice of Corporation Counsel Francis H. Stephens, Commissioner Fennig has recommended to the other commissioners that Assistant Corporation Counsel Ringsgold Hart, Police Inspector L. J. Stoll and Battalion Chief P. H. Davis, of the fire department, be named as a special board to recommend final disposition of the appeal.

Vacation Pay Denied Temporary U. S. Help

Temporary employees of the Federal government are not eligible for vacations with pay, J. Raymond McCall, comptroller general, ruled yesterday in reaffirming a previous decision made for the Interior Department.

Temporary employees are not eligible for sick leave with pay, either. Whether or not these employees will receive vacations will be determined by the individual department heads.

ADMIRAL MARSHALL DIES AT AGE OF 77

Retired Naval Official Saw the Opening of War Between Russia and Japan.

Newport, R. I., July 10 (By A. P.).—Rear Admiral William A. Marshall, U. S. N. (retired) died at his home in Jamestown today.

Rear Admiral Marshall as commander of the Vicksburg in Korean waters in 1904, was present at Chemulpo during the tense and unsettled months immediately preceding the outbreak of the war between Russia and Japan. He saw the actual opening of hostilities between those powers in Korean waters.

He entered the service June 26, 1867, as a midshipman at the Naval Academy and was retired after a half a century of service on October 11, 1911. During his career he served with ships and on stations in all parts of the world.

He was a native of Lancaster, Pa., and was 77 years old.

Huckster Competition Opposed by Preacher

The Rev. J. Milton Waldron, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church, colored, wrote to the District commissioners yesterday complaining against having to preach against the competition of hucksters surrounding his church Sundays and crying out that they have watermelons for sale.

Peddlers should be restrained from plying their trade on Sundays, in the opinion of the preacher. The commissioners took his complaint under advisement.

Studebaker Trails of Triumph

Busses powered by Big Six engines form national network

The heavy black lines show the principal routes of Studebaker bus operators. Studebaker busses are being operated in every state in the Union.

A YEAR ago Studebaker was forced into the bus business. Bus operators had found the Studebaker Big Six engine and the Studebaker Big Six chassis were peculiarly suited to their needs. They were buying Big Six chassis in large numbers, lengthening them and equipping them with bus bodies.

It was apparent the public would be better served by busses specially designed and built for this work, and Studebaker engineers were given the task of developing economical, efficient units for bus transportation. Studebaker's $100,000,000 manufacturing facilities enabled us to sell these powerful, dependable busses at prices never before approached for such quality.

Nation-wide popularity

The country over, far-flung trails tell the triumph of Studebaker's achievement. Today, as the map shows, Studebaker bus routes make neighbors of the nation. Linking hundreds of communities in every state, across the desert sands of New Mexico and over the mountain passes in Montana, through clinging gumbo and along broad highways... everywhere Studebaker Busses are providing trustworthy transportation.

Studebaker Busses cost less to buy, less to operate and have the stamina which insures 100,000—200,000—300,000 miles of dependable transportation.

Studebaker Big Six passenger cars offer similar economies. You can buy both a Studebaker Big Six Sedan and a Studebaker Big Six Sport-

Roadster for the price of any other sedan or roadster of equal rated horsepower. And your Studebaker will cost you less to operate and will live longer.

Unsurpassed stamina

Gruelling bus service has conclusively proved the merit of the Big Six engine. Since it handles 12 to 21 people and a heavy bus with such ease at high speed over long distances, it is no wonder that passenger-car work is mere child's play. This quiet L-head motor has reserves of power which assure the utmost in swift acceleration and smoothly sustained performance. And it does its work so easily that repairs and depreciation are minimized.

It is not surprising that the Studebaker Big Six (at One-Price prices) outsells every other car in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower.

The following Big Six Studebakers may be purchased out of income at time-payment rates as low as any known to the motor world:

REPUBLICAN FRAUD PROVED IN CHICAGO. IS JUDGE'S OPINION

Recount in One Ward Shows 155,000 Fraudulent Ballots Cast.

DEMOCRATIC BOXES ARE ORDERED OPENED

Some Candidates With Big Primary Majorities Lose
as High as 3,900.

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—A recount of the April primary ballots in two complete wards "has proven there is truth in the charges that there were Republican frauds," said County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki today, as he ordered a similar recount of the Democratic ballots. Some of the candidates for county offices who were announced as winning by large majorities have lost as high as 3,900 votes in the recount of the two wards. Judge Daniel P. Trude, whose petition started the recount, has gained about 1,500 votes in the race for county judge.

155,000 Void Ballots.
The recount thus far has disclosed about 155,000 fraudulent ballots, according to the investigations by Judge Jarecki's staff, with the majority of them marked for candidates of the faction headed by former Mayor Thompson and State's Attorney Crowe. Candidates of the opposing Republican faction headed by Senator Deneen and Fred Lundin, once Thompson's political sponsor, also were credited with thousands of ballots thrown out by the reelection.

While the inspection of the ballots has progressed, the grand jury has been following the disclosures and it is reported that true bills are ready to be returned next week against workers in the Twentieth ward, the first one recounted.

Crowe Denies Rumor.
A State senatorial contest caused investigation of five ballot boxes today, disclosing 46 ballots which were thrown out, and more of these ballot boxes will be opened Monday.

State's Attorney Crowe today characterized as ridiculous a report that Frank L. Smith, Republican senatorial nominee, had outbid a $50,000 offer from Senator McKinley, defeated by Smith, for the Crowe organization support.

Women's Peace Body Meeting at Dublin

Dublin, July 10 (By A. P.).—The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in convention here today, appointed commissions to study various international problems. They will investigate such subjects as militarism, imperialism, colonial affairs and the relations between minorities and majorities among the population of disputed territory.

Today's session of the congress was private. The delegates, representing 34 countries, including the United States, were entertained this afternoon by the Irish League of Nations society.

Eloyd George Backs Mine Strike Funds

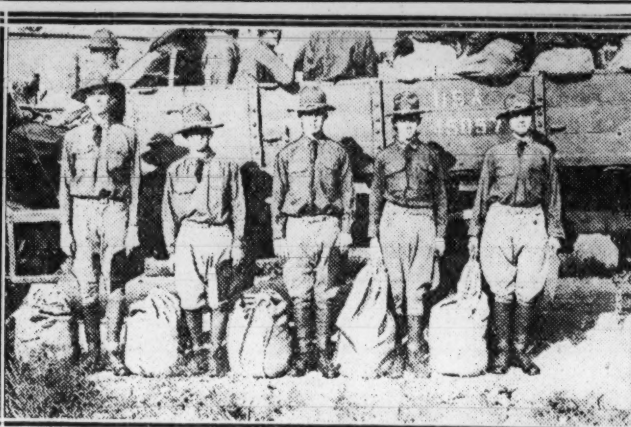

Rhyl, Wales, July 10 (By A. P.).—Former Premier David Lloyd George, continuing his campaign for peace, today proposed at a large mass meeting here today, endorsed the appeal for a fund to aid the striking coal miners of North Wales.

The coal owners would not starve, even with a prolonged strike at the mines, he said, and it was not fair that terms should be forced upon the workers by starvation of their women and children.

Ships Ashore on Block Island.

Block Island, R. I., July 10 (By A. P.).—The steamer Meteor, carrying 3,500 tons of soft coal and bound from Norfolk to Boston, went aground in a fog on the rocks of the southern shore of Block Island today. The steamer did not appear to be in immediate danger.

ARMY TRAINING BEGINS FOR CITIZEN SOLDIERS

First Taste of Military Life
Experienced at the Fort Eustis, Va., Camp.

SCHOLARSHIPS AS PRIZES

Citizen soldiers at the military training camp at Fort Eustis, Va., yesterday had their first taste of army life and drill. Most of the day was taken up by lectures and educational motion pictures, but about an hour of infantry drill was given.

They were taught which foot was their left and the proper manner of saluting an officer and other interesting mysteries of military life and discipline. At the end of the 30-day camp it is expected they will be able to look back and laugh at their efforts of yesterday, as a thorough training course has been mapped out.

Among army instructors attached to the camp is Second Lieut. Palo Alto Mitchell, infantry reserves, of this city, who won his gold bars by completing the blue course at the camp last year. He has been assigned to Company D, Thirty-fourth infantry.

Scholarships have been offered C. M. T. C. candidates at Fort Eustis by the Virginia Military Institute, Washington and Lee university, Catholic university and other schools. These scholarships are expected to prove an incentive for those in attendance at the camp who are trying for honors this year.

"Mayor of Greenwich" Gives Fortune; Dies

New York, July 10 (By The Associated Press).—The mayor of Greenwich Village, who died penniless, but happy after giving away a fortune, is being mourned by many poor. Dr. Edwin Zimmerman on his death bed gave his remaining wealth to be used for scholarships for needy boys, and wrote: "Believe me, I'm happy."

For 46 years he practiced in the village. Often he told poor patients pressing money on him: "Forget it, your bill has been paid by God."

Ross-of-Bladensburg, British Officer, Dies

Rostrevor, County Down, Ireland, July 10 (By A. P.).—Lieut. Col. Sir John Foster George Ross-of-Bladensburg, K. C. B., K. C. V. O., is dead, aged 70. He served in the Egyptian campaign in 1885, was aide de camp to Earl Spencer and Earl Carnarvon, lord lieutenant of Ireland, from 1882 to 1885, and chief commissioner of the Dublin metropolitan police from 1891 to 1914.

Boy Fatally Shoots Father by Accident

Bristol, Va., July 10.—W. R. Falin, 45, farmer of Cassard, Va., died in a hospital here today from a pistol wound in the stomach inflicted accidentally. The weapon was discharged while it was being cleaned by Mr. Falin's 16-year-old son.

KANN EMPLOYEES MERRY AT CHESAPEAKE BEACH

Annual Outing Is Held, but Gold Prizes Attract No
Charleston Dancers.

VIE IN 'ATHLETIC GAMES

Three gold prizes for excellence in doing the Charleston went begging at the outing of the employees of K. Kann Sons Co. at Chesapeake Beach yesterday. Bashfulness, or modesty, or both, restrained the flapper performers from venturing on the floor.

In fact, only two of the girl employees applied for the Charleston competition. That was not enough for there were three prizes. So another dance was substituted, and the prizes were awarded in this dance.

About 1,500 attended the outing, composed of employees, their families and friends. Two trains were required to transport the party. The large company gathered at the District line at 10 o'clock. Most returned at 8 o'clock last night.

Swimming, boating and dancing filled the day besides the athletic contests. The employees had luncheon on the grounds. The outing was under the auspices of the Mutual Benefit association of the store. Tickets were distributed by the store. The merchants of Chesapeake Beach contributed $50 to ward the prizes.

Winners of the athletic events were:
Race for girls more than 10 years—Mildred Gunn, Ethel Ball and Edna Carson; boys more than 10 years—Joseph Smolinsky, William Woneberger and Melvin Winger; girls under 10 years, Dorothy White, Alva Lewis and Frances Robey; boys under 10 years, Thomas Fitzgerald, William Norris and Charles Yateman.

The ice cream cone contest—Boys, Jimmy Coons, Lewis Pichon and Wharton Wright, Jr.; women's race, Miss Leah Shofnos, Miss J. McDaniel and Miss Marie Rouan.

Men's race, Arthur Thomas, William Ragan and Edwin Linsmeyer; fat women's race, Mrs. Coons, Miss Julia Clark and Mrs. F. Freeland; fat men's contest, Edna Jillett, E. Manders and William Friel; women's candle race, Miss Edna Carson and Miss Mabel White, and men's candle race, Joseph Thomas, Harry Coonin and Joseph West.

Bank Clearings Lead Same Week Last Year

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ended July 8 (a holiday week), aggregated $9,078,216,000, a loss of 8.2 per cent from last week (a full week), and a gain of 8.7 per cent over the like week of last year, which also was a holiday week, according to Bradstreet's. Outside of New York the total was $3,848,216,000, a decrease of 5.1 per cent from last week, but an increase of 6.3 per cent over this week a year ago. New York showed a gain of 10.1 per cent over last year. Thirty-four cities reported increases over last year, while thirteen disclosed losses. Philadelphia reported a gain of 9.6 per cent, San Francisco 8.8 per cent, Boston 27.2 per cent, Pittsburgh 1.9 per cent, Detroit 9.7 per cent, Los Angeles 1.1 per cent, St. Louis 1.5 per cent, Kansas City 7.1 per cent, Cleveland 1 per cent, Baltimore 8.6 per cent, Cincinnati 7.1 per cent and New Orleans 7.5 per cent. Chicago showed a loss of 2.9 per cent. Philadelphia 15.7 per cent and Atlanta 11.9 per cent.

Takes Poison in Error; Society Woman Dies

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—After taking a box of bicarbonate tablets in mistake for a headache remedy, Mrs. Margaret S. Crawford, 33, society woman, wife of John D. Crawford, died today at the Hagerstown hospital.

Recently Mrs. Crawford had been living with her mother, Mrs. Margaret Staley, at "Delemere," near Breathedsville. She was a daughter of the late Daniel C. Staley, formerly president of the Hagerstown Interstate Fair association.

Will Name New Ferryboat Ritchie.

Annapolis, Md., July 10.—The new ferryboat soon to run between Calverton and Annapolis will be named after Gov. Albert Ritchie. It was announced today by B. Frank Sherman, general manager of the line. The christening will be held at Annapolis next Thursday. Immediately afterward the Ritchie will make her maiden voyage across the bay and a similar ceremony will be held at Calverton. Miss Mary Harrington, daughter of former Gov. Harrington, will be the sponsor.

CAPITOL HEIGHTS.

Mayor Thomas J. Luckett has received a letter from O. B. Zantinger, realtor of Maryland and Washington, in which Mr. Zantinger announces his intention to donate four lots in the triangular plot between Kingston avenue, Sixty-third street and Annapolis avenue to the town for use as community playgrounds. The lots have a total frontage of 115 feet and depth of 100 feet. They were selected by the playground commission comprising Jacob Boyer, Selig Posin, Harry L. Adams and Walter Oliver. Mayor Luckett announces that he probably will issue a general call to citizens in the near future to aid in clearing the plot of underbrush. Selig Posin has donated wire fencing for the playground. It is expected that about $40 will be available as a nucleus for buying playground equipment as the result of the recent benefit performance given here by members of the Vincent Costella post, American Legion, of Washington.

Teachers for the Capitol Heights school for 1926-27 have been recommended by Prof. Nicholas Oren, county superintendent of school, as follows: Bessie Cook, Mary Long, Mildred M. Hickman, Mar Crumb, Madie Craig, Ann Underwood, M. Elizabeth Wilson, Mary Carrick, Marion B. Close, Madie Michael, and Mary E. Palmer.

MRS. BUDLONG RESTS IN SEPARATION ACTION

Surprises Court by Passing
Only 2 Minutes on the Witness Stand.

HAD ASKED FOR 3 DAYS

Newport, R. I., July 10 (By A. P.).—Testimony in the Budlong separation suit came to an abrupt close today, although Mrs. Milton J. Budlong, the defendant, asked yesterday for three days to present her case. She is contesting the action of her wealthy husband, based on grounds of cruelty.

Mrs. Budlong, who is conducting her own defense, passed only two minutes on the witness stand, and then surprised every one by resting her case, having called no one to testify for her. She was granted ten days for filing a brief and her husband's counsel was given three days longer for a reply.

That the woman's experience as her own lawyer was not altogether an easy one was shown by her declaration during argument on the filing of her brief. She said that "Attorney Phillips (Budlong's counsel) had done one thing after another contrary to procedure because of my lack of experience."

Chief of Police Slain, 2 Injured in Battle

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—James Yeoman, chief of police of Hazel Crest, a southern suburb, died today in hospital from wounds received in a gun fight with two negroes. A motorcycle policeman and one of the negroes also were wounded. The negroes had been terrorizing motorists.

Yeoman was shot three times at close range by Jack Brown, alias Clarence Watson, who said he came from Paducah, Ky. Motorcycle Policeman Albert Johnson, was shot near the heart and is in a serious condition. Brown, also wounded, and his companion, who said he was Jim Robinson, Albany, Miss., were captured.

Girl Dies After Crash; Friend's Back Broken

Special to The Washington Post. Laurel, Del., July 10.—Elizabeth Owens, 18, died in the Salisbury hospital today from wounds received when an automobile in which she was riding, driven by Paul Kenney, was run into by a Maryland truck.

Miss Ethel Kenney, who was in the car with her brother, suffered a broken back.

STABS MAN FATALLY IN ROW OVER REALTY

Farmer Tells Police He Believed He Was Not Given Fair Deal.

Special to The Washington Post. Parkersburg, W. Va., July 10.—According to the police a complete confession of the killing of James Sayer, 63, was obtained from Charles Wigel, 41, Lubec district farmer, on a road near the Amos Tobey farm. Sayer's throat was cut.

A real estate transaction between the men was given as the cause of the tragedy. Wigel said he was taking his cows to pasture when Sayer drove up in a buggy. In an altercation that followed Wigel admitted that he drew a penknife and stabbed Sayer in both sides of his neck.

Wigel told the officers he had been negotiating with Sayer for a trade of real estate. Wigel owned two lots and a house in Nicelyville, which he wished to trade to Sayer for the latter's farm. An agreement was reached for the trade to be made on November 1 whereby Wigel was to give Sayer $900 in addition to his house and lots. He had paid Sayer $100, he said. The agreement was made June 19. Later Wigel believed he was not being given a fair deal.

Boy Broke Neck in Diving; Dies.

Special to The Washington Post. Salem, Va., July 10.—John William Harveycutter, 19 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Harveycutter, died here today of a broken neck, received last night when he lived from a tree on the bank of the Roanoke river into a swimming ole. He was a junior of Salem high school and a member of St. Paul's Episcopal church.

MRS. FERGUSON DELAYS EXTRADITION OF PONZI

Austin, Tex., July 10 (By A. P.).—Decision on the request of Massachusetts authorities for the extradition of Charles Ponzi, Boston swindler, was delayed today by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson.

After listening to arguments of attorneys for two hours, the woman governor instructed opposing counsel to eliminate between themselves all questions of fact and to submit briefs on the points of law raised. Indications were that a decision will not be rendered for three weeks or more.

Attorneys for Ponzi, who is in jail at Houston on a fugitive warrant, contended that Ponzi is an Italian citizen and was arrested on an Italian ship at New Orleans, making the case one of international extradition. It also was argued that Ponzi had been placed in double jeopardy in his prosecution in Massachusetts and that the Texas governor had the right to deny extradition.

Alfred Shrigley, assistant attorney general of Massachusetts, described Ponzi as the "ink fish of the criminal world," and said that he was of such great mentality that he had deceived his own attorneys. He declared that Ponzi had boasted that as long as Gov. Ferguson was chief executive in Texas he would not be taken back to Massachusetts.

DAVIDSON WILL DESIGN STATUE OF LA FOLLETTE

Memorial for Statuary Hall, in Capitol Here, Will Cost $40,000.

ARTIST IS WISCONSIN MAN

Special to The Washington Post. Madison, Wis., July 10.—Gov. John J. Blaine announced today that he has contracted with "Jo" Davidson, New York city, for a statue of Senator Robert M. La Follette, to be placed in the hall of fame, or statuary hall, at the Capitol in Washington, according to the type of figure and design selected by Mrs. La Follette and the family, for the sum of $40,000, the price of the completed work.

Mr. Davidson is a former Wisconsin man, was raised in Milwaukee, and was a lifelong friend of Senator La Follette. His work as a sculptor has won recognition both here and abroad. He designed the United States war industries badge, the heroic group of the French government to commemorate the first victory of the Marne, made a bust of President Wilson, and was selected to make bronze busts of the leaders of the allies.

When Senator La Follette went to Europe three years ago he met Mr. Davidson in Paris and the latter made a life-sized bust of La Follette that was much admired. Mr. Davidson has been working upon a model of the statue in his Paris studio.

By an act of Congress each State is invited to provide and present to Congress for erection in statuary hall statues of two of its deceased residents of historic renown whom the State shall determine to be worthy of such national commendation.

By an act of the legislature the statue of Peter Mansueti, explorer and missionary, was authorized and erected, and by an act of the legislature in 1925, a statue of Senator La Follette has been designated for the other Wisconsin resident.

COURSES IN NAVAL TRAINING OFFERED COLLEGE STUDENTS

Several Leading Universities to Include Units Beginning With Fall Terms.

GRADUATES WILL BE ENSIGNS IN RESERVE

Same Studies as Annapolis Gives Will Be Used in the Experiment.

Establishment of naval training units at Harvard, Yale, Georgia Institute of Technology, Northwestern University, University of California and University of Washington has been decided by the Navy Department and a four-year course in naval science and tactics will become effective at the opening of these colleges in the fall of 1926. Graduates from these units will be commissioned ensigns in the volunteer naval reserve.

The department believes that world war experiences which showed that college men proved their ability to serve as good acting ensigns after six months' intensive training at Annapolis, warrants the opinion that men trained in the naval reserve officers' training corps course will provide excellent junior officer material. It intends to make these college units the naval academies of the reservists, giving the same basic training as is given midshipmen at Annapolis.

With experience gained at the six established units, the department will be in a position to ascertain the feasibility of introducing naval units to the curriculum of other college and looks toward establishment of at least one college unit in each of the eleven naval districts.

Authorized by Congress.
The six units installed by the department follows authorization for the naval R. O. T. C. by Congress March 4, 1925, and appropriations made available July 1, 1925, to include naval courses in the regular elective courses of civilian colleges. The act limits total student enrollment to 1,200, or a quota of 200 to each college applying for installation of a department of naval science and tactics, and R. O. T. C. regulations require an initial minimum enrollment of 50 students. The department, however, desires that a maximum of 60 be enrolled in each institution the first year. Future enrollments will be based from year to year on the strength of the classes remaining at the end of the year.

The course planned by the bureau of navigation will be elective and limited to students who are American citizens, not less than 14 years of age, and whose condition indicates that they are mentally and physically qualified to perform future military duty. Subjects covered will be credited toward the university degree.

Course Is Divided.
Students enrolled will be furnished with an initial uniform, equipment, patterned after those issued to midshipmen at Annapolis. Equipment for the course will be supplied by the Navy Department to institutions and students without cost. The four-year course in naval science and tactics will be divided into two parts, the basic and advanced. The basic will consist of the first two years' instruction in seamanship, navigation and ordnance, and will be available only for members of freshmen and sophomore classes. A minimum of three hours' instruction and training a week in these subjects will be required. The advanced course, with a minimum of five hours a week, will be available only to students who have successfully completed the basic course and who are in their junior or senior years, respectively, of the college.

Students elected to the advanced course will be paid commutation of rations at the same rate as the army R. O. T. C. but not to exceed approximately $15 a month during their junior and senior years. Physical training will be required of all students, except during the periods when they are actually engaged in an officially recognized branch of organized athletics.

Camps and Cruises.
Naval reserve officers training camps and cruises will be held every summer and students enrolled in any of the courses in naval science and tactics may apply for admission to them. Attendance at one advanced camp or cruise is compulsory for all students in the advanced course, and it is anticipated that annual cruises will be of fifteen days' duration.

Naval officers selected by the department to instruct units are:
Harvard—Capt. A. H. Rice, recently in command of destroyer division 30, battle fleet; Lieut. Comdr. L. S. Stewart, U. S. S. Arizona. Yale—Capt. F. D. Berrien, just completed a course at the Army War college; Lieut. Comdr. Lucien B. Green, who has been under instruction at the Naval War college, Georgia Institute—Comdr. John J. London, commanding destroyer division 40, scouting fleet; Lieut. Comdr. Hamilton Harlow, under instruction at Naval War college, University of California—Comdr. C. W. Nimitz, aid, commander U. S. fleet; Lieut. Comdr. Ernest L. Gunther, commander destroyer Somers, University of Washington—Comdr. James P. Olden, commander U. S. S. Preble; Lieut. Comdr. E. L. Barr, U. S. S. Oklahoma. Northwestern University—Comdr. Stephen B. McKinney, executive officer, U. S. S. Huron; Lieut. Comdr. Mark L. Hersey, Jr., commander U. S. S. Coghlan.

U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post.
The July meeting will be held tomorrow at the home of the commander, Esther V. Hall, 1403 Webster street northwest.

The executive committee of the post was entertained at the home of Comrade Ulla R. Tracy Wednesday evening in Virginia Highlands.

IOWA PROSPEROUS IN FACE OF HEAVY SHIFTS IN PRICES

Trouble Due to Buying in Sellers' Market and Selling in Buyers'.

DECREASES IN VALUES OF LAND HIT FARMER

Lack of Demand for Soil Also Hurts; Forced Sales Bring Low Figures.

By ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 10.—While outside States, and the political world in particular, are echoing with "What's wrong in Iowa?" many optimistic folks out here in the corn and bacon belt are raising the question, "What's right with Iowa?" They furnish the answer themselves, and it is to the effect that evidences are abundant that agriculture is growing in prosperity.

But they point out, there is a deep-rooted trouble with the farmer in that he buys in a seller's market and sells in a buyer's market and is eternally facing the greatest gamble in the world, namely, a fluctuation in the price of his products that sometimes ranges 200 per cent and higher in a twelve month.

Right there is one great reason for the agrarian unrest. The farmer is intensifying his job as a producer. Agriculture has been climbing to a higher basis as a business enterprise. The farmer has been taking the surface fluctuations, good crops and prices one year and indifferent the next, without much kicking, but the decrease in the value of his land, his capital, has caused a deep soreness of spirit. The basic complaint in the corn belt "revolt" is that the industrialized East is not recognizing the idea that the farm industry needs to be put on a parity with factory and mill industries.

Gross Farm Income.

Tentative figures just out indicate Iowa's total farm gross income in 1925 was between $700,000,000 and $712,000,000. It was somewhat larger than in 1924, which was the best year since the 1919 slump. The decrease in the price for corn, which brought gloom last fall and winter, has been measurably made up by the high price for hogs and the good prices for cattle. In 1925, some 3,000,000 fewer hogs were marketed than in 1924, but they brought in $5,000,000 more dollars.

One fact pointed to is that in December 1926, at the peak, Iowa banks owed the Federal Reserve Bank $98,636,000. On May 20, this year, this had been cut to $8,215,000. In April, 1922, the borrowings from the War Finance Corporation at the peak, were $24,000,000. Now they are less than $115,000. Only about 5 per cent of Iowa farms are excessively mortgaged and some 40 per cent of all the 212,000 farms are not mortgaged. In the smaller communities, the traveler hears from actual farmers that those who own their farms without excessive incumbrance and who did not plunge into high priced acres in the 1919 land boom are prosperous, unless they grew corn last year and had no hogs or cattle to manufacture 50 cent corn into $1.25 corn in the shape of meats.

In the inflation period less than 10 per cent of Iowa farms were under contract of sale or changed ownership. In some sections land went up $400 and $600 an acre. Iowa has the highest priced agricultural land in the country, being the most opulent, and deflation knocked values almost in half.

Slump in Farm Value.

Preliminary government figures show in 1920 the average value of land and buildings on farms was $227 an acre. In 1925 it was $149. The average value of land in the State in 1920 was $199. Now it is $119. The main trouble is the dull market for land. Forced sales, when banks have had to throw out frozen assets, have generally brought such a low price that it has been dispiriting to landowners in adjacent townships or counties. The land is as good as ever, but there is little movement, and the owner of a farm doesn't know with any exactness what he is worth.

As one banker said today, "If a pool of $1,000,000 were raised to buy Iowa farms, things would change overnight. Few want to sell, and the efforts at purchase would be a reassurance, as they would indicate what land is actually worth."

Outside capital regards Iowa land as gilt-edged security. The life insurance companies have been increasing their loans in the agricultural West and one-fourth of their loans have been placed in Iowa. A few years ago they reduced their interest rates from 5 1/2 to 5 per cent. And in the face of the depression in 1919 they increased the maximum loan on first mortgage from $75 to $100 an acre.

PROHIBITION FACTOR IN G.O.P. WISCONSIN PRIMARY CAMPAIGN

Every Candidate for Senatorial Toga Is Wet Except Lenroot.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 10 (By A. P.).—While Wisconsin's primeval woods are filling up with merry vacationists from far and near, seeking rest and fish, the politicians are rolling up their sleeves and plunging into one of the warmest political campaigns of recent decades.

With word from Washington that Senator La Follette, wearing the toga of his late noted father, "Fighting Bob," was leaving Washington today to fight in his home State campaign, new ardor was added to the conflict. Centering about the Republican senatorial candidacy to be decided in the September primary, the campaign seethes with three principal issues, prohibition, prohibition and peace. It is expected to reach boiling when Senator La Follette throws his weight onto the scale in favor of Gov. J. J. Blaine, who opposes Senator Irving L. Lenroot for the Republican nomination.

Open Debate Refused.

Gov. Blaine refused definitely today to accept Senator Lenroot's challenge for an open debate on the world court question. Senator Lenroot, who was chosen by the President to lead debate for the court in the Senate, had urged the governor to name his own terms for a debate. "I will not divide in the time with any one," was the State executive's ultimatum.

Thrice governor of Wisconsin, Blaine, progressive of the La Follette regime, is fighting to wrest from Senator Lenroot the seat to which he was elected by the conservative Republicans. The nomination is also being sought by Frank J. Kelly, another Progressive, running on a dripping wet platform.

Attempting a revival of their party in Wisconsin this year, Wisconsin Democrats have picked Thomas Kearney, Racine, as their standard bearer. Kearney was a former Democratic candidate for United States senator, and his platform favors repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Lenroot Only Dry Candidate.

The field is practically wet with the exception of Senator Lenroot, who has been a consistent dry. Gov. Blaine is avowedly wet, while Kelly is making the fight purely on the wet and dry issue. Senator Lenroot succeeded in lessening the tension somewhat on the question by opening his campaign with a plea for wet and dry referendum, which was ordered by the last legislature and is held up by the Antislavery league through a technical court proceeding.

Sensor Lenroot's challenge on the world court question is regarded by some commentators on Wisconsin politics as marking a departure from the senator's former methods and as showing a new aggressiveness. Against this is put the strong machine of the governor and the backing of Senator Robert M. La Follette, Jr.

Bluffing by Students Is Called Intelligence

Chicago, July 10 (By the Associated Press).—Bluffing by students is a form of intelligence and must be taken into consideration by the psychologist who seeks to measure their mentality. Prof. A. C. Perry, of the University of Texas, who is teaching at the University of Chicago this summer, said today.

Life Insurance Company of Iowa, in dwelling upon "What's Right With Iowa's Policy," points out that 10,000 farms changed hands in Iowa last year and most of them were sales from neighbor to neighbor and many of them were at cash last March. In Carroll county, thirteen local farmers paid $376,679 for 1,312 acres of land—all cash. The lowest price for any one tract was $233 an acre; the highest $312. A story county farmer recently paid $250 an acre for another farm; he now owns three; all are clear, he made it all by farming. He multiplies instances like this to indicate the return of prosperity to agriculture.

Democrats to Direct Campaign From Hill

Capitol Hill will be headquarters of the Democrats in directing their campaign for the fall elections. Representative Oldfield, of Arkansas, chairman of the party's congressional campaign committee, announced yesterday. Oldfield will have charge of the drive for seats in the House, and Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, will lead the fight for a Democratic majority in the Senate.

Senator Swanson, of Virginia, and Representative McClintock, of Oklahoma, will direct activities of a joint speakers' bureau. All activities will be directed from the Senate and House office buildings.

FORMER U. S. CONSUL IS INVESTIGATED BY MEXICO

E. H. Thompson Is Alleged to Have Exported Antiquities He Found on His Farm.

Mexico City, July 10 (By A. P.).—Allegation that E. H. Thompson, former United States consul at Progreso, was responsible for the illegal removal of valuable archaeological treasures from Chichenitza to the Peabody museum in Boston and perhaps other American museums, are under investigation by Senor Ramon Ortega, undersecretary of the interior.

From official sources it is learned that Secretary of Education Puig Casarero asked for the investigation in a letter to Senor Ortega. Mexican law prohibits taking any archaeological trophies abroad. Mr. Thompson owns a ranch at Chichenitza, from which Senor Casarero was informed, ancient Maya pottery, statuary, jade work and jewels that had been excavated, were shipped to the United States. Under the law such finds should have become the property of the government.

Recent excavations have revealed many important details of the vanished Mayan civilizations in what is now the State of Yucatan. Senor Ortega expects to file charges against Mr. Thompson in the Mexican courts if he finds the charges justified.

U. S. Protests Suit In Mexico on Cattle

Mexico City, July 10 (By A. P.).—The American embassy has protested to the Mexican government against a suit involving 7,700 head of cattle owned by the United States War Finance Corporation, but pastured in the Mexican state of Chihuahua. The embassy was informed that a group of American gentlemen, whose names were not given, claimed a lien on the cattle and brought suit in Juarez, just across from El Paso, to title them. The embassy set forth that American citizens suing a branch of the United States government, should sue in American, and not Mexican courts.

Changes Announced By Veterans' Bureau

(By Associated Press.)

Three important personnel shifts made necessary by the recent death of Col. Charles E. Mulhearn, assistant director in charge of the claims adjudication service, have been announced by the Veterans' Bureau. Col. George B. Liams, assistant director in charge of supplies, was appointed in Col. Mulhearn's place. Maj. John C. Cutter, assistant to the director, was made assistant director in charge of supplies and A. D. Hiller, chief of the valuation division of the coordination service, was named assistant to Director Liams.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon Has a Slight Cold

Danville, Ill., July 10 (By A. P.).—"Uncle Joe" Cannon, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, is suffering from a bronchial cold at his home here. A physician Thursday night found Mr. Cannon with a slight fever and pulse not normal, but this morning the patient's condition was reported as decidedly improved.

CROPS IN U.S. UNDER TEN-YEAR AVERAGE CONDITION JULY 1

Department of Agriculture, in Forecast, Reports Drop of 6.4 Per Cent.

Basing its forecast on conditions July 1, the Department of Agriculture yesterday estimated the prospective harvest of important farm crops, declaring "the composite condition of all crops was 6.4 per cent below the average July condition during the last ten years."

The forecast included, in bushels: Corn, 2,560,780,000; winter wheat, 567,762,000; spring wheat, 199,595,000; and oats, 1,334,260,000. "There is still time for substantial improvement," the Federal crop reporting board said, "but, considering all crops, there is now little chance that yields per acre will equal those usually secured. The chief reason for the present unfavorable outlook has been deficient rainfall in portions of the north Central and Eastern States."

Corn Crop Backward.

The corn crop, the board said, is "generally uneven and backward" throughout the entire country, due to the late, cool season and deficient moisture over wide areas. With 101,074,000 acres set to the crop, the board disclosed that "chinch bugs are reported in unusual numbers in Kansas and Missouri" and that increases of acreage are reported in Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota and the Dakotas, while the other principal corn belt States show decreased acreages, or no change from last year. It placed the net increase in the twelve corn belt States at 582,000 acres.

A severe drought in South Dakota in the heavy spring wheat producing counties has brought a marked decline in that crop there, the board said, with only 10 per cent of 64 per cent of July 1 to 35 per cent. The indicated oats production was found to be nearly 11 per cent less than last year, which harvested 1,511,888 bushels, though slightly in excess of the five-year average production.

Rye Crop Lowest in Years.

The board placed the rye crop at "the lowest on record since 1866, excepting 1885 and 1887, with the acreage reduction chiefly in the Dakotas." The barley condition was termed "the lowest on July 1 for 15 years," with 190,959,000 bushels in prospect. "Pastures as a whole, show the poorest July 1 condition since 1911, with the single exception of last year," the board commented, adding that they are "poor in most of the North and North Central States, but are rather good in most of the South Central and Western States."

On the other hand, the board asserted that fruit prospects are "almost uniformly good." Apples, peaches and pears, it said, "each showed a condition on July 1, about 20 per cent higher than the average condition reported on that date during the last ten years."

Potato Acreage Increased.

A substantially increased potato acreage was reported from the Western States, with increased early potato planting in the South, but elsewhere the acreage has generally decreased. The board predicted a potato production of 324,044,000 bushels "unless prospects improve." On wheat at this time would be 8,000,000 bushels above last year's harvest, but 90,000,000 bushels below 1924's big crop. The sweet potato acreage registered a "substantial increase." The tobacco acreage, the board determined, "declined about 6 per cent in 1926 compared with 1925," and a prospective yield of 1,139,251,000 pounds, or 235,000,000 pounds below last year's final output.

Beet sugar production, the board said, shows a condition above average and acreage below last year, with a harvest in sight of $77,000 short tons.

DALTON, NEW FLEET HEAD, SEEKS PEACE IN SHIPPING BOARD

Overtures to Compose Differences Made to Plummer and Benson.

SUPPORT EXPECTED ON BIG QUESTIONS

Each Will Express His Own Opinion, General Says After Conference.

Overtures to compose differences in the shipping board were made yesterday by Brig. Gen. A. C. Dalton, new president of the fleet corporation, in conferences with Vice Chairman Plummer and Rear Admiral Benson, who voted against his appointment as successor to Capt. Elmer E. Crowley. Following the conferences, Plummer and Benson both said they had interesting talks with Gen. Dalton, but gave no indication that they would approve all his acts. As director of operations, Gen. Dalton will come in more intimate touch perhaps with Vice Chairman Plummer than any other member of the board. Mr. Plummer is the commissioner in charge of traffic, and as such must be consulted in assignment of vessels, the taking off of tonnage and other phases regarding actual makeup of the fleet.

Admiral Benson, as commissioner in charge of repairs, must also be frequently consulted by Gen. Dalton. The commissioner in charge of operations, however, is Chairman O'Connor, who has already expressed himself as completely in support of the new fleet corporation chief.

Dalton Expects Support.

Gen. Dalton said he had profitable interviews with Vice Chairman Plummer and Admiral Benson. He said he was certain the two commissioners would give him their support on the big questions that would come up, but admitted that he expected each to continue to express his own opinions and not be influenced in his votes by the majority members of the board. "Honest differences of opinion will always exist," Gen. Dalton said, "and the shipping service of the nation will profit by them rather than suffer. As president of the fleet corporation I shall work along with the shipping board, and be guided largely by the directions of that body. When I find that I cannot agree to this direction, I shall promptly sever my connection with the position of president."

Signs Board's Resignation.

Gen. Dalton signed the resignation which the board referred to him yesterday, and said he thoroughly agreed with this procedure. He pointed out that the fleet corporation was an organization created by the shipping board, and under the law the board must retain final authority. Regarding changes to be made in the personnel of the fleet corporation, Gen. Dalton said that he would take no hasty action. He has been supplied by G. K. Nichols, his chief assistant, with charts showing the organization of the various branches of the fleet corporation and with other data regarding the chiefs of the various divisions and other employees. This information, he said, would be studied with a view of determining how extensive his changes would be.

CUNNINGHAM GETS SENATE'S SUBPENA IN PRIMARY INQUIRY

Heavy Contributor to Vore Fund Served With Committee Order at Shore.

Must Answer Call at Chicago Meeting

Investigators to Begin Illinois Funds With Startling Evidence Reported.

By order of the Senate select committee on campaign expenditures, a subpoena was served yesterday on Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, one of the big contributors to the Vore campaign fund. The subpoena was served in Atlantic City, where Cunningham went yesterday, and was made returnable when the committee meets at Chicago July 26.

Cunningham, who is owner of a great fleet of taxicabs at Philadelphia, contributed $50,000 to the Vore campaign. Until today, he has succeeded in avoiding service. The committee was notified yesterday, however, that he was willing to be subpoenaed.

The committee, when it meets at Chicago, will not only take up the inquiry into Cunningham, but probably will clean up some other odds and ends of the Pennsylvania inquiry, including phases of the Antislavery league inquiry, and the inquiry into the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. It may, however, conclude to let these matters go until it returns to Washington.

Not Political Tool.

Apart from Illinois, the committee has no plans for investigation in other States. Members of the committee say they will conduct investigations in States where there is sufficient evidence to show expenditures have been excessive, but on the other hand will not, if they can help it, permit the committee to be used merely to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for senatorial candidates who want to embarrass other candidates.

Talk here is that the Illinois investigation will go deep into the workings of the Cook county machine, and the charges of gross corruption there, involving bootlegging operations, hiring of gangsters and the like. Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, recently made charges on the floor that enormous sums were expended in Illinois, and there is an impression in some quarters here that a situation in some respects worse than in Pennsylvania will be uncovered.

Two Recommended To High Air Posts

It was unofficially reported yesterday that Lieut. Col. William E. Gilmore and Frank P. Lahm, air corps, had been recommended to Secretary of War Davis for additional brigadier general's in the air corps, with Brig. Gen. James E. Fechet. Secretary of War Davis has taken no action on the recommendations as yet.

Under the new arrangement Col. Lahm would be in charge of air service operations and would probably have headquarters at Kelly Field, Tex. Col. Gilmore would be in charge of supply with headquarters in this city.

EXPEDITION DEPARTS THURSDAY FOR TRIP TO COLUMBIA RIVER

Delegates Will Visit Scenes in Northwest, Where History Was Made.

MONUMENT IN HONOR OF JOHN JACOB ASTOR

Private Train, Especially Equipped, Will Carry Guests to Historical Places.

Organized under the leadership of the governors and historical societies of six Northwestern States, the Columbia river historical expedition will leave Chicago Thursday for a 12-day tour of the Northwestern and Columbia river country where pioneer history was made.

A special train has been prepared by the Great Northern railroad and fitted out with every convenience to make the tour a vivid recollection of the events of pioneer history, the scenes of which will be revisited.

A group of distinguished historians and writers and the winners of the high school oratorical contests on "The French Pioneers in America" will make up the expedition. The governors of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, the historical societies of these States and the Franco-American division of the American Good Will association organized the expedition and are carrying it out.

Traveling College.

The train bearing the party will be something of a traveling college, with dormitories, dining halls, a library, museum, observatory, instructors, lecturers and every other convenience to bring the past fresh to the minds of the party. It will travel over the railroad that James J. Hill, "the Empire Builder," thrust out into that wilderness these early explorers had found beautiful so that it might become, as it has, the empire of the Northwest.

The journey will be known as the Columbia river historical expedition, because its destination is the Columbia river, discovered in 1792 by Robert Gray, an American sea captain; explored for a great part of its length by the Lewis and Clark expedition in 1804-06; for its entire length by David Thompson in 1811, and finally opened to trade by John Jacob Astor's Pacific Fur Company in 1811.

These men, Capt. Gray, Lewis and Clark and John Jacob Astor, will be honored by the historical expedition July 22 at ceremonies to be held on Coxcomb hill, Astor park, Astoria, Ore. Through the generosity of Vincent Astor, of New York, a descendant of John Jacob Astor, a column 125 feet high is being erected on Coxcomb hill.

Column as Memorial.

Spiraling up this column will be a ribbon-like frieze upon which will be carved a series of pictures portraying the discoveries of Capt. Gray, the explorations of Lewis and Clark, and various incidents in the building and settlement of old Fort Astoria, the fur trading post on the Pacific which established the claim of the United States to the territory of Oregon—that rich and beautiful territory that later became the States of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and part of Montana. But many other points of historic and historically romantic interest will be visited on the journey from St. Paul to Astoria and return. July 17 will be spent at Port Union, established in 1825 and generally regarded as the most important post in the entire region of the upper Missouri river. It was the headquarters post of John Jacob Astor's American Fur Company and the trade center for all the northwestern Indian tribes east of the Rocky Mountains. Its colorful past will be depicted during this visit by a pageant in which hundreds of Indians whose ancestors once traded there will take part.

On the following day, the party will visit Port Benton, Mont., second to Port Union in importance, and the Great Falls of the Missouri river, discovered by Lewis and Clark in 1805 and on which the city of Great Falls, Mont., was founded.

Dedicate Monument.

July 19, a monument will be dedicated at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, to commemorate the first route of trade and travel across what is now the State of Idaho and later in the day the party will arrive in Spokane and go by automobile to the summit of Mount Spokane from which may be seen the vast region in which Father De Smet and his Jesuit missionaries labored among the Indian tribes in 1842.

The next day will be spent on the banks of the Columbia, that once mythical river of the west which was searched for in vain by French, Spanish and English mariners and explorers for many years, but was discovered by the American, Capt. Gray. Many beautiful scenic and historically interesting points along this river will be visited and on the return trip from Astoria another stop will be made at Spokane to attend an Indian congress.

Saturday and Sunday, July 24 and 25, will be spent in Glacier National park and the journey will end in Chicago the night of July 27, after a day's travel out of St. Paul along the Mississippi river and through many points first visited by Marquette and Joliet.

One special car will be an exceptionally well equipped historical library. Another will be a museum filled with Northwest Indian relics and curios, tools, firearms and other implements used by explorers and early settlers, and still another will be a specially lighted art gallery containing heroic paintings of such memorable incidents in the building of the Northwest as Custer's massacre and other engagements.

Y. W. C. A.

Miss Minnie V. Sandberg, religious education secretary, will depart tomorrow to represent the Washington association at the Eastern community conference at Silver Bay, N. Y., July 13 to 23. Because of the discontinuance of the Eagles Mere community conference, Silver Bay will have a larger representation than formerly.

Leadership of the conference includes notable men and women. Miss Helen A. Davis, associate executive secretary of the national board, is the executive of the conference, and Miss Imogene Ireland, formerly connected with the national board, will lead the music. Special speakers will be the Rev. Robert Russell Wicks, of Holyoke, who will give a series of addresses on religion and Raymond Rich, of the Foreign Policy association, who will be the conference expert on international questions.

Some of the courses which have been specially requested for the conference and which will be given by national board leaders are: "Woman and Religion," by Miss Clarissa Spencer; "International Attitudes and Responsibilities," by Miss Katherine Gerwick; and one for mature industrial girls by Miss Lucy Carner.

Miss Marie L. Towle, secretary of the business and professional women's department, is heading a delegation from the Washington association to the east central business girls' conference at Newton Hamilton, Pa. Miss Ethel E. Wakefield, of the Tip Top club; Miss Mildred Crupper, of the Amelita club, and the Misses Margaret and Helen Gaylord, of the Wholo club, are with Miss Towle. Miss Kahler is having a most successful season. This week about 55 juniors and 6 seniors are guests at the camp, 4 of these from Baltimore.

The regular girl reserve program, under the direction of Miss Mabel Cook, is being carried out. The course in arts and crafts includes the making of cushion covers, the dyeing, basketry and stencil work, and has proved a popular feature of camp life. The music group meets regularly with Miss Jane Blinn.

Special events for this week include an evening launch ride, a picnic and a hike. The garden is supplying all the vegetables in season.

Vacation Lodge, the Y. W. C. A. summer home at Cherrydale, Va., can accommodate 45 young business women. Mrs. E. G. Prescott, Miss Alice Cox and Miss Helen Reed are week-end guests. Miss Desires Monks, Mrs. Galloway, Mrs. Sugg and Miss Scribner have joined the regular guests at the lodge for a part of the summer.

Miss Marian R. Miller, associate general secretary, will speak at the vesper service at Vacation Lodge this evening at 8 o'clock. Miss Grace Houghton is in charge of the service, assisted by Miss Helen Spraker.

The following staff members are departing for summer vacations: Miss Nellis S. Gist, of the business office, is passing a month in New York city and at Asbury Park. Miss Helen Fasset, of the residence staff, leaves July 15 for a two-week cruise before going to her home in Cranston, Pa., for the remainder of her vacation. Mrs. Carrie Carney, assistant cafeteria director, will pass her vacation with her sister in Kalamazoo, Mich., leaving the middle of the month.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Y. W. C. A. will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at 214 E street northwest. The president, Mrs. Thomas Edwin Brown, will preside.

Savage

Then you can have your wash out on the line long before your neighbor's. While she is still struggling through the processes of washing, wringing, rinsing and blueing, you can be halfway through the rest of your house work—perhaps finished!

No longer need women be content with washing clothes in the old-time way. The wise housewife turns a hard, unpleasant job into something easily and quickly accomplished—she uses a Super-Tested Savage Washer and Dryer!

The Spin Rinse-Spin Dry principle makes the Super-Tested Savage the fastest washer and dryer in the world.

The Super-Tested Savage is the superior washing machine. It washes, blues, rinses and dries the clothes in practically a continuous operation. No need to put your hands into hot water. No piece-by-piece handling; for there is no wringer—the clothes are spun dry. No after-the-wash sewing; for the Spin Rinse-Spin Dry method has never been known to tear off a button, smash a hook-and-eye or flatten a snap button.

Test the Savage in your home. No obligation, of course. Watch the Spin Dry-Spin Rinse principle in operation. Then you will understand why housewives the country over have found the Super-Tested Savage to be the ideal washer and dryer.

Divorced Wife Charges Assault; Asks $15,000

Mrs. Lillian Melnicov, actress and cabaret entertainer, of Philadelphia and Atlantic City, formerly of this city, who says her outing July 4, at Red Hot, Md., was completely spoiled by the sudden appearance of her former husband, Samuel Melnicov, filed suit against him yesterday in circuit court to recover $15,000 damages for alleged assault and battery.

Through Attorneys Madison L. Hill, J. William Shea and M. J. Colburn, the plaintiff says her eyes were blackened and that she was rendered unconscious. Melnicov conducts a men's furnishing store at 421 Ninth street northwest. He is said to have remarried after the divorce in this city.

Woman Files New Suit Asking $200,000

Miss Mary A. Ruthven, East Clifton Terrace apartments, who filed nine lawsuits on June 29 asking a total of $1,100,000 damages from various District and Federal officials, filed another suit yesterday in circuit court demanding $200,000 more damages.

The National Doctors association, the District Doctors association, the American Medical association and the Washington Medical and Surgical association are the defendants in the tenth lawsuit. The plaintiff spent some time at St. Elizabeth's hospital before she was adjudged sane, in July, 1924. She charges conspiracy, false imprisonment and many other things. She appears to have a difficult time getting a suit

500 DISTRICT POOR TO PASS 2 WEEKS AT PATUXENT CAMP

First Party of 70 Mothers and Children Will Go There Tomorrow.

TWO SWIMMING POOLS TO BE MADE AVAILABLE

Recreation Center, Run by Salvation Army, Still Needs Funds.

The Salvation Army's fresh air camp at Patuxent, Md., will open tomorrow when a party of 70 poor Washington mothers and children will arrive for a two-week vacation. Six other parties of 70 or more each will follow during the summer. Enlarged and improved, the camp will receive more than 500 of Washington's poor this summer. Two swimming pools will greet the kiddies, one a natural pool made by damming a small creek near the camp and the other a concrete pool 52 feet in length.

In announcing the opening, Brigadier William H. Barrett, divisional commander, emphasized the special care to be given undernourished children. They will have a special diet designed to rebuild them.

Train Goes at 1:15 P. M.

The train carrying the first party will leave Union station at 1:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Salvation Army officers will conduct the party and supervise the camp. The camp program provides the children rise daily at 7 o'clock, take setting-up exercises for fifteen minutes and get to breakfast at 7:45. The remainder of the morning will be passed in swimming and games of every description. After lunch the same program prevails. In the evening entertainment has been arranged.

Brig. Barrett states he will welcome at the camp people from Washington who can put on shows or "stunts" to entertain the children at night.

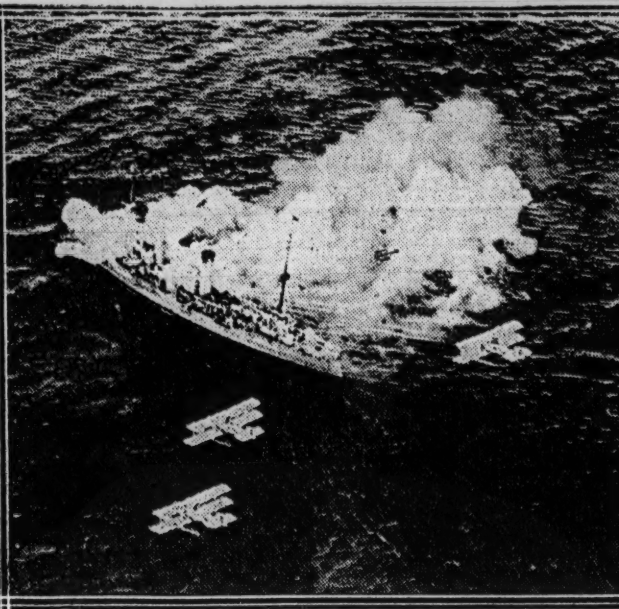

Applications for admission to the camp this year far exceeded last year. Brig. Barrett says every one applying will be cared for this year.

Thousands in Improvements.

Several thousand dollars has been spent in improving the camp. The swimming pool has been enlarged, additional recreational facilities provided and dormitories enlarged. "The camp is as well if not better equipped than any in or near Washington," Brig. Barrett says. Funds to maintain the camp are needed. An appeal for $5,500 brought only $3,500. Three thousand dollars is still needed.

Brig. Barrett last night sent out an urgent appeal. Contributions should be sent to the army's headquarters at 607 E street northwest.

AWARDS OFFERED TO HELP NEGROES IN CREATIVE WORK

Advances in Music, Art, Science and Education Are to Be Recognized.

Awards offered by the Harmon foundation, "to give annual recognition and stimulus to creative work among negroes," will be made by judges prominent in the fields of music, art, science, education, religion and business. It was announced yesterday by the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches, which has been asked to administer the awards. These judges will consider nominations and make awards to negroes of American residence who have made creative achievements in seven major fields of endeavor, and also to a candidate, white or negro, who has made an outstanding achievement in race relations. Two prizes will be given, $400 and $100 in each field except race relations, where the prize will be $500 and a gold medal.

Nominations End August 1.

The period for making nominations or filing applications is open until August 1. Names of successful candidates will be announced about December 1. Included among the judges are the following:

Literature—W. S. Braithwaite, of the Boston Transcript; Henry G. Leach, of the Forum; Joel E. Spingarn, John H. Finley and Mrs. Adele L. Ramsdell.

Music—Harry T. Burleigh, Clarence Dickinson, Preston W. Orem and Miss Edith Fremdling.

Fine arts—William A. Borah, of Columbia university; Meta W. Fuller, of Grosvener Artterbury and William E. Harmon.

Industry—Robert R. Moton, Sam A. Lewisohn and Henry S. Dennison. Science and invention—Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, Dr. E. E. Just, Jacob H. Hollander, of Johns Hopkins university, and Kenneth Duncan.

Dr. Devine Named.

Education—President John Hope, of Morehouse college; Edward T. Devine, of American university; Paul Monroe, of Columbia university; James H. Dillard and Samuel McCune Lindsey.

Religion—Channing H. Tobias, Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, Luther A. Weigle, the Rev. Peter Ainslie and Miss Edith M. Burdick.

Race relations—Mrs. F. F. Stephens, president of the Women's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Bishop R. E. Jones, Dr. Alva W. Taylor, Samuel McCune Lindsey and Dean Shailer Mathews, of Chicago Theological seminary.

Applications or nominations of candidates may be submitted until August 1 to Dr. George E. Haynes, of the commission on church and race relations, 105 East Twenty-second street, New York.

Gen. Fries to Speak On School Changes

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical service, originator of the proposition of longer study hours and elimination of home study in public schools, will appear before the meeting of the Rhode Island Association of Citizens' Association at the next meeting July 28 and present his arguments in favor of the proposed changes.

At the last meeting of the association Miss Rose Hardy, director of primary education in the public schools, took a neutral stand in the discussion of the matter. The association intends to give the proposition careful consideration.

MARYLAND, DISTRICT U.S. TAX PAYMENTS TOTAL $47,453,279

Income Levy Receipts Bring $40,836,908; Miscellaneous, $6,616,370.

COLLECTIONS EXCEED THOSE OF LAST YEAR

New York and Pennsylvania Pay Largest Amounts, Report Shows.

Taxpayers of the District of Columbia and Maryland paid to the Federal government $40,836,908.62 in income taxes and $6,616,370.42 in miscellaneous taxes, a total of $47,453,279.04, during the fiscal year 1926, according to receipts made public by the bureau of internal revenue yesterday.

Income tax collections for the District and Maryland for the fiscal year 1926 amounted to $37,591,146.65, it was announced. The internal revenue receipts figures were based on collectors' telegraphic reports of June 30, 1926, and are subject to some change.

Exceed Last Year.

Total collections from all sources for the fiscal year 1926 were $2,836,112,899.68, as compared with $2,584,140,288.34 for the fiscal year 1925. The total income tax collection for the United States for the fiscal year 1926 was $1,761,559,049.51.

Internal revenue receipts for Virginia for the fiscal year 1926 follows: Income tax, $17,827,071.38; miscellaneous tax, $42,890,032.86; total, $60,717,104.25. The income tax paid by Virginia for the fiscal year 1926 was $15,303,807.61.

The largest collections were from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, North Carolina, Ohio and California, in the order named. The total receipts, income and miscellaneous taxes for the fiscal year 1926 follow: New York, $753,072,866.87; Pennsylvania, $251,982,600.86; Michigan, $225,455,226.68; Illinois, $216,511,969.11; North Carolina, $192,218,281.20; Ohio, $155,494,482.30; California, $134,841,398.85.

Collections from the tobacco tax, which is included in the miscellaneous tax of North Carolina, accounts for the large receipts from that State. The smallest tax receipts for the fiscal year 1926 were from Nevada, with a total collection of $566,587.86.

222 More Are Killed By Sumatra Quakes

Amsterdam, Holland, July 10 (By A. P.).—Central Sumatra, scene of a series of recent earthquakes, was shaken by several fresh quakes yesterday, according to reports received here today from Padang.

The governor general of the Dutch East Indies, in a telegram sent yesterday, gave the number of quake victims in the Padang-Pandjang district as 222.

First reports of earthquakes in central Sumatra were received on June 30 and have been followed by dispatches describing additional quakes. The number of dead in the affected districts was placed at 400.

Umpire of Mexican Claims Body Quits

Mexico City, July 10 (By A. P.).—Dr. Rodrigo Octavio, neutral umpire of the Mexican American claims commission, who became the storm center in the recent Santa Isabel claims decision against the United States, has resigned, says an announcement by the Mexican foreign office tonight.

The statement says the Mexican government had accepted his resignation. The Brazilian jurist gave as reason for his action the high altitude of Mexico City which disagreed with his health.

Taken to Cemetery, Gem Dealer Robbed

Lima, Ohio, July 10 (By A. P.).—Forcing his automobile into the early morning gloom of a cemetery 2 1/2 miles south of Lima, three bandits today held up Jack M. Worst, a jewelry salesman of Dayton, and robbed him of $22,000 worth of diamonds.

Use Radio to Seek Missing Salesman

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Relatives today appealed to Sheriff Huffer to broadcast descriptions of Harry S. Christman, 50, a salesman of Williamsport, Md., missing two weeks.

He was last heard from at Elkington, Va. His family fears he has been a victim of foul play or amnesia.

Rites for J. Edward Smith.

Purcellville, Va., July 10.—Funeral services were held here today for J. Edward Smith, for many years a resident of Hamilton, who died at his home in Washington Tuesday. Mr. Smith was a native of Loudoun county, where he was a prosperous merchant for many years. He is survived by several children, a sister and four brothers, all of Washington. Interment was made in Hamilton cemetery, this county.

ARREARS OF STATES IN FEDERAL PLACES HERE ARE EXPLAINED

Low Salaries, Distance and Soldier Preferences Are Causes, Deming Says.

APPORTIONMENT LAW HAS NEGATIVE CLAUSE

Conditions of Good Administration Considered by the Civil Service Body.

World war, preference for merit men, low salaries, and the location in the various distant States all enter into the reason for the recent congressional protest over an alleged preponderance of civil servants from the District and bordering States.

That many States are not taking advantage of their civil service allotments is shown in a statement by William C. Deming, president, United States civil service commission, yesterday, explaining why the commission did not approve the plan recently proposed whereby in reductions of force in the government service, separations were to be restricted to persons whose States are in excess of their quotas as determined under the apportionment rule.

Highest Grades Consulted.

The civil service act, Mr. Deming explained, requires that selections for appointment shall be made from among those graded highest as the result of competitive examinations. The act also requires that appointments to the public service in the departments at Washington shall be apportioned among the States and Territories and the District on the basis of population.

The two provisions of the civil service act cited in the foregoing paragraph are somewhat conflicting if each were to be followed independently, but they are qualified by the phrase, "as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant."

The main reason why the apportionment of certain States is in excess is the unattractiveness of the many low-salaried positions in the government service at Washington to residents of States in arrears. In a recent examination for junior and an assistant messenger, for instance, the salary range of which is from $600 to $900 a year, only 17 eligibles were obtained from States in arrears, while 108 eligibles were secured from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, which have an excess of appointments over the number to which the apportionment entitles them, showing that only a small percentage of appointments in this case can be made from the States in arrears.

Preference for Veterans.

Another cause for the disturbance of the apportionment, which Mr. Deming cited, is the direction of Congress that in making appointments preference shall be given to honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines, the cer-tification of such preferred eligibles not to be restricted by the apportionment.

Still another factor which brought about the present condition of the apportionment, particularly as regards Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, is the world war. Although the commission certified under the apportionment to fill positions in the departments at Washington during the period of the war, it was necessary to certify all the eligibles that could be obtained.

If any State now in arrears had furnished sufficient eligibles at that time to bring its quota up to an excess in the same proportion as Maryland, Virginia or the District, there is little doubt that it would still be in excess. During the war, more than 40 emergency executive orders were issued permitting appointments in a number of offices to be made without regard to the civil service rules. The positions covered by these orders were later brought within the classified apportionment service by executive order and under these thousands of persons from the District and nearby States were employed.

Men of Attainments Here.

There are in the District a large number of positions requiring scientific, technical or professional attainments. These positions include the grades of chemist, physicist, engineer, agriculturist, patent examiner and draftsman, etc., and a considerable number of States in arrears under the apportionment do not furnish eligibles of this kind, having the requisite qualifications, although examinations for these positions are always held in such States.

Generally speaking, States that are the most remote from the District are the farthest in arrears.
For example, California is entitled to more than 1,000 appointments, but has received fewer than 350.
Arkansas is entitled to more than 500, and has received about 150.
The reasons for this difference are apparently the natural disinclination of people to accept permanent appointment at great distances from their home associations, and the low entrance salaries ordinarily attaching to many positions in government service.

"The commission has always closely observed the apportionment rules in certifying eligibles from its registers," Mr. Deming said, "and at the same time has endeavored to recruit sufficient eligibles from States in arrears. A short time ago articles were published in the newspapers of one of the States in arrears, in which attention was called to the fact that residents of that State constitute 94 per cent of the country's population, but slightly less than 1 per cent of applicants for civil service positions. It was pointed out to the citizens of that State that the passing examination with high rat-appointment to government positions under civil service rules.

Restricted by Efficiency.

"Under the present law, a separation due to reduction in force from the apportionment service in the District of Columbia, subject to the classification act of 1923, is restricted by the efficiency rating of the employee plus credits for length of service and dependents.

"To add the still further restriction of observing the apportionment would have practically no effect in maintaining the apportionment, because such separations total only a few hundred annually and a large share of the persons dropped even under practice are from the States in excess and the District.

"The commission believes that any arbitrary factor employed in reduction of force, such as an employee's legal residence, tends to discourage efficiency, destroy morale, and lower the standard of work," he concluded.

The Hedra resolution applying apportionment law to reductions in force in the departmental service has been approved by the Senate, but it has failed to receive consideration by the House and is now upon the calendar.

FARM TRACTOR PRICES AND SLAVES COMPARED

Study at Maryland University Shows They Are About on Par.

OLD RECORDS DRAWN ON

College Park, Md., July 10.—A tractor of fair size and good quality can now be purchased for the price of an able-bodied slave in 1850, says R. F. Hale, who is representing the United States Department of Agriculture and the University of Maryland experiment station in a study of farm economic conditions of a half century or more ago.

"It is interesting," says Mr. Hale, "to speculate on the economic progress measured by these two extremes in meeting labor conditions on the farm. How would the economic output of an able-bodied slave, for instance, compare with the work performed by a modern tractor? Aside from the ethical and moral questions involved, how many modern farmers, if they had a choice, would prefer to invest their money in human rather than machine labor?"

In 1850, however, there was no choice and the plantation owner listed his slaves as part of his valuable assets. An inventory of personal property on the tobacco plantation of a land owner in the southern part of Prince Georges county listed the following slaves, according to their age and value, in 1850:
Tom, age 37, $550; Jim, age 14,
$300; Nell, age 28, $150; and Minnie, age 3, $50.

Other interesting sidelights showing economic progress of the last 50 or 100 years, are expected to result from the study of farm prices in Maryland during earlier days.
Those who have knowledge of old farm records, account books or diaries containing prices, will assist materially in the study by notifying

WOLVERINE, NAVY'S FIRST IRON VESSEL, SOUGHT BY ERIE, PA.

Paddle Boat Gave Valuable Civil War Service; Is Now Condemned.

EMPLOYED RECENTLY IN TRAINING RESERVISTS

Vessel Contains Fifth Steam Engine Purchased by Government.

The U. S. S. Wolverine, first iron vessel and fifth steam-propelled man-of-war built for the navy, has found a home. Condemned for naval purposes by a board of inspection and survey, the historic ship will probably be given to the city of Erie, Pa., which has asked Congress for it. Originally named the Michigan, the Wolverine has been on the Great Lakes since 1844.

The building of the Wolverine was unique. Built in sections at Pittsburgh, parts were transported on barges through the Erie canal to Erie, where the ship was assembled and launched. It was commissioned as the U. S. S. Michigan, a name which it bore until June 17, 1905, when this name was given the then newest American dreadnaught.

This paddle-wheel steamer of 10 knots speed was the most powerful fighter of the Great Lakes navy for 50 years, and its engines are the sole remaining ones of the early steam navy. The port engine of the old ship was damaged badly when last used in 1922, but the starboard engine is in good condition, and as a historical relic shows the progress and evolution of marine engineering.

Four Engines Preceded It.

But four steam engines built for the navy antedated those of the Wolverine. The first was the USS Demologos, later named the Fulton, which was designed and built by Robert Fulton in 1815 and was destroyed by a magazine explosion at the Brooklyn navy yard in 1829. The Fulton II, built in 1827, was the second steam-propelled ship of the navy, and this vessel, falling into the hands of the Confederates when Pensacola navy yard was abandoned, was destroyed in 1862, when that navy yard was retaken by Union forces. Steam engines built in 1842 for the ships Missouri and Mississippi, were lost when the former was destroyed by fire at Gibraltar in 1843, and when the latter ship was sunk by gunfire at the battle of Port Hudson in 1863.

At the time of the commissioning of the Wolverine, protests were made by the British government that the ship's armament violated the Rush-Bagot treaty of 1817. This treaty practically abolished naval forces on the Great Lakes provided that each government should maintain not more than three small men-of-war on the Great Lakes, and one on Lake Champlain, and that each vessel should be limited to 118-pound cannon. Over the observance of this latter point, there were numerous exceptions taken either by Great Britain or by the United States involving changes of many diplomatic notes in 1844, 1857, and in 1861.

The Michigan was commanded during the civil war by Commander John C. Carter, and served as an aid to recruiting and as a patrol vessel to protect the lake borders from attempted raids and transportation of arms across from Canada by Confederate agents. It also guarded Johnson's Island in Lake Erie, where a great number of prisoners were held. Uneasiness was occasioned the United States government by the efforts of the Confederate agents, and the inadequacy of the limited naval forces on the Canadian frontier to meet the constant raiding, and arms trafficking became more and more apparent.

Raid Frustrated.

In September, 1864, Commander Carter received notice of an intended raid by rail and boat from Canada, to cooperate with a party in Sandusky, Ohio, in an effort to release the Confederate prisoners on Johnson's Island. The capture of the Michigan also was to be attempted. Boats to effect this were seized by Confederate agents, but prompt action of Commander Carter obliged them to be sunk and the principal agents and many of their accomplices were taken prisoners and brought aboard the Michigan. The attention of the Canadian government with the capture of the merchant vessels, Philo Parson and Island Queen, near Detroit, by an armed band from the Canadian town of Malden and also a raid upon St. Alban's, Vt., by a band of desperate men from Canada, resulted in a decision to increase the American naval forces on the Great Lakes to meet the gravity of the situation. In an interchange of notes, initiated by Secretary Seward, charges of inefficiency in enforcing neutrality laws were made against the British only to be met with counter charges. The final notes on the subject accepted the American viewpoint that the right of self-preservation would be exercised to the fullest extent by the increase of defensive armament on the Great Lakes or any necessary limit until such times as the emergency ceased to exist.

This policy has remained effective during the intervening years. After the close of the civil war, the Michigan's battery was reduced to treaty restrictions and it became the training ship for the naval militia of Pennsylvania. Acting as such, it had at various times carried reservists and naval militiamen of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois in addition to the Pennsylvania units.

7 of Millionaire Family Cross Ocean Third Class

Paris, July 10 (By A. P.).—Seven members of the millionaire Cannon family, of Concord, N. C., have arrived in Paris after traveling third class on the steamship Leviathan in order to be with friends unable to make a more expensive trip.

The members of one of the wealthiest families in the South were headed by Archie Cannon, cotton manufacturer. Their appearance in the third class of the Leviathan caused much interest among their fellow passengers traveling economically.

Among those in the Cannon party were Mrs. E. T. Cannon, Mrs. J. L. Cannon, daughter of M. E. Borden, former president of the Atlantic Coast Line, and Franklin and Archie Cannon, Jr.

CAPT. BROAD WINS KING'S CUP IN 27-H. P. PLANE

Lieut. Scholefield Second in 450-H. P. Flier, Making
142 Miles an Hour.

WINNER'S AVERAGE 90.4

Hendon, England, July 10 (By A. P.).—Capt. Hubert S. Broad, who represented Great Britain in the competition for the Schneider trophy last fall, won the annual airplane race for the king's cup, which started here yesterday. Only five of the original fifteen starters finished.

Lieut. Scholefield came second, only sixteen seconds behind the winner. The distance was about 1,464 miles, and the handicap was so arranged that the small machines making a low average per hour had an equal opportunity to the high-powered machines. Capt. Broad drove Sir Charles Wakefield's 27-horsepower Moth. His average speed was 90.4 miles, considered a wonderful performance for such a small machine. Lieut. Scholefield drove a 450-horsepower Vickers, making an average speed of 142 miles an hour, but he was not able to overcome the handicap which had been allowed the smaller airplanes.

GEODETIC SURVEY TO STUDY QUAKE

Causes of Volcanic Activity in Hawaii Also to Be Inquired Into.

(By Associated Press.)

To throw some light on the causes of volcanic activity and earthquakes on the Hawaiian Islands, the coast and geodetic survey will send a party to the islands next December to study the value of gravity at the craters of Kilauea and Mauna Loa, and at the seaport town of Hilo.

The party will be in charge of Edwin J. Brown, who also will take part in the longitudinal determinations at Honolulu in October. The gravity determinations are to be made at the discretion of Dr. A. J. Jagger, Jr., director of the Volcano house at Kilauea, which is under the jurisdiction of the geological survey. An account of the behavior of the lava pool at Kilauea is being kept by Dr. Jagger, who notes its rise and fall and its degree of explosiveness. He also keeps track of the many earthquakes on the island and is making a study of the rise and fall of the ground in many sections.

VOLCANIC BREAKERS SWAMP FINLEY BOAT

Much Equipment Lost by Expedition in Waters of Arctic Circle.

(By Associated Press.)

Swamped in the breakers off Unimak Island, Alaska, during a spectacular night eruption of Shishaldin volcano, the American Nature Association expedition, headed by William L. Finley, the naturalist, lost much of its equipment and supplies on July 7, but all hands got safely ashore. Mr. Finley reported the misadventure to the association yesterday in a telegram filed at St. Paul, Alaska. Campbell Church, of Eugene, Ore., owner of the yacht Westward, on which the expedition sailed, was in the captured boat with Capt. Grove and Engineer Hankins. In another boat safely beached, but with difficulty, were Mr. and Mrs. Finley, Betty Church, Campbell Church Jr., and Dr. Gilbert, an expert from the Federal fisheries bureau. The expedition sailed from Seattle last month to take pictures below the arctic circle and make a motion picture record of the salmon industry and the seals on Pribilof Islands.

Mosquitoes Spoil Army Rifle Work

Mosquitoes mar marksmanship in Porto Rico, where the sniper is being sniped. A target practice report reaching the War Department yesterday from the 65th Infantry at San Juan, P. R., states, "Aside from the heat experienced during the month, the mosquitoes have been so thick as to seriously interfere with the efficiency of the work."

Details are omitted and War Department officials are wondering whether clouds of mosquitoes obscured the targets or whether marksmanship was afflicted with disaster from the mosquito either on the front sight or on the rifle-man's nose.

FENNING IS CALLED TO ANSWER ACTION OF FORMER WARD

Must Show Cause Why Allen Proceedings Should Not Be Set Aside.

CASE WAS ASSIGNED AFTER APPOINTMENT

Patient, Declared Sane, Wants Report of Hearings Taken From Records.

Commissioner Fenning was ordered yesterday by District Supreme Court Justice Boehling to show cause July 13 why all the proceedings in which Lieut. Frank D. Allen was found insane should not be set aside.

Allen was formally one of the commissioner's wards, Fenning having acquired his case since becoming commissioner, and there was testimony before the House judiciary committee that he cited his commission as grounds for his trustworthiness when negotiating for the case. The commissioner said he cited his official position to show that he would not have much time to devote to the case.

Allen, who fought his commitment to St. Elizabeths from the beginning, finally got the services of Attorney George R. Quinn, and as a result was found sane by a jury, and now Mr. Curtis wants to remove any trace of the original proceedings. If he is sustained in one point, that the law prohibits St. Elizabeths alienists from testifying in a case to be committed to their care, the great bulk of Mr. Fenning's cases will have been conducted irregularly.

The Allen case was cited in the congressional hearings as emphasizing the viciousness of Mr. Fenning's ex parte proceedings. He had Allen haled into court and declared a lunatic, purporting to be his counsel. Allen was insisting he was sane, and that his case was a difficult one is evidenced by the fact that he was not adjudged insane until a second hearing. He had no expert testimony offered in his behalf. Dr. Mains and Silks asserted that he was suffering from paresis and the jury finally accepted their diagnosis.

Mr. Curtis got two medical men to say that he was suffering from paresis, so with the score tied the later jury decided in his favor. It was not disclosed that the ex parte proceedings worked to the detriment of the patient, as the Veterans Bureau adjudged them insane and gave them compensation accordingly. The jury trials which Mr. Fenning subsequently got for them was a difficulty, so to speak, in order that he could become guardian. If any of them should by any chance have been declared sane, then they would not have been entitled to compensation.

FENNING DISAGREES OVER QUITTING POST

Was not definitely known, Frank J. Hogan, one of his counsel, is still out of the city, but Levi P. Cooke, another member of his counsel, has returned. It is not known that Mr. Fenning looked upon these men as political advisers. The impression had been given that they defended him merely in his impeachment case.

Supported by Hogan, Mr. Hogan, however, it is recalled, is credited with activity in the commissioner's behalf before his case reached the judiciary committee.

All day yesterday Commissioner Fenning's telephone rang with inquiries after his health, following publication of a dispatch from White Pine camp that the President had heard the commissioner would presently vacate office due to illness. If Mr. Fenning retires, it is said, it will not be because of ill health.

"It is not pleasant to be considered a dead one," was his comment. "I have not much to say at my office because of lack of physical fitness. Neither for that or any other reason am I considering resigning in the near future."

Willing to Resign.

Mr. Fenning said he could not bring himself to believe, as someone had suggested to him, that the White House spokesman had indulged in a hint that the commissioner's resignation would be welcome.

"The President has not impressed me as a man who hints. If he wants my resignation, he has only to ask for it to get it. I think he knows that, and I think he would do that, if he wanted it. No information has come to me directly or indirectly that he wishes me to step out."

It is common knowledge that Commissioner Fenning has contemplated retiring for not less than three years. He has told many callers in the past that he took his last appointment with an understanding with Mrs. Rudolph that he would resign at the end of a year so that they could embark on a trip around the world they have long desired to take.

Retirement Held Up.

When the year was up, however, the late Commissioner Oyster was ill and unable to attend to his duties. This thrust added work on Commissioner Fenning, and he gave up his plan of retiring. When Mr. Oyster died and Commissioner Fenning was appointed, he revived his plan of retiring, but in the institution of congressional investigation of the affairs of the District

Dawes' Terrier Eats Firecrackers and Dies

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.). Merigo, a fox terrier owned by Vice President Dawes, is dead because he celebrated the Fourth of July too zealously.

Mr. Dawes, returning to his Evanston home from the East today, was met with the news that the animal, brought here from Washington by other members of the family, had died this morning. At first thought to have been poisoned, it later was found that Merigo had been eating unexploded firecrackers last Monday.

The Vice President, with Mrs. Dawes, returned for the summer, ready for a few speeches later in continuance of his campaign for revision of the Senate rules. He came from Boston after an address at Salem, Mass. He and Mrs. Dawes were greeted at the station by their adopted daughter, Virginia, and his banking associates.

TRUSTEES STUDY BIDS FOR KANSAS CITY STAR

Eight Offers Are Received, but None Are Made Public Officially.

MAY DECIDE THURSDAY

Kansas City, July 10 (By A. P.). Trustees of the William Rockwell Nelson trust spent all day today interviewing prospective purchasers of the Kansas City Star and Times and analyzing eight offers for the property laid before them yesterday, preparatory to making a definite award probably next Thursday.

The conferees were mainly to clear up technical questions concerning the offers, no revisions being permitted, it was said. No announcements were made as to the identity of the eight prospective buyers or the amounts offered.

Those who announced that they had submitted offers were: F. C. Bonfile, publisher of the Denver Post; Luke Lea, of the Nashville Tennessean; Walter S. Dickey, owner of the Kansas City Journal-Rochester; Frank E. Gannett, owner of the Rochester, N. Y., Times-Union; and Irwin Kirkwood, editor of the Kansas City Star.

Clyde M. Reed, former chairman of the Kansas public utility commission and editor of the Parson Sun, was in conference with the trustees yesterday when bids were received. These include Ralph Booth, head of a chain of newspapers in Michigan operated by the Booth Publishing Co. in Detroit; Herschel V. Jones, owner of the Minneapolis Journal; Roy Howard, publisher of Scripps-Howard newspapers; Frank P. Glass, of St. Louis, formerly one of the owners of the St. Louis Star, and Elzey Roberts, one of the present owners of the St. Louis Star.

Mexican Officers Begin Course

Maj. Cantano and Lieut. Morilla, of the Mexican army, have reported at Fort Humphreys, Va., and have been attached to the Thirtieth engineers for duty pending the opening of the September, of engineers' school, which they will attend as students.

operated to push retirement plans into the background again. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph do not plan to begin their world tour until next summer. His present term expires April 15. With rumors he circulated that he will soon step out, it becomes probable that he will answer his critics and the rumors by serving out his term.

Helmeck Would Accept. Maj. Gen. Eli A. Helmeck, inspector general, U. S. A., said yesterday that if he received from President Coolidge an offer of a District Commissioner in the event of Commissioner Fenning's resignation, he would accept it and retire from the army before September 27, 1927, date of his retirement under the 40-year service regulation.

In discussing the matter, Maj. Gen. Helmeck said that he felt that citizenship in Washington for a number of years, his interest in civil affairs and his experience in them through his presidency of the Cathedral Heights Citizens association, would result in giving his best efforts to the office.

The Cathedral Heights Citizens association has written the President urging the appointment of Gen. Helmeck. Four outstanding considerations prompted the association, according to the letter submitted by Hugh M. Frampton, its president. They were:

"Our people are of the opinion that the duties of such office can best be served by one closely and actively identified with the civic organization and interests of the District."

"We would prefer the services of one without outside interests, in order that he may devote his entire time and attention to his commission duties."

"We would prefer the services of one not identified or representative of a particular group."

"We believe appointment should receive city-wide endorsement."

The army record of Gen. Helmeck, particularly that which emphasized his organizing and executive ability, was set forth.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUS LINE EXTENSION UP TO COMMISSION

Coach Company Head to Petition for the Privilege of New Routes.

DEDICATE MEMORIAL CHURCH PEW TODAY

Northern Virginia Odd Fellows Meet on Tuesday to Plan Convention.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST

In an effort to extend bus service through Arlington county, Leon Arnold, president of the Washington, Maryland & Virginia Coach Co., announced last night he will petition the State corporation commission to be allowed to extend his lines through Ashton Heights and Lyon Park. The petition, he stated, will be filed with the commission tomorrow morning.

The petition, he stated, will be filed with the commission tomorrow morning. The commission will be held at the home of Robert A. Ryland, 1010 14th St. N. W., at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. Allen Castieman, Episcopal church, will be the principal speaker at the unveiling of a new in memory of Robert E. Lee, of the Falls Church chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, today at 5 o'clock.

Following the unveiling of the monument to Lee, the Falls Church and Fairfax chapters, Daughters of the American Revolution, will unveil a new in memory of George Washington.

The conferees will open with a special service by the church choir. The exercises will be held at the home of Robert A. Ryland.

Plans for the annual convention of the Odd Fellows Association of Northern Virginia, to be held at Clarendon September 25, will be discussed at a meeting Tuesday night of the officers of the association and delegates to the convention. The meeting will be held at the Odd Fellows temple, Clarendon, at 8 o'clock.

The board of supervisors of Arlington county will hold its meeting tomorrow at the courthouse, with Chairman E. C. Turnbuck presiding. Convening at 10 o'clock, the board will order payment of all bills. At the afternoon session, opening at 2 o'clock, the board will receive the various delegations with their complaints, and will also dispose of other county business.

State Commander George K. Bender, of the Macabees of Virginia, installed the newly elected officers of the Robert E. Lee lodge, of Arlington county, at a large attended meeting last night in the Clarendon community hall.

Officers of Arlington live installed were Mrs. Elizabeth K. Taylor, past commander; Mrs. Effie E. Havenner, commander; Miss Mabel F. Davidson, lieutenant commander; Mrs. Josephine M. Woodland, record keeper; P. D. Hatcher, chaplain; Mrs. Naomi P. Hatcher, nurse; Mrs. Maude D. Marcey, sergeant; Mrs. Alta L. Lawrence, treasurer.

CATHOLICS PLANNING TOTAL ABSTINENCE REVIVAL CAMPAIGN

Church Union Says Present Is Critical Moment in Move Against Alcoholism.

TO LAUNCH MOVE AT AUGUST CONVENTION

Seminary Priest Issues Plea for All Branch Societies to Attend Sessions.

Describing the present as a critical moment in the world movement against alcoholism, the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America has launched a movement for the revival of total abstinence societies throughout the country.

Plans for this revival will be brought to a head at the fifty-fifth annual convention of the union, which will be held in Washington August 9, 10 and 11, visiting delegates to be the guests of the subordinate union of the District of Columbia, of which William H. DeLacy, former judge of the District juvenile court, is president.

The Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan, of the Catholic Home Missionary seminary, Oakland, N. J., is president of the national organization, and has issued a call for every member to do his utmost to bring about an extension of the membership of existing subordinate unions and the organization of others where there are now none.

Urges Safeguarding Ideals.

"At this critical moment in the world movement against alcoholism," Father O'Callaghan said, "it is important that every society of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, which is devoted to its great purpose and committed to its traditional methods, should see to it that the ideals which it has maintained through half a century shall be safeguarded."

"It is our faith that the greatest service which can be rendered to the holy cause of temperance in these days is to be given through the revival of abstinence societies which have been inactive and the organization of new societies devoted to the principles and methods of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America."

Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore, in which diocese Washington is, has extended a cordial invitation to the convention to meet in Washington and has approved the announcement of the meeting in the parish churches of the diocese.

Attractions of Capital.

The attractions of the National Capital as a meeting place have been emphasized to subordinate unions throughout the country as an added inducement to attend the forthcoming convention here. "The city of Washington makes a most ideal place for a convention this year," Thomas E. McCloskey, general secretary of the union, declared in the official organ of the society.

"The ever increasing attractions of the Capital of the nation and its special appeal to Catholics, not only because it is the seat of the Catholic University of America and the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, but because it has so many Catholic institutions and spots that inspire enthusiasm for the church."

Arrangements for the convention meetings and the reception of delegates are being made by a local committee headed by former Judge DeLacy, Miss Rose A. Dugan, Maj. A. C. Monahan, Mrs. M. S. Denicke and Mrs. A. J. Driscoll, officers of the District union.

Hyattsville Ku Klux Holds Anniversary

Hyattsville klan, No. 2, realm of Maryland, yesterday celebrated its second anniversary jubilee with a country entertainment near Beltsville, Md. The celebration was under the direction of Imperial representative of Maryland, L. A. Mueller, formerly of the District of Columbia.

Fireworks and a program of amusements were arranged by Mueller, assisted by other officials of the klan. Music by the Klan band and singing were other features. The celebration, postponed from last week owing to inclement weather, opened yesterday afternoon and closed last night with organization exercises, of which addresses by klansmen were features.

CHEVY CHASE SECTIONS HAVE $30,000 FIRE FUND

Communities Adjacent to District Assured of Protection Against Flames.

SEEK A $5,000 INCREASE

Bethesda, Battery Park, Edgemoor, Woodmont, Alta Vista, sections of Chevy Chase, Md., and other communities of Montgomery county, Md., bordering on the District, are assured of fire protection, according to a statement yesterday by Maj. R. B. Lawrence, president of the Battery Park Citizens association, and a member of the board engaged in raising funds for a volunteer fire department for that section.

"We have more than $30,000 pledged already," Maj. Lawrence said, "and we hope to increase that to $35,000 in the next few days. Many of the subscribers have indicated a willingness to increase their subscriptions if necessary, but we hope to avoid calling on them for such increase."

The Battery Park and Edgemoor Citizens associations will hold organization meetings within the next few days to name members of the fire board. According to the plans outlined by the Montgomery County Federation of Civic Associations, each community is entitled to one member on the board for each $1,000 subscribed.

The location of the stations, purchase of equipment and other details will be left entirely to the board.

EGYPTIAN EXPLORATIONS.

A dispatch from London quotes Sir Flinders Petrie as expressing disgust with the restrictions imposed by the Egyptian government upon scientific exploration work. He has decided to quit, and he advises others to do so. This news, following the announcement that John D. Rockefeller, jr., had withdrawn his offer of $10,000,000 for a museum at Cairo, and reports of repeated quarrels between the Egyptian government and Howard Carter, have led many persons to believe that Egypt is pursuing a dog in the manger policy in dealing with scientific research work. It might be well, however, to hear what the Egyptians have to say for their side of the question.

Egypt is the greatest storehouse of antiquities in the world. It is a magnet that attracts every archaeologist and every schemer who hopes to make "scientific exploration" profitable. The Egyptian government has evidently been generous to both classes—the genuine scientist and the spurious article. Many exploring expeditions have been permitted to go through the country without inquiring too strictly into their scientific credentials.

The Egyptian government has a law which provides for archaeological exploration under certain conditions. It contemplates exploration under the auspices of scientific bodies, for purely scientific purposes. If duplicates of antique articles are found, the finders are permitted to retain one specimen. The other is taken to Cairo and placed in the government museum, a structure which cost nearly $5,000,000 and which answers every requirement.

In the case of the Valley of the Kings an exception was made in the matter of duplicate finds, as it was well known that enormously valuable relics would be found, all of them properly belonging to the government. The contract under which Howard Carter is working does not permit him to retain any articles he may find.

After Carter opened the tomb of Tutankhamen there was friction between him and the Egyptian authorities on account of his assumption of exclusive possession of the tomb and its contents, and his action in furnishing exclusive information to the London Times. He refused access to the tomb to persons holding permits from the Egyptian government, and the first information which the Egyptian public received regarding the discoveries was obtained from London. Carter admitted his private friends to the tomb, although the contract provided that no one should be admitted without permit of the authorities. Finally Carter laid claim to some of the valuables, contrary to his contract. In these circumstances the action of the Egyptian government in allowing him to continue his work is seen in a different light.

As for the Rockefeller offer, it is disclosed that he attached "strings" to it which no government could be expected to approve. He fixed the site of the proposed museum in the only public park in Cairo, a breathing ground required for the children of the city; and he stipulated that for over thirty years only two Egyptians should be permitted to serve on the board of trustees controlling the institution and its funds. The Egyptian government may have wondered whether this board, possessing great powers, was not aiming to gain a monopoly of the exploration of Egyptian antiquities; at any rate, it exercised its right to scrutinize an offer that was hedged about with objectionable conditions.

THE NEWSPAPER CITY.

The State of New Hampshire has invited the presidents of every press and editorial association in the United States to be the guests of the Granite State during the week beginning July 12. These gentlemen are the national representatives of the International Press Foundation and on Wednesday next they will elect two representatives to serve on the international board. The president of this international foundation is Hon. Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who is now in Europe. The foundation has been indorsed by the diplomatic representatives of every country of the world.

At the laying of the corner stone of the National Press club building last April President Coolidge appealed to the press of the world to promote good will and international understanding, thereby removing the obstacles which prevent an agreement to disarm. The President on that occasion expressed the belief that through the press it will be possible to so enhance the cause of international amity as to assure the settlement of disputes without resort to arms. That sentiment is indorsed by the diplomatic corps without exception.

Hon. Charles D. Haynes, once a member of Congress from northeastern New York, who removed to Florida after his service in the House, is a man of wealth. He is an idealist, in that he believes that through the International Press Foundation an organization, world wide in scope, may be built up which will do more toward the establishment of international peace for all time than any other agency can accomplish. To this end he has donated, without strings or conditions of any kind, a large sum in cash, together with a great tract of land in Florida, on which it is the purpose of the foundation to build "Press City," which will consist of public buildings, club houses, residences, pleasure grounds and all other accessories of a modern city.

Here newspaper workers of the world may make their permanent or temporary homes, hold congresses and build up a great clearing house of information, understanding and good will.

Nationally, the foundation has a house of representatives, consisting of two members from each State and the District of Columbia. This body will devise plans to benefit publishers and members of the newspaper fraternity and will seek to place the newspaper profession on a higher plane and to obtain for it such recognition as will place journalism on a parity with art, music and science. The public good through the interchange of thought and information among members and leaders in all walks of life are the objects sought.

The press of the world will be represented by a senate, consisting of one representative of each nation, and will be the forum for the consideration of international relations, seeking to remove ignorance, jealousy and misunderstandings.

Materially, Press City will become the home of newspaper men, indigent or otherwise, who desire to spend the remainder of their lives in comfort amid lovely surroundings which make existence there the ideal of earthly paradise.

HONORS FOR KIPLING.

Of the justice and the wisdom of the action of the Royal Society of Literature in conferring its gold medal on Rudyard Kipling there can be no question, for, despite the curious and almost freakish changes which attended the development of his art in its earlier stages, he remains, at 61, one of the outstanding literary figures of England. A particularly human touch was added to the occasion by the fact that Kipling's presence at the society's centenary banquet was his first public appearance since his recent serious illness. In this connection, those who are interested in such matters will readily recall the extraordinary manifestation of sympathy evoked on the part of the American public when Kipling nearly succumbed to pneumonia during his residence in this country.

Kipling made no secret of his delight at the honor conferred upon him. On the contrary, when Earl Balfour, with a few of his well-known cultured and felicitous phrases, handed him the medal, the recipient expressed proud appreciation of the distinction, adding, in characteristic vein, "The fiction that I am worthy of that honor be upon your heads!" He then proceeded to deliver a racy address, in which he dealt with the history of fiction and of criticism and with the insecurity of literary fame. It is possible, he said, for a writer to become immortal, because quite a dozen writers have achieved immortality in the last 2,500 years. Unfortunately, he did not name any of the magic twelve. Had he done so, what a storm of debate would have been raised, with reverberations continuing for months and years! He summarized the old quarrel between authors and critics very neatly by declaring that the first critic spent his short but vivid life in trying to explain that a man need not be a hen to judge the merits of an omelette. The propounder of this theory passed away without succeeding in convincing his contemporaries, and the question he raised has been at issue ever since.

In selecting Swift to prove the ironical fate that often overtakes writers of fiction, Kipling was unconsciously unjust to the memory of the great dean of St. Patrick's. He seemed to imply that Swift survives only because his "dreadful testament," "Gulliver's Travels," has been turned into a pleasant bedtime tale for children. He forgot, perhaps, that "A Tale of a Tub" is much more than a mere account of the wrangles of the churches and remains, probably, the greatest of English satires, that the "Drapier Letters," despite their ephemeral subject, proved by no means an ephemeral work, and that the irony of "A Modest Proposal" is as caustic and as biting today as when it was first penned. It is safe to say that the name of the author of these effusions will live at least as long as that of him who wrote "Barrack Room Ballads" and "Soldiers Three."

VIOLATORS OF LAW.

Attorney General Sargent seized the occasion of the dedication of a soldiers' monument at Pittsfield, Mass., to criticize the prevalent tendency to disregard and violate the law of the land.

Contrasting the early complaints that a strong central government might deprive the States of their rights and the citizens of their liberties, the Attorney-General said that "individuals and States are now concerned in avoidance of their responsibilities; in the imposition of their duties and their burdens on the general government."

As a result, says the Attorney General, "the individual citizen loses his interest in the conduct of affairs." The remedy he says, is to lessen centralization, to bring back to States, counties, towns, individuals, a sense of responsibility for the discharge of duties in the control of local affairs.

Speaking of violators of law, the Attorney General called attention to the fact that "if justice and equal rights are to be maintained, some restraint must be agreed upon between the people upon their own conduct, as well as imposed upon those chosen to act for them in governmental affairs." He added that the conduct of men of influence in not only violating the law themselves, but in helping disparagement and insult upon officials engaged in its administration and enforcement "has but one tendency—to sap the vitals of our government, of our country."

As Americans are not naturally violators of law, and as they are perfectly well aware of the fact that the existence of the government depends upon them and their observance of the laws they have ordained, it is evident that well-nigh universal disrespect for a certain law must be due to defects in the law, and not to defects in the people. The remedy is in amendment of the law, not in imploring the people to accept a law which they do not want.

AD VALOREM TAXES.

No economic question has been more frequently and persistently discussed in State and national legislative bodies than that of taxation; and the discussion has turned on the relative value of ad valorem and specific taxes.

A case has just been decided in the United States district court in South Dakota wherein the court decided in favor of a railroad as against the State tax commission. The court decided that the assessment of the railroad was "persistently too high," in fact 40 per cent too high.

Taxation by the ad valorem plan, that is, according to value, is, in the last analysis, only a matter of human judgment; and no two men or two bodies of men will agree as to the proper value of a railroad or any other property. No one knows when the absolutely correct point is reached. A court decision may not be any nearer correct; but it is the only place in which to settle the matter.

Assessment of real or personal property in a city is also matter of human judgment; and no two persons will agree. There is an appeal from an assessment deemed too high; and the only final figure is fixed by a court.

In the matter of fixing tariff duties the rate of taxation will vary according to the appraisement of the articles or commodities. A 50 per cent duty on a $500 appraisement or valuation is exactly the same thing as a 25 per cent duty on a $1,000 appraisement or valuation. Hence specific duties are preferable whenever possible. Ad valorem duties afford more room for fraud.

Obviously there is only one way to tax some property, and that is by the valuation plan; but in the case of railroads a State might obtain more revenue by means of specific taxes on earnings than on valuation. A tax on earnings is specific and certain, while a tax on valuation is uncertain.

On the whole, specific taxes are preferable to valuation or ad valorem taxes, and occasion less complaint. Any tax that hinges on human judgment is uncertain and undesirable. The district court of South Dakota has upset what might appear to be the very best judgment of tax experts in the State; but too often local prejudice and a certain mental bias warps the judgment of honest men.

WHAT IT COSTS THE FARMER.

Reports gathered by the Department of Agriculture from 6,182 farmers distributed fairly well over the United States indicate that the average cost of producing the 1925 corn crop was 69 cents per bushel; the average cost of producing wheat on 3,759 farms was $1.32 per bushel; and the average cost of producing oats on 4,675 farms was 51 cents per bushel.

The cost figures include charges for labor of the farmer and his family, and a charge for the use of the land on a cash rental basis; so that if the cost just equalled the price, the farmer was paid for his time and his investment.

A comparison of production costs for the four years 1922 to 1925 shows that the cost of producing an acre of corn varied from $23.01 in 1922 to $24.97 in 1925, and that the cost per bushel varied from 66 cents in 1922 to 82 cents in 1924.

Because of the relatively good yields in 1925, bushel costs were considerably less in 1925 than in 1924, for the country as a whole. The acre cost of producing wheat varied from $19.68 in 1922 to $22.41 in 1925. The average cost per bushel in 1925 was $1.32 per bushel, which was from 8 to 10 cents per bushel more than during the preceding three years.

The average cost of producing a bushel of oats varied from $17.40 in 1922 to $19.01 in 1925. The average cost per bushel was 53 cents in 1922, 52 cents in 1923, 50 cents in 1924, and 51 cents in 1925.

It is interesting to note that the average net cost per acre of producing corn was $44.23 in the north Atlantic States and only $19.28 in the west north central States (including Iowa). It cost more than twice as much per acre to produce corn in the north Atlantic States as in the west north central States, and 75 per cent more per acre to produce wheat in the north Atlantic States than in the west north central States. It costs about half as much per acre to produce corn in Iowa or Nebraska as in New York or Pennsylvania or New Jersey; and the same ratio applies to wheat and oats. It costs 59 cents to produce a bushel of corn in Iowa, and 87 cents in New York or New Jersey.

To offset these costs of production in 1925, the farm price of corn in Iowa on May 15, 1925, was 98 cents per bushel; wheat was $1.45 per bushel, and oats 41 cents per bushel.

Prices and cost of production vary in different States and sections, depending upon the yield, the supply and demand, and many other elements. It is difficult to see how any act of Congress can change this.

TOBACCO AND DRUGS.

There is not much hope for the human race in America if the gloomy picture painted by Prof. L. A. Higley, of Wheaton College, Illinois, is a true one. The Illinois professor asserted at the world conference on narcotic education that unless parents stop smoking, particularly mothers, the United States will become a nation of anaemias. Children born of parents who smoke not only suffer physical handicaps in early youth, says Prof. Higley, but their moral perspective is harmed; moreover, the offspring of parents, both of whom smoke, have slight chance of attaining normal physical vigor. Tobacco is classed as a narcotic by the Wheaton college professor, who insists that the three greatest dangers of the human race in the world today are alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

Most of the principal nations of the world are under the influence of one or all three of the narcotics most of the time, according to this pundit, and it follows that what is true of the individual is true of the nation. Entire nations, therefore, are held to be gradually changing their national characteristics. Prof. Higley traces the decline of Turkey to the use of the weed which Sir Walter Raleigh introduced into Europe in the days of "good Queen Bess." Turkey, he asserts, was narcotized into a national decline by tobacco. And here in America the average person is continually under the influence of one, two or all three of the narcotics, with tobacco, of course, the principal agency. Because addiction to the narcotics is to be found in the realms of higher education, the professor is beginning to feel that it is futile to attempt further to educate college men and women, inasmuch as instructors themselves are slaves to the habit.

It is true that the great-grandmothers of many eminent Americans smoked their pipes in the early days of the republic. This, of course, is no reason why the girls of today should smoke cigarettes, and there is a sentiment in America against the increasing use of tobacco by women, although it is difficult to believe that the race is doomed because of cigarette smoking.

The world conference on narcotics is an important gathering. It is undertaking a task that is one of the most stupendous of international problems. No one nation can solve it. All previous attempts to rescue the world from drug addiction have failed. In this country, it is said, 60 per cent of the prisoners in penal institutions are users or venders of drugs. In the popular mind, however, tobacco is not classed as a "drug," and perhaps the enthusiasts who are trying to rid the world of narcotics would make better headway if they concentrated their campaign against the use of opium and its derivatives.

WASHINGTON YOUTH MAKES 30,000-MILE TRIP TO ASIA

Practical Instruction in Geography Is Received by Frederick H. Thomas.

PRIMITIVE FORESTS SEEN ALONG PANAMA CANAL

Girls of Honolulu Beautiful, but Not Comparable With Those in Capital.

Frederick H. Thomas, 17-year-old senior at Central High school, living at 717 Massachusetts avenue north-east, has finished the second "semester" of a wonderful and practical course in geography. He has just returned from a 30,000-mile cruise to the Orient on the S. S. Eclipse, a Shipping Board vessel.

This was Thomas' second cruise. Last summer he shipped as a deck boy on the S. S. Corson, and made a 15,000-mile cruise to Egypt, Italy, Turkey and other countries of the Mediterranean. That was the first "semester."

By FREDERICK H. THOMAS.

The S. S. Eclipse left Brooklyn during a fierce snowstorm the afternoon of February 4. I had left Washington three days before that, after making arrangements with the Shipping Board for my job on the ship. I was the youngest member of the crew.

Before we left Brooklyn, we took on a cargo of whisky and wines, pianos, toys, typewriters, foodstuffs and school books. The whisky and wine was for medicinal use, and was consigned to Honolulu.

Our first stop was Newport News, where we took on a large quantity of tobacco. We then headed for the Panama canal. We arrived at Colon, on the Atlantic side. The natives were celebrating a marriage. It was great. The people were dressed in primitive clothes—grass dresses and head coverings with brilliant plumage. There was music and dancing, and we were given a wonderful reception. Where we had been almost freezing in New York, we were now roasting in the decks in our underclothes.

Primitive Jungles Seen.

Going through the Panama canal I stood by on the forecastle head. Some of the most primitive jungles in the world are on both sides of the canal. The uncompleted French canal is the first thing of interest which one sees. Then come the Gatun locks, which are surrounded by beautiful golf links. Several miles farther on is Gaillard cut, where all the trouble was had when the canal was being dug. It cuts through the backbone of America, which runs from Alaska to the lower end of Chile. The Pedro Miguel and Miraflores locks lower the ship to the level of the Pacific. Graying the Gulf of Panama like a great cloudland, the Pacific fleet was at anchor in Balboa harbor. It made me feel quite proud to be an American.

The crew started a great card tournament on the way across the Pacific. The game was known as hearts. We also played crib and chess. Letter writing and reading took up the rest of our spare time. The prettiest girls we saw on the trip were at Honolulu. Their dark eyes and hair and their colorful dresses made them quite fascinating. But they were not as pretty as our own Washington girls.

Whole Day Is Lost

From Honolulu we went to Manila. When we passed the 180th meridian, which is known as the "date line," we skipped a full day. That is, we jumped from Friday the 12th to Sunday the 14th, skipping Saturday the 13th.

St. Patrick's day found us half way to Manila. We were awakened early in the morning by the shouting of a seaman named Kelly. We arrived at Manila the morning of March 27. I was surprised by the American atmosphere of the place. The first thing I did when I got ashore was to take a ride in one of the Manila taxicabs or "kalambas," which consists of a tiny buggy drawn by a small horse of great endurance.

The great sport in Manila is cock fighting. Strangely, it is indulged in on Sundays only. I attended a fight the first Sunday. When I entered the arena I saw a cloud of feathers. Behind this cloud, two trained cocks were fighting it out to the death. The Filipinos were betting heavily on the result. The impression I got of it all was that it was too cruel to be called a sport.

World's Largest Cabaret.

Santa Ana, in Manila, is the largest cabaret in the world. I went there and saw the Filipino girls doing the Charleston. There were a lot of Russian girls in the cabaret, and almost every one said she was a former princess or duchess, who had been exiled from Russia.

The next morning, we went swimming in Manila bay. While we were diving from the decks, a man rushed aboard and warned us to get out of the water. He said there were more sharks in the bay than in any other place in the world. Later, I saw enough to convince me that he had spoken the truth. We unloaded the schoolbooks, typewriters and toys at Manila, and then started for Hongkong, China. The first time we got ashore there, we pulled a stunt that caused a sensation among the natives. For 2,000 years the Chinese coolies having been pulling other people in their rickshaws. We decided to give the coolies themselves a ride, and two of my mates and I put three of them in the seats and tugged them for 15 minutes through the crooked streets. The other Chinese laughed until I thought they would burst.

Black Chow Dogs Bought.

Two crew bought several chow dogs in Hong Kong. These dogs were black, even their tongues being black. After unloading sugar and oil we sailed for Shanghai. The water near this port was a vivid yellow, caused by the mud from the Yangtze river. Shanghai is a vivid yellow about 100 miles. We docked there four days after leaving Hong Kong.

To get to the center of Shanghai we had to cross the river on a sampans. On the way over we were attacked by some Chinese on another sampans. We never did know why. The Chinese struck at us with bamboo poles, trying to knock us into the water. We found some poles on our own sampans and began to fight back. The battle lasted for several minutes and was stopped by an Indian policeman attached to the British consular.

Shanghai is a great town for collecting souvenirs and nearly all the sailors on my ship bought a suitcase full.

After leaving Shanghai we started back for the Philippines. The first of the group we reached was the island of Luzon. Shadowing the port of Tobago on this island is a great volcano, said to be the most perfect in the world. We next visited Opom, and from there went to Macatan, where we saw the monument erected to Magellan. The first man to circle the world. The tomb is near the spot where Magellan was killed in a native war.

Beats Champion at Chess.

At Iloilo, the next port, I played a game of chess with the town's champion, an elderly native who ran a barber shop. I managed to win from him, and my shipmates gave me a great cheer.

Dancing is a popular pastime in the islands, and every little town has a dance hall. Before I left the United States, I had an idea that I would see pretty maidens doing the hula-hula all over the place. But the only hula I saw there was executed by a professional dancer. Incidentally, I didn't see any chop suey in China.

When we left the Philippines, we had a vegetable menagerie on board. There were four dogs, three chickens and two parrots in all. On the way down the coast of Central America, we had several rainstorms. It was the rainy season, and the rain poured down in torrents. It was of no use to wear oil skins because the rain found its way to the body any way.

Passing through the canal again on our way to the Atlantic, I had the 8 to 12 watch on the steering wheel. The canal is so narrow that I was afraid it would strike the sides. However, we reached the Caribbean without any accidents.

High Waves on Atlantic.

When we reached the Atlantic, the ship once again encountered high waves. The Atlantic is always rough in comparison with the river-like smoothness of the Pacific. The first thing I noticed when we were out of the tropics was the twilight. There is no twilight in the tropics. When the sun goes down, it is dark.

The Eclipse reached Philadelphia last Tuesday night, five months and three days from the time we left Brooklyn. I was paid $129.50, which brought my entire pay for the cruise to $235. In Shanghai I spent $100 for souvenirs.

It's a great life, this sea-going life. But it is not what it has been painted. The hard-boiled seadogs that I had read about were conspicuous by their absence. Those in my crew were for the most part, well-mannered fellows who were eager to get along with each other and who seemed to abhor fighting. There was not one single fight on board the whole trip. The foreign ports many of them headed for the ice-cream parlors instead of to the dens and dives where liquor was sold.

DANVILLE HIGH WINS FOR BEST NEWSPAPER

Lynchburg First for Magazine and Norfolk for Annual in Virginia Contest.

"The Chatterbox," published by the Danville High school, Danville, Va., has been declared the best high school newspaper in Virginia, in a State-wide contest recently conducted by the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League.

Armistead C. Gordon, of the University of Virginia English department, served as chairman of judges in the contest.

In the magazine class, "The Critic," edited by the students of the E. C. Glass High school, of Lynchburg, carried off first honors, while "The Commodore," published by the pupils of the Maury High school, of Norfolk, took first place in the annual class. All accredited four year secondary schools in Virginia were permitted to enter the competition.

Second and third place winners in the contest were as follows: Newspapers: "High Times," E. C. Glass school, Lynchburg, second; "The Student," Woodrow Wilson High school, Portsmouth, third. Magazines: "The Record," John Marshall High school, Richmond, second; "The Bumble-Bee," Lane High school, Charlottesville, third. Annuals: "Handland," Handley High school, Winchester, second; "The Chain," Lane High school, Charlottesville, third.

COMMUNITY CENTER TO TEACH SWIMMING

Special Emphasis to Be Laid on Class Instruction Periods Designated.

The community center department will lay special emphasis this summer on class instruction in swimming. It was announced yesterday in a statement by Mrs. L. W. Hardy, acting director. The class will be conducted at the Central High school community center, under direction of Mrs. E. H. Hunter, community secretary.

Beginning this week the first period every Tuesday night, from 7:30 to 8:30, will be reserved for girls of 15 or over, who are beginners. Wednesday afternoons all three periods, beginning at 1:30, will be reserved for children who wish to learn to swim. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons of each week only the smaller children will be permitted in the pool.

The larger boys and girls will have the pool to themselves Friday afternoons for all three periods. They may likewise attend the evening swimming classes, provided they are accompanied by their parents. Gordon Rutz, instructor of swimming, in charge of the pool, is assisted by Martha Ward, L. J. Kriz and James Munro. A fee of 10 cents is charged in the afternoon and 25 cents at night.

Howard U. President Will Speak in Texas

Announcement was made last night that Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, recently elected president of Howard university, who is now in Europe, has been selected by the National Baptist convention as the principal speaker at its Port Worth, Tex., meeting in September. He will occupy the place on the program which was reserved annually for Booker T. Washington until his death.

Dr. Johnson is expected to return to this country early next month, his first public appearance being at the Concord Baptist church, Brook-Rose, August 22. He will speak on interracial relations.

Whether Ink or Champagne Is Better Liquid in Which to Boil Ham Was Settled by a Group of Capital Men 12 or 15 Years Ago on a Wager.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial on Venezuela, which appeared last Sunday, reference was made to the journalistic venture of the world-famed wanderer, Casey Moran, who has just launched the Tropical Sun on the sea of journalism in Maracaibo, Casco, the minor journeyman, has honored me with a copy of the second issue of his great journal and I find therein an appeal to The Washington Post to settle a controversy which seems to have caused much discussion near the coming metropolis of Venezuela.

It appears that the editor has promised to visit the town of Boca de Verdad and in preparation for the event the ladies undertook to prepare a ham to be spread. One of these would-be hostesses suggested that a ham boiled in champagne would be about the right thing in the way of a "piece de resistance." The lady's name was Neighbors and the suggestion was answered with a sneer by Mrs. Grady, who declared that the hind quarter of a porker might as well be boiled in ink as champagne, for the reason that the liquid does not enter the meat, it simply cooks it. Thereupon Mrs. Neighbors inquired if it was the purpose of Mrs. Grady to attempt to make a fool of Mrs. Neighbors, and the latter responded that it was not her custom to attempt to improve on nature.

Very naturally this started a somewhat acrimonious debate in which Mrs. Mack, Mrs. Pat Dooley, Mrs. Smith-Alfred, and Mrs. "Chappie" Catt took prominent parts. The Boca de Verdad correspondent, in his account of the affair, which he sent to the Tropical Sun, said that peace was finally restored when the diplomatic Mrs. Landman suggested that the decision be left to the editor of the Tropical Sun "when he addresses the open air meeting of the Tongue Debating society next week."

This little neighborhood row would have no interest for The Post or its readers ordinarily, but I see that Editor Casey in an editorial referred to the correspondence from Boca de Verdad announced that he will submit the question to The Washington Post for a decision or opinion, and as the editor of The Post may have overlooked this point, I thought I would take the liberty of calling his attention to the appeal and incidentally to direct your attention, and that of Mr. Moran, to the fact that this question as to the best fluid in which to cook ham was settled once and for all time in the back yard of the old Shoemaker establishment some twelve or fifteen years ago.

Frank Conger was the Mrs. Grady of that affair, and Toner Richardson took the part of Mrs. Neighbors. That is, Frank waged Toner that he could cook a ham in ink and Toner might use champagne, and the two hams should be of the same weight, grade and fineness of texture; that they should be cooked in bottles, or pots, placed side by side on a two-burner gas stove "twenty minutes to the pound" and when removed should be skinned and after any evidence of discoloration had been eliminated they would be carved and passed around to the assembled spectators, and if any one was prepared to testify that he could distinguish the "a la ink" from the champagne dish, Conger would pay a certain specified sum to Richardson and would assume the expenses of the contest.

The only man who declared that he could distinguish the difference was the witty Toner, but unfortunately he guessed wrong, and the bet was declared off. "Shoos" gladly contributed the wine—it was some that had lost its tiff—the party wouldn't think of champagne for the hams, and the stationer was tickled silly over the testimonial to the absolute innocuousness of his writing fluid. Consequently there was no expense for any one or bearing. Conger proved his point, and thereby established his right to be regarded as a great benefactor of the human race, especially to that portion of the race which lives undisturbed by the civil war which made the Richardson brand of pot-liquor unobtainable—and besides ink has always been cheaper than champagne.

The narrative may answer the question submitted to The Post through the Tropical Sun and may serve to restore neighborhood peace to the municipality of Boca de Verdad. C. A. H.

Republican Senators Declared to Have Advised Senator Cameron in "Premeditated Filibuster" Against His Resolution Limiting Amount to Be Spent in Senate Candidates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to article appearing in The Post this morning, in which it is charged that Senator Cameron conducted a "premeditated filibuster" in order to prevent consideration of the resolution disqualifying senators-elect from holding a seat in the Senate, and that he expended more than a stated amount in behalf of their candidacy for election, permit me to direct your attention to the fact that the bill (S. 3342) introduced by Senator Cameron was considered by the committee on irrigation and reclamation and reported to the Senate on May 5, 1926, without amendment; and that on May 8 Senator Ashurst submitted minority views.

It is a fact, therefore, that the bill had been on the Senate calendar at least 60 days prior to July 3, and that during this period of 60 days Senator Cameron sat "idly by" and made no particular effort to have an agreement reached when his bill would be taken up for consideration. No, he waited—premeditatedly—and evidently during the last few days of the session came to the conclusion that he would render his party a great service—one never to be forgotten—should he prevent consideration of the resolution referred to above. It will be noted from the Congressional Record of Saturday, July 3, that not one Republican senator attempted to gain the floor while Senator Cameron was carrying on his filibuster—other than Senator Stanford, who inquired "whether the request I am about to make will take the senator off the floor." It would seem evident from the foregoing, and from the fact that Senator Cameron was "amplified" with material to speak and quote from, that it was the premeditated intent and accomplishment of Republican senators to prevent consideration of the resolution. No other conclusion can well be drawn. HOMER J. LANE.

Government Has Right to Remove Any Employee Not Needed, Even if Appointed Under Civil Service Rules, Secretary of Commission Explains.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The statement in your issue of July 9 that a ruling of Justice Hoehling regarding the removal of Miss Nanette L. King, conflicts with the civil service regulations, indicates a misapprehension.

A headline states that the decision is at variance with civil service rules regarding workers, and the article states that the civil service regulations allow an employee to retain a position as long as he is efficient and conducts himself properly. This is a common error on the part of employees and the public generally. No employee has the right to position any longer than his services are needed by the government. An appointing officer is at liberty to remove any employee at any time when such action is in the interests of the service, and he is the sole judge in the matter provided he follows the requirement of the civil service rules that the employee must be furnished with a written statement of reasons for the proposed removal, and be allowed a reasonable time to make a written reply.

There are two exceptions to this statement, namely, that a person entitled to military preference whose record is good, is not to be removed as long as civilian employees are retained, and that an employee is not to be removed for political or religious reasons. The decision of Justice Hoehling, according to the reference in The Post, was not at all in conflict with the civil service regulations regarding removal. By direction of the commission, JOHN T. DOYLE, Secretary, Washington, July 9.

SOCIETY

David K. E. Bruce, son of Senator Bruce, of Maryland, was the event of June.

Three cabinet members, the Attorney General, Mr. Sargent; the Postmaster General, Mr. New, and the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Jardine, have become disciples of Isaac Walton for the nonce and will enjoy their holidays with the rod where the nimble fish foregather.

The national defense Secretaries, Mr. Dwight F. Davis, and Mr. Wilbur, are making combination business and pleasure plans. Mr. Davis will make frequent week-end trips to Dark Harbor, Maine, and Mr. Wilbur plans an inspection trip on the west coast.

WASHINGTON society welcomed back a congressional favorite in Mrs. Champ Clark, widow of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, who came here last week after taking part in the Jefferson centenary celebration at Charlottesville. Several functions have been given for Mrs. Clark and she will remain here for some time engaged in her literary pursuits.

Another visitor from the Wilson administration will be Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, widow of the Vice President, who has a host of friends here. Mrs. Marshall will arrive this week and will be the guest while in Washington of Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh.

WHILE Washington is a deserted village in the summer time, especially this summer, yet an interesting little group of women will stay at home because the official duties of their husbands keep them here. Mrs. Kellogg will be the hostess of the nation while Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Dawes are away.

Of course, it can not be wondered at that Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson prefer to remain in their beautiful home, the historic old Calvert mansion in Riverdale, instead of taking the long trip back to California for the recess of Congress.

The women in executive positions in the government have their work to do no matter how much they might want to go away for the entire vacation period. Very few of them take more than the allotted month which is the right of every government employee.

The chief pastime of the summer colony seems to be motor picnics and motor trips to nearby historical places and, of course, this year to the sesquicentennial in Philadelphia.

THERE is never a real lull in the cessation of interesting visitors to our shores. There are always interesting persons passing through on their way to Northern resorts or return from Europe or cities north of Washington.

These can be discovered in little groups and reunions in the cool hotel summer gardens, and lunching or dining at the many attractive little inns on the roadways from Washington, which have sprung up since motor travel became an ordinary accepted institution.

Here and there members of the winter colony linger really to see Washington, which the pressure of official and social festivities and the general buzz of the season's activities often has prevented.

HARBINGERS of the winter social festivities can be discerned in a scrutiny of the resort news. In this way notice of the weddings of the winter can be gleaned by those who have acumen, and also the fate and fortune of next winter's debutante hang.

Miss Mary Emily Hamilton, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. George E. Hamilton.

By BERTHA R. MARTIN.

THE President and Mrs. Coolidge certainly were fortunate to time their departure for their summer leave with the coming of high temperature to the National Capital. Even the White House does not remain cool when real July weather arrives, and in the cool depths of the Adirondacks the presidential family must be counting itself most lucky that it has escaped the torrid hours here.

Judging from the report of White Pine camp it is an ideal summer White House. The President and Mrs. Coolidge most assuredly have earned a rest, for this has been a very strenuous spring for them.

For the present, at least, the President and Mrs. Coolidge are said to have planned no social functions during their stay. There are facilities for the entertainment of camp guests, which doubtless will be utilized at some time or other while they are there. Motor trips to neighboring historic spots already have been scheduled, because that is a form of diversion which delights the President, who has an abiding interest in Americana and a strong historical sense.

Some of the famous battlefields of the American Revolution are in the neighborhood or easy motor distance of White Pine camp, and as this period has always been a great favorite with the President as a descendant of men distinguished in that struggle they are certain to prove a real lure to him.

THE Vice President, Mr. Dawes, after a short trip in New England, will go to Evanston, Ill., to join Mrs. Dawes. The delay in the adjournment of Congress made it impossible for him to be there when the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden were guests in his home.

The Speaker of the House and Baby Paulina preceded Mrs. Longworth, who went to Chicago, to Cincinnati last week, but Mrs. Longworth left there yesterday and the trio will pass part of the summer in the lovely Longworth home in that Ohio city. Whether their summer plans include even a flying trip to Oyster Bay to visit Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, et., has not been announced as yet. But they plan a series of visits to the North shore and Newport.

THE cabinet is also vacation-bent and the members of the President's official family will follow his maxim, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and scatter on many pleasurable errands. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Kellogg, however, will remain in town except for occasional week-end trips. Another stay-at-home cabinet member will be the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Herbert Hoover. The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, is taking a motor trip through Belgium, France, Germany and Italy, and will conclude his journey with a visit to his daughter, Alisa, whose marriage to Mr.

on her success at the fashionable mountain or seaside resorts. Of course, it has become a custom among many parents to take the coming debutantes to Europe for the summer and bring them back early in the fall refreshed and ready for a strenuous winter and at the same time buy their frocks for their debut parties. Almost all, however, when they pass the entire summer in this country or Europe, pay a visit, if only a brief one, to the summer social centers.

The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Willard, was the honor guest yesterday at a garden party which Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave at the Breakers, their summer home at Newport. The party was for 1,200 midshipmen, who are on their summer cruise, and many members of the summer colony. Gen. and Mrs. Vanderbilt received in the garden and luncheon was served in the grounds. Gen. and Mrs. Vanderbilt entertained at dinner last evening at the Breakers.

The Secretary of Labor, Mr. James J. Davis, will return to Washington Tuesday from Mooseheart, Ill., where he has been passing about a week with Mrs. Davis and their children.

The Attorney General, Mr. Sargent, will return to Washington tomorrow from Ludlow, Va., where he joined Mrs. Sargent after a business trip to Pittsfield, Mass.

The newly appointed Minister of the Dominican Republic, Dr. Angel Morales, accompanied by Senora Morales, has arrived in Washington and taken an apartment in the Wardman Park hotel. Dr. Morales, who succeeds Dr. Jose del Carmen Ariza, served as Dominican Minister to Paris for one year, and prior to that time was one of the vice presidents of the League of Nations at Geneva. An attorney by profession, he has held several governmental posts in the Dominican Republic, serving as secretary of the interior for one term. The newly appointed secretary of the Dominican Republic, Senor Maximo L. Vazquez, also came to Washington last week and, accompanied by Senora Vazquez, is established at the Roosevelt hotel. Senor Vazquez is a nephew of President Vazquez of the Dominican Republic.

The Minister of the Irish Free State, Dr. Timothy Smiddy, rejoined Mrs. Smiddy in their apartment in the Wardman Park hotel Wednesday, after a trip to Newport, R. I., where he attended the sequentennial celebration and spoke at the special exercises commemorating the services of Gen. Arthur Dillon with the revolutionary army.

The Hungarian Minister, Count Szecsenyi, was host at a small dinner last evening at the legation in compliment to Cardinal Csernoch, of Hungary, who is his guest.

The Counselor of the Legation of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Lipsa are returning from a vacation in Europe on the Atlantic. They are expected in New York in a few days and will come directly to Washington.

To Visit New England.

The Secretary of the Polish Legation and Mme. Orlowska will close their apartment in the Wardman Park hotel and depart Wednesday for several weeks' trip through the White mountains, going first to Bretton Woods and visiting other points of interest in that region.

Senator Charles S. Deneen, of Illinois, has returned to Washington for a short stay and is at the Willard.

Representative and Mrs. Charles E. Winter and their sons, Mr. Stanley Winter and Mr. Franklin Winter, departed by motor Friday for their home in Casper, Wyo., which they expect to reach by July 20. Representative Winter will be on the reception committee of the governors' convention, which will take place in Cheyenne, Wyo. En route they will stop and visit relatives and friends in many places, among which are St. Joseph, Mo.; Chicago, Milwaukee and Omaha, Neb., and also at Hilbert, Wis., where they will be with Mrs. Winter's mother, Mrs. Pauline Maltby.

Former Senator Porter James McCumber and his daughter, Mrs. Harrison Brand, departed from Washington by motor Friday for their summer cottage on Lake Detroit, Minn. Mr. Brand accompanied them as far as Bedford Springs, where they are passing the week-end. Mrs. McCumber and her grandson will depart the latter part of the week to join them in Minnesota.

Miss Suzette Dewey, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, was the guest in whose honor Mr. Chester Lockwood entertained at a buffet supper last evening, when there were about fifteen guests. Mr. Lockwood is occupying over the week-end the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Thomas Dunlop near Chevy Chase Lake, while Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop and Miss Katherine Dunlop are visiting Gen. Chauncey Barker at Rehoboth Beach, Del. They will visit Judge and Mrs. J. Staunton Peelle at Bayhead, N. J., Tuesday, returning here Wednesday. Miss Dewey, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee over the week-end, will return today to Watch Hill, R. I.

Mme. Laurinda Marchetti is closing her apartment on Twenty-first street and will depart today for New York, where she will sail aboard the Reliance for England and Scotland. While in Scotland she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lauder, in Lauderdale, Dunoon, and later she will be joined by her son, Mr. Randolph Marchetti, in Geneva, Switzerland. Together they will pass some time in Deauville and Ostend, France, and will visit in other cities before returning to this country in the autumn.

association meeting. Before returning she will visit Pike's Peak, Yellowstone National Park and other points of interest en route, returning via the great lakes.

Miss Oppenheimer Weds.

The marriage of Miss Ferda M. Oppenheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Oppenheimer, to Mr. Saul R. Goldsmith, formerly of Sioux City, Iowa, and now of Washington, took place Wednesday at noon in the Eighth Street Temple, Dr. W. F. Rosenblum officiating. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a small company of relatives and close friends.

The bride who was unattended wore an ensemble suit of water rose charmeuse and a hat to match and she had a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley backed with feathers to match her gown.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith departed later on a wedding trip, and after August 1 they will be at home at 1356 Monroe street.

Cleary—Merchant Nuptials.

The very quiet wedding of Miss Suzanne Merchant, daughter of Mr. William A. Merchant, to Mr. William A. Cleary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Cleary, of New York city, took place at 4:30 o'clock June 30 at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart rectory, the Rev. Father J. M. Moran officiating. Only members of the immediate family witnessed the ceremony. The bride wore a gown of green crepe combined with kasha cloth, made cape style, and she had a green French felt hat to match. Her only ornament was a platinum friendship pin, a gift of the bridegroom, and her corsage bouquet was of lilies of the valley, sweetheart roses and orchids.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. William H. Belt, as matron of honor, who wore a flowered georgette and a large black picture hat and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. Mr. William A. Belt acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Cleary departed later for a wedding trip to Quebec, Canada. They will make their home after July 30 in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Glenn, of the Port of Baltimore, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Rose Glenn, to Mr. George A. Slater, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Slater, of this city. July 1, at the rectory of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase circle, the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth officiating.

A recent wedding was that of Miss Helen Irene Myers, daughter of Mrs. John Percy Myers, and Mr. Francis Joseph Mischo, of Waterbury, Conn. The ceremony was solemnized with a nuptial mass at 9:30 a. m. June 30, in the church of the Holy Name. The church was effectively decorated with palms, pink roses and baskets of gladioli, delphinium and peonies. Mrs. E. F. Hughes played the wedding march and accompanied Mr. Charles E. Myers, uncle of the bride, who rendered "I Love You Truly" and "O Promise Me" during the ceremony and several other numbers during the mass.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Frank Watson Myers, was attired in a gown of crepe romaine and charmingly lace-trimmed with seed pearls and rhinestones. Her hat was a large Neapolitan trimmed with orange blossoms and tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Marie Louise Myers, was her only attendant. She wore a yellow printed chiffon gown with wide trimmed hat to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. Raymond Hart acted as best man and Mr. Walter H. Sullivan and Mr. Jack Kane were ushers. Mrs. Myers, mother of the bride, wore a gown of rose georgette with a large black lace hat. Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Mischo left for an extended automobile trip through New England, when the latter wore a costume of gray crepe and a hat of violet blue. They will be at home at 222 Seventh street northeast after July 19.

Depart for Europe Soon.

Mrs. William L. Saul and her daughter, Miss Edith Ray Saul, will sail from New York on the S. S. Lusitania for London July 16. They will pass their time in England and Scotland, returning in time for Miss Saul to resume her studies at Goucher college, Baltimore, where she has been a student for the past three years.

A benefit for the chapter house fund of the Daughters of the American Revolution of the District of Columbia will be given at the National theater tomorrow. Mrs. James M. Willey, State regent; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, State vice regent, and other State and national officers and regents will be in boxes. Members of the committee in charge of arrangements are Mrs. J. C. Pritchard, chairman; Mrs. Henry E. Gauss, Mrs. Jason Waterman, Mrs. A. E. T. Hansmann, Mrs. Edward L. Morrison, and Mrs. C. C. Coombs.

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WASHINGTON, in common with the rest of the country, has passed through a week of patriotic fervor in connection with the sesquicentennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence and as one of its by-products colonial costumes swept into popular favor throughout the country and the quaint garments of yesterday appeared at many of the celebrations.

In this connection it is well to remember that Thomas Jefferson, who is the great historical hero of the hour as author of the priceless document which was the product of his pen, was in advance of his time in the matter of clothes as well as other things. For Thomas Jefferson was the first gentleman of rank and fashion to adopt the trouser-vogue then coming to America from Europe, forsaking the picturesque knee breeches and colonial coat as a costume. This innovation caused much comment in the ranks of masculinity and urged on by Mr. Jefferson's example the pantalons slowly but surely came into their own. In this instance, Thomas Jefferson erred, if at all, on the side of utility; pantalons, generally speaking, are more practical than knee breeches, although these garments detract rather than add to manly beauty.

The vogue of the colonial was given added impetus at the memorable exercises at Charlottesville last week in honor of the centenary of Jefferson's death. With a fine instinct for the appropriate, many of the ladies of Charlottesville took out of cedar chests, redolent with lavender and other sweet-smelling herbs, the costumes of their great-grandmothers, treasured through the changes and chances of time and the storms of civil war.

Pictureque Sight Presented.

Garbed in these beautiful dresses with their real old lace these ladies, many of them descendants of the friends and associates of Jefferson, made a picturesque spectacle as they assembled on the spacious lawn of Monticello—that incomparable country seat of Jefferson's just preserved to the nation as a sacred shrine of patriotism through efforts of his countrymen and women to erect the hundreds of distinguished guests from all parts of the country.

Inside the stately mansion more colonial costumes were seen and the final touch of the old picture was given when, driven indoors from the rain, some of the speakers read from manuscript by the light of Jefferson's own candlesticks held high by a manservant clad in the Jefferson livery.

The pilgrimage to Jefferson's grave, set deep in the heart of the mountain wood, on Sunday saw more of these colonial ladies of yesterday and today in line with their floral tributes in their arms across the ladies of Charlottesville must have gone that sad day a hundred years ago when the citizens assembled to pay the last grief-stricken honors to their neighbor and friend and great leader, Thomas Jefferson, who had died a few days before in the stately mansion crowning the high point of the mountain.

In the pilgrimage were many women also vividly garbed in the fashion of today representing great women's organizations who had come to unite the praise of today with the memory of yesterday. High officials of State and nation were also present to express the undying gratitude of the country for the genius and gifts of the man who lay below the plain monument wrapped in his deep sleep of more than a century.

Washington Women Attend.

Washington sent a large contingent of women down to attend the celebration. From Bowling Green, Mo., came Mrs. Champ Clark, widow of the late Speaker of the House of Representatives, who is a member of the board of governors of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation. Mrs. Clark is well known as one of the greatest authorities on Jefferson and has written and lectured widely on the career of the Sage of Monticello.

Mrs. Clark was actively gowned for the opening exercises on Sunday in a model gown of black and white crepe de chine made on long flowing lines with collars and cuffs of real lace and a picture hat of black satin trimmed with silk aigrettes. Mrs. Clark, who is now visiting in Washington, wore for a luncheon one day a gown of white crepe de chine, made with a long tunic overblouse bordered in purple and white dotted crepe. Her hat was of purple silk with a high crown with shaded flowers.

She has another very smart daytime costume of gray crepe de chine made on pleated coat lines, with a scarf collar edged with rose crepe embroidered in the same tone. On the same day she wore a very becoming gray Italian-woven straw hat with a high crown and rolled brim. Her scarf is of Alice blue.

Another striking feature at Monticello was that of Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, honorary president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who was in a three-piece suit of beige chiffon, with a gray fur collar and a blue hat trimmed with gray. Mrs. Cook also is wearing a dinner gown of cream lace over chiffon, made with a cape back.

Philadelphia Society Meets.

The quaint old Quaker town of Philadelphia is the mecca for many Washington people and the members of the diplomatic corps at this time. The usual exodus of social leaders there, many of whom are well known in Washington, has been delayed until after the sesquicentennial is well under way. For while columns have been written about the celebration itself, there has been little said about the social aspect of the occasion, and the many brilliant entertainments and, therefore, lavish and beautiful gowns, which are being worn.

One of the outstanding entertainments of last week was the large dinner given by the Japanese Ambassador and Mrs. Matsudaira, attended by ranking officials of Pennsylvania and the government, and many visiting dignitaries and leaders of Philadelphia society. The floral decorations were all those suggestive of the Flowery Kingdom and the souvenirs were tiny real pearls in lovely little boxes.

Mrs. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, whom Washington insists on claiming, gave one of the most notable teas of the week at their handsome suburban Philadelphia home. So eager were the visitors and residential elements to attend and to see the rare art treasures in the Stotesbury home that in spite of the fact that only 600 invitations were issued, 900 people arrived for the party.

The roads to Philadelphia buzzed with hum of motors after the adjournment of Congress for the members of both houses and their families made it a point to go home by the way of Philadelphia. Senator and Mrs. Borah motored up on Thursday with a party of friends and had luncheon on the grounds.

Heads Women's Committee.

Mrs. J. Willis Martin, who is so well known in Washington because of her leadership in Republican activities of the country as well as a frequent visitor to attend important social events here, is chairman of the women's committee of the sesquicentennial. She is one of the hardest worked people in the entire world. It is safe to say, just now, The women are doing their part nobly, for there are 35 committee chairmen with a committee membership of 1,500.

Mrs. Martin wore at one of the evening parties a lovely gown of filmy black lace over chiffon, made in a conservative style. At a daytime affair she wore a gown of black satin combined with black chiffon.

Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury wore one evening a lovely gown of black and silver with a yoke and sleeves of silver lace and a large black hat. Of course, she wore her lovely strands of pearls which are such an important and becoming part of all of her costumes.

Mrs. Kendrick, wife of the mayor, has a penchant for white and silver and wore this combination at one of the evening entertainments.

This official hostess to the women of the world is a very pretty woman and looks equally well in her daytime and evening costumes, and always has a cheery, graceful manner and greeting for those with whom she comes in contact.

Mrs. Hal Gaylord, of Kansas City, who went to Philadelphia from Washington for the festivities, wore one day a gown of white crepe de chine with a white straw hat trimmed with white flowers. For the dinner of the Japanese Ambassador and Mrs. Matsudaira, Mrs. Gaylord wore a gown of silver and blue cloth. Her niece, Mrs. E. H. Hicks, wife of Maj. Hicks, aid to Mayor Kendrick, wore a gown of gold and white trimmed with gold and crystal beads, a large gold fan and a white Chinese shawl embroidered in gold.

Trimnings to Be Placed High.

"Something on the hip," in spite of the Volstead law, is the order of next season for the women of fashion, for all drapery and trimming will be placed high on one hip in the planning of evening costumes. This is evidently a compromise between advocates of the pencil thin and the bouffant silhouette and the result is very charming for it gives a delightful feminine touch and still maintains that line of slender beauty which is a part and parcel of the make-up of the women of this century.

The fashion of this winter and of the late summer will place particular emphasis for evening wear on the décolletage and the modistes are puzzling their minds to conceive some new shape of neckline or effects. Of course, the woman to whom the straight-across or rather high neckline in the front is most becoming will cling to this line in front and do her experimenting with the back of her gown. In fact, the fancy for the French in having the neckline much higher in the front than in the back is a most happy and becoming one and will be followed this winter.

The return of the shoulder strap, which was apparent in the late winter and spring styles, will be an accomplished fact with the first showing of the fall and winter

While the slender silhouette is still the vogue and winter fashions presage even the straightening of the relieving flares, tiny frills and intricate arrangements of tucks and pleats will embellish the costumes.

This will give the effect of great simplicity, but such expensive simplicity, for while the carefully arranged frills and pleats will be so placed that they add not one iota to the width of the garment and never give them the effect of being over-trimmed, yet there is an expensive-ness and art about this handwork that makes the simple unadorned frock and the new kind miles apart, as far as the pocketbook goes, at least. Women have put their international feet down hard and insist on hip length and shorter jackets to their ensemble costumes, and even have adopted the Russian blouse, in spite of the fact that for some reason or other, many of the world designers decided to frown on it.

As the century old war about sleeves goes on apace, and this summer especially, the battle wages merrily. There is the woman as she is always smartly dressed one, too, who always insists that her long sleeves be tightly fitted to the arms. This is the type of woman who wears what she pleases which is frequently a gown without any sleeves at all for daytime wear as well as evening, in spite of the long lists of counts in this regard in many of the fashion dispatches.

Long Sleeves Abandoned.

With the first real summer days the uniform preference for long sleeves by Washington women gave way before the charm and comfort of some of the newest of the summer frocks with sleeves which ended just above the elbow.

Some of the advocates of the long tight sleeves have compromised with those who like the full bishop and puffed from the elbow sleeves by the introduction of one fascinating ruffles of lace from elbow to wrist to match the jabot with which so many of the best looking of the darker dresses are richly adorned.

The medium sized hat will come into its own. In fact, is fast reaching that stage, for while the felts which even in these dog days forecast the chilly autumn winds, those worn at present are wide of brim or close fitting to the head. There are a goodly number of medium sized brims as well.

One of the favorite models for the fall, so the signs in the skies seem to indicate, will be of soft felt with a high tam o' shanter-like crown and medium sized, soft brims, slightly rolled to one side.

Some women discovered that un-trimmed hats are more youthful looking, and this rule holds true in almost every case.

Gown Worn by First Lady.

Mrs. Coolidge wore one day before she left for the summer White House with the President a gown of black crepe satin with a deep collar, frills on long sleeves and a jabot of lovely creamy lace. Her hat was of black transparent straw with a wide brim.

Miss Mary Randolph, secretary to Mrs. Coolidge, who was with her on this occasion, also wore a dark silk dress of dark green crepe trimmed with deep beige lace down the front. Her hat was of beige.

Mrs. C. Phillips Hill wore recently a summery gown of white lace over a flesh-colored slip with a wide ribbon bow on one hip.

Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg has a three-piece costume of white crepe de chine and chiffon. The coat is of crepe de chine and is embroidered in border design. The gown is of chiffon with wide scarf collar. Her hat is a medium-brimmed one of white straw.

Mrs. Morris Ernest Locke looked very handsome at a dinner party in a gown of beige chiffon with insets of lace of a deep shade over a henna satin slip.

Miss Laura Winder Marshall is wearing a becoming sport dress of white satin crepe made with a full skirt and an overblouse with a scarf collar tied in a bow at one side. Her hat is of white felt with a medium-sized brim.

Miss Mary Bradley looked very attractive and girlish in a coat dress of beige crepe edged with a deeper colored satin. Her hat was of black straw with a beige satin band on it.

Skirt Trimmed With Flowers.

Mrs. Floyd Jennings Baker, one of the brides of June, wore recently a gown of rose pink taffeta made with a loosely fitted bodice and full skirt. The skirt was trimmed with little wreaths of blue French flowers.

Mrs. George D. Hope wore at dinner, before going abroad, a gown of white chiffon brocaded in satin and outlined in pearls. This had pearl shoulder straps, and she wore a pearl bandeau in her hair.

Mme. Matsudaira, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, looked very cool and dainty one of the warm days in a crisp handmade gown of white linen embroidered with handwork. Her hat was a plain white straw one with a rather wide brim.

Mrs. Bryan L. Milburn, wife of Capt. Milburn, U. S. A., has a sport dress of white crepe de chine, made with handrun ticks and hand-embroidering. Her hat is a white felt one.

Miss Elizabeth Edwards, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Edwards, of New Jersey, is wearing a white lace gown over a white lace slip with elongated shoulders and square neckline.

Miss Laura Harlan had on a gown of gray chiffon, made with pleated side portions, recently. This had long sleeves and an oval cut neckline. Her hat was of gray straw.

Miss Mabel Boardman wore to her office at the Red Cross one day a gown of white linen, made with wide hemstitching and a tailored collar and long sleeves. She wore a white straw hat with a high crown and narrow brim.

Gloves to Match Gown.

It is to be expected that the vogue for stockings to match the gown should also extend to the gloves. Not for a number of years have there been so many silk gloves worn, and the long sleeves have assured the popularity of the gauntlet glove.

Some of us can not get used to the short or gauntlet glove worn with a sleeveless gown, but some of the women who are considered the best dressed follow this fashion, especially the young girls. The silk gloves, which are full length, are ornately embroidered in colors as a rule or inset with dainty lace.

There is nothing which fits in quite so well with the garden party costume with its lacy parasol as elbow lace mitts, and therefore mitts for summer wear have been unusually fashionable this summer.

Of course, a pretty hand and pretty rings look even prettier in a mitt, but it is just the reverse of a hand which is not pretty. The wise woman with large or badly shaped hands will cling to gloves as handcoverings.

Mrs. James E. Watson is wearing a costume of pale gray chiffon with the coat to match the dress trimmed with gray fur. With this she wears a gray picture hat.

Countess de Mombello, wife of the former naval attaché of the Italian embassy, who sailed for home yesterday, wore at a farewell party a handsome gown of black taffeta made with a light bodice and full skirt, with a U-shaped neckline and no sleeves.

Sport Dress of Soft Beige.

Mrs. Francis Riggs is wearing a very becoming sport dress of soft beige material made in two-piece effect, with pleats at intervals. With this, she wears a small round beige felt hat.

Mme. Seya, wife of the Minister from Latvia, is wearing a gown of light blue taffeta, with a full skirt and fitted bodice and a round neckline.

Mme. Samy, wife of the Egyptian Minister, looked very nice recently in a costume of deep violet crepe de chine made with a pleated skirt and long sleeved overblouse. With this she wore a large violet hat.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, wife of the Minister to Sweden, who has been at their lovely place, the Oaks, in Georgetown, before leaving for California, had on at a luncheon party a gown of white lace over chiffon with white straw hat. Mrs. Bliss also wore a white lace gown at a dinner party, made up over a gold slip.

Mrs. Richard Townsend wore a costume of white crepe de chine, with a handsome white cape with a fur collar, on a recent shopping trip. She wore a white straw hat. Mrs. Townsend wore recently at dinner a gown of black lace with a cape back.

Miss Elizabeth Hitt wore at a dinner before leaving Washington with her mother, a gown of soft white taffeta made with a fitted bodice and wide skirt. She also has a white evening gown of chiffon with floating scarfs falling from the shoulder and with two large white roses on the left hip.

Mrs. Reynolds Hitt is wearing a gown of black chiffon, with a cape wrap of the same material with a gray fur collar. Her hat is a medium sized straw.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WELL done, thou good and faithful servant," is the parting salutation of many clubs, civic and educational organizations to their leaders and members as they depart for a well-earned rest after a winter of concentrated effort in interest of progress and betterment of mankind.

In summing up work accomplished in many fields of human endeavor this winter, both from the national and the local viewpoints, it will be seen that women power will check up with man power and some times even surpass it in effort and accomplishment in reforms and progressive movements—the aim of all worthwhile organizations whether of political, patriotic or civic character.

As a matter of fact, these three terms are becoming more and more synonymous for it is impossible to be patriotic without taking an interest in political issues, and, of course, civic matters dovetail in with both welded together with the educational elements now considered an integral part of every successful campaign.

Women as indispensable factors in campaigns have been recognized not only by political parties but other organizations and movements. In the first place, more women have leisure from the day by day task of bread winner and can throw their whole efforts into the work they undertake. Many of the women, often the most constructive and useful women in campaigns, have other jobs as well, those of family wage earner or contributing wage earner and home maker.

One of the essential characteristics of women in organization work, whether in the women's clubs, alone or in groups composed of workers of both sexes, is patience, and the determination to carry on, in spite of obstacles and discouragement. This, no doubt, can be attributed to the fact that, for generations, women played the part of the patient waiters by the firesides and learned to be grateful for every little step toward the light and the establishment of a wife and mother, as not only a person to be placed upon the pedestal, but revered as a real essential part of the community.

It is, perhaps, for this reason, that the women's organizations working for vital issues against sometimes stupendous opposition count the successful planting of a seed of endeavor in the hearts of the women of the United States as a real accomplishment for a winter's work. They can then maintain bright hopes for a goodly harvest next year or perhaps the year afterward.

In the case of the efforts of wiping out the high percentage of illiteracy in this country in which the women's organizations are actively cooperating with the United States bureau of education, the women have placed the goal of "no more illiteracy in the United States in 1935" as their mecca and are slowly and steadily carrying their banners forward to that end.

American women turned their thoughts last week to the great groups of English women who paraded through the streets of London as a great demonstration of the desire of the women of the United Kingdom for equality as parents and helpmates, workers and patriots.

We could not but recall the great demonstration of American women the day before the first inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President. Then women of every creed and race and political conviction, young and old, a great melting pot of American womanhood, marched up historic Pennsylvania avenue and planted on that day the seeds of the final victory in the campaign for equality of sex and the right of franchise which had been inspired by those early pioneers in the freedom of women, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott.

At that time the women who believed in suffrage marched under one banner. They have now broken ranks and become two great women's organizations, the National League of Women Voters and the National Woman's Party, each one in their own way still working for women, but seeking the final goal by entirely different routes. First one organization and then the other is given credit for bringing about enfranchisement of women in the United States, but many of the old guard who have given over the reins of the campaigns to progress have been expressing the opinion that it was the work of both storming in different ways and from different points the battlements erected by those opposed to suffrage for women.

They were all brave souls, every one. Most of the women who worked hard for suffrage in this country made, as do the women in this kind of work in every country of the globe, great personal sacrifices. Most of them separated themselves from their homes while the battles were the hardest, and those of us who are now enjoying the fruits of their endeavors can not realize how much they had to face in criticism and scorn which sometimes must have worried them.

After the National Woman's Party, first the Congressional union of the National Suffrage association became an independent body, and maintained its own offices in a basement on F street, and the National Woman's Suffrage association worked just as hard in its offices in the Munsey building. The leaders had not time to think of themselves. Out of the panoply of glory on the names of the women who blazed this path, in the minds of the women of this country and no doubt their English sisters and those of other countries, will live in future years in deathless memory those of three pioneers Miss Alice Paul, of the National Woman's Party; Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, and Mrs. Medill McCormick, of the National Woman's Suffrage association.

One of the pathfinders in the shape of work for women was Mrs. McCormick, who passed hour after hour and month after month in her office in the Munsey building leading and encouraging, while her friends of smart circles of Washington and Chicago society were playing. When asked about this ceaseless train of work, Mrs. McCormick, the daughter of Mark Hanna, answered that she was brought up to work and in this way alone lay happiness and contentment.

Left—Mrs. Philip Colfax, of the English Interparliamentary union. Upper Center—Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, who came to Washington for the opening of the Woman's National Democratic club last week from her home in Missouri. Right—Mrs. C. O. Goodpasture, leader in progressive women's movements.

In the National Woman's Party the gallant army burned the midnight oil until the dawn, groups of volunteers, many of them women equipping hard earning their living all day, doing the actual physical as well as the mental work of the campaigns.

The years have flown swiftly and witnessed the success and defeat of political parties and issues. Now after fifteen years, or nearly so, the same two names, Mrs. McCormick and Miss Paul, appear on the scrolls of fame as the banner-bearers of the workers for women, although both of them have preferred to remain in the category of workers and, as a rule, have left the honors in the gifts of their organizations to others.

Uncle Sam has taken a hand in the work to prevent the placing of our youth in vocational positions which old time people used to so aptly describe as "round pegs in square holes." The use of mental tests in the selection of vocational training and occupation is considered useful by the children's bureau and the junior division of the United States employment service, which has made a careful joint survey of vocational guidance and junior placement in cities of the United States.

The use of mental tests in advising children to enter certain kinds of work or to select lines of training that will prepare them for particular types of occupations, such as business, instead of professional work, is, in the authorities' opinion, more limited than their use in what is described as vocational guidance.

At Brown university a system of study of the mental, spiritual and emotional needs of students is being conducted to gauge their fitness not only for their future careers but for the problems which make for happy adjustments of their lives.

The psychological study of the needs of youth has been included in the schedules of many of the local women's clubs. Only in this way women working for the interest of children can be able to judge just which of the various propositions and movements for children and youth will be best for the development of future citizens of the nation.

The Girl Scout cheer echoed and reechoed over the hills of Maryland with the opening of the Girl Scout day camp last Tuesday. Many a little girl had a real happy day in the country with a chance to learn and play, giving her mother freedom of mind to prepare for the return of her child and the rest of the family in the evening. The Girl Scout day camp has been hailed with delight by mothers of the scouts and there is no doubt that the opening of schools will find a larger group of healthy, rosy-cheeked little Washington girls because the local organization has tried this experiment this year. In the few days it has been opened, it has proven to be a successful experiment and the District of Columbia Girl Scouts have added another laurel leaf to their crown of achievement.

The work of the Needlework Guild of America is of special interest to women in the summer time. Even the busiest of the clubwomen have a chance to do their bit as they rest at camp and summer cottages. The guild has always been specially sponsored by the wives of the Presidents. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt is now an honorary officer as well as Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Thomas Preston, Jr., formerly Mrs. Grover Cleveland. In fact, the roster of this society of busy needleworkers reads like a directory of social, official and achieving American women.

Clubwomen of Washington have been asked to assist the chairman of hospitals for the District chapter of the American Red Cross, Mrs. W. S. Spencer, to respond to the call of St. Elizabeth's hospital and other service hospitals for "grape juice" to add to the menu of the invalid overseas men in those institutions. One hundred bottles of grape juice are needed by the local Red Cross in order to answer this appeal, and any persons wishing to assist in this work may send the juice to the chapter headquarters, 16 Jackson place northwest, where it will be promptly acknowledged.

Once a month the committee working under Mrs. Spencer sends ten gallons of ice cream to St. Elizabeth's hospital, where 200 service men in the wards are treated to the delicacy, which is a welcome change in the daily food routine.

Many compliments have been received by chapter officers for the fine appearance of the Red Cross episode, "Volunteer Service," which was one of the features of the patriotic pageant on the steps of the Capitol last Monday. Every department of the work of the chapter was represented in the pageant and the arrangers of the episode were able to induce two leading officers, Maj. Gen. George Barnett, U. S. M. C., retired, chairman of the chapter, and Brig. Gen. John A. Johnston, chairman of the roll call for the chapter, to appear in the administration group of the episode. The entire episode was much applauded by the spectators and it was regarded as one of the most picturesque of the whole pageant.

The Greek government has awarded its highest civilian decoration, the gold cross of St. Xavier, to Miss E. D. Cushman, of Boston, "in recognition of her leadership in the training and education of women in the Near East."

Miss Cushman is director of the Near East Relief Orphan Training school at Corinth, Greece. She was born in New York State of New England parents, and is a descendant of Robert Cushman, who chartered the Mayflower. When she went to the Near East 26 years ago as a medical missionary, she took with her the inherited ideals of her pioneer ancestors, who had braved and conquered a wilderness and had conceived a new democracy.

In subsequent years, while she nursed the sick, arbitrated wrongs, and negotiated with the Turk in his own language, she gained an insight into Eastern character unparalleled by any foreign woman in the Near East. She tried to learn what was fundamentally askew with Eastern civilization, and reached the conviction that the most significant factor of backwardness was the inequality of the sexes.

"Eastern tradition has built a wall between the sexes," she said recently in an official report. "Behind latticed windows, beneath their flaps and under their veils, women lived in a world apart from the activities of their men. They were chattels, and as chattels were subservient to men. Until sex consciousness was in a measure overthrown, and women's usefulness outside as well as inside the home was recognized, there could be no wholesome advancement socially, ethically or even politically."

"The women of the Near Eastern countries are equally intelligent with the men, and often equally well educated. It has remained for American philanthropy, through its educational and relief work, to break down this barrier and lay the foundation of an equality of sex approximating that of the western world."

Since the war, Miss Cushman has been director of a group of Near East Relief schools, through which have passed more than 9,000 refugee children. She introduced coeducational education in these schools, first in the interior of Turkey and later among the refugee children of Greece. Her plan of coeducation was the first experiment of its kind in the Near East, and it met with entire success from the start.

Her present orphanage school establishment at Corinth is regarded by Greek educators as a model of its kind. In all its classrooms boys and girls sit together under one teacher. They cooperate in their juvenile court under a system of self-government; they compete against each other in their sports, and they meet in their social activities with the same unconscious camaraderie as would be found in an American public school. All this is a great novelty in the Near East, but the Greek government believes that the experiment spells progress and has recognized Miss Cushman's contribution to that progress by the award of its highly prized civilian decoration.

the child welfare committee, is planning one meeting each month, with speakers on interesting subjects to inspire membership of the committee and give it a broader understanding of the work.

A special meeting of the board of the District society, Daughters of 1812, was called by the president, Mrs. Francis St. Clair, at her home Wednesday. The resignation of Mrs. Sol Lansburgh as corresponding secretary was presented and accepted. Mrs. Lansburgh had served long and faithfully as a most efficient officer. A letter expressing appreciation for her work was voted sent to her. Mrs. Stallings was appointed to fill Mrs. Lansburgh's unexpired term.

Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, who has been transferred from the Illinois society to the District of Columbia society, was appointed chairman of patriotic work.

Mrs. Alexander Sheppard and Mrs. Andrew Bradley, real daughters of the War of 1812, have honored the society with their membership. Mrs. J. Frank Wilson presented the names of Miss Caroline Loughborough and Miss Daisy Loughborough for membership.

Mrs. Touhy suggested establishing a scholarship in the Maryville seminary in Tennessee. At the suggestion of Mrs. R. Thomas Robinson an entertainment for soldiers at Walter Reed hospital will be given.

Arrangements were made for the October meeting to be held in the home of Mrs. Albert F. Olsen, registrar of the society, in Roland park, Baltimore. The trip over will be made by bus in charge of Mrs. Robinson. A vote of thanks and appreciation was given to Mrs. George W. Trowbridge for the party given by her to the real daughters and members of the Society of 1812 at her country home on Ridge road.

The Maj. William Overton Callis, chapter, D. A. R., held its last meeting of the season Tuesday evening at the home of the second vice regent, Mrs. Albert McDowell, on Rhode Island avenue. The regent, Mrs. M. de Clare Berry, presided. The new officers are: Regent, Mrs. M. de Clare Berry; second vice regent, Mrs. Albert McDowell; recording secretary, Mrs. T. Temple Hill; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edward L. Mart-hill; treasurer, Mrs. Anne Hill; registrar, Miss Sallie Green Colvin; historian, Mrs. Delos W. Thayer; assistant historian, Miss Emily L. Nichols, and chaplain, Mrs. Stephen Harrison Ford.

The following committee appointments were made: Finance, Miss Charlotte Ringland Johnston, Mrs. Walter E. Hutton, Mrs. Anne Hill Nelson, Mrs. Albert McDowell, Mrs. T. Temple Hill; entertainment, Mrs. Delos W. Thayer, Mrs. Walter Hutton, Miss Louise McDowell, Miss Ayesha Straughan, Mrs. Julia S. Jennings, Miss Ruth Nichols, Mrs. Janet Grey, Miss Emille L. Nichols, Mrs. Noel Haller and Miss Eliza Gwendolin Taylor.

The registrar announced that Mrs. Minnie Hopkins Woodward and Miss Hazel Jennings Davis had been admitted by the national society of the daughters and were now members of the chapter. The chapter passed resolutions on the death of Claude N. Bennett, husband of a charter member of the chapter, and for Miss Louise W. Turpin, a charter member and one of the founders of the chapter, in the loss of her sister, Mrs. Virginia Turpin Brownell.

Miss Eliza Gwendolin Taylor was escorted into the room, and after promising loyalty to the ideals of the society and fidelity to the chapter, was welcomed by the regent and each member and presented with the engraved certificate of membership, bearing the portrait of Mary Washington. Mrs. Nellie O. Wooster and Miss Helen Alice Wooster, who were present, were invited to become members. The chapter will meet the third Tuesday in October. Miss Taylor sang, accompanied by Mrs. Marthill, and Miss Helen Wooster also sang, accompanied by Miss Louise McDowell. A supper was served by the hostess, Mrs. Albert McDowell.

The Ellen Spencer Mussey tent, Daughters of Union Veterans, will hold a service at the tomb of the Unknown of the civil war, the first Sunday of each month at 4 p. m., in Arlington, in memory of the birthdays of the 2,111 men who rest beneath the monument. July 4 Miss Emma Hayward placed a wreath on the tomb not only in memory of those beneath it whose birthday it was, but in memory of her own father, who was born in July.

The weekly luncheon of the Zonta club of Washington has been changed to Wednesday instead of Tuesday. The president, Miss Jane Bartlett, will be gone for July. Mrs. William T. Reed will pass July in Atlantic City. The Zonta club will give a picnic soon and also an evening meeting to take the place of the weekly luncheon at one of the tea houses on the outskirts of the city.

The Soroptimist club met Wednesday at the Lafayette hotel. Helena D. Reed was in charge of the program. The guest of honor and principal speaker was Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell. The president, Mrs. Nina Van Winkle, had as her guest Mrs. Champ Clark, who came from her home in Bowling Green, Mo., to participate in the exercises attending the dedication of Monticello.

Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher brought Miss Alice Belton Evans, of the Writers' Clearing house in New York, who is en route to San Francisco, where she will be the Pacific coast representative of the better films movement. Miss Evans gave an account of her experience as secretary of the better films department of the board of review of New York, which endeavored to give the best in motion pictures to the public.

The fifth number of the Soroptimist monthly bulletin was distributed. The report of the superintendent of the Children's hospital, Miss Mattie M. Gibson, stated that 90 boys and girls had been treated in the eye clinic supported by the club and that there had been 221 revisits. Hyson's-on-the-Bay will be the meeting place of the Soroptimists for the week-end July 24. The weekly attendance prize was won by Miss Nell Hyson. Other guests were Miss Helen Fowler and Mrs. Campbell.

The annual picnic of the Mount Pleasant F. F. V. was held in Rock Creek park Wednesday. The president, Mrs. James M. Doran, had charge of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. L. M. Clark and Mrs. M. B. Bennett. Automobile transportation was provided from Sixteenth street to the picnic grounds.

WOMEN'S SILK FROCKS

25.00 35.00

Formerly 35.00 to 39.50

Formerly 49.50 to 59.50

OUR July clearance of silk frocks as you may have discovered last week is providing you with an exceptional opportunity to assemble a style-perfect, glorious summer wardrobe at a mere fraction of what these same frocks would have cost you earlier in the season. For clearance tomorrow we have selected 85 lovely frocks from our regular stocks and repriced them considerably to your advantage. Frocks of this kind do not generally appear in clearance sales so early in the season—but we have decided to take our reductions now, to make room for our fall dress stocks.

Every frock an unprecedented value!
Every frock made of superior quality fabric!
Every frock beautifully tailored and finished!
Every frock decidedly smart!
Every frock an asset to any smart wardrobe!

DAYTIME Dresses sometimes smartly follow the line of least resistance, which means that they are in the familiarly fashionable two-piece mode with novel pleated skirts and interesting tailored jumpers. Or they adopt a straightline course and break the monotony cleverly by full-length graceful jabots or tucked panels. Of course there are many of the delightful redingote models and plenty of coat frocks—to say nothing of the more graceful versions of the daytime mode, developed in soft flares, tunics and aprons and in the sheer mediums.

FORMAL evening and dinner gowns are all sleeveless and have an air of chic that is not as a rule associated in your mind with dresses at this price. Sheer chiffons and georgettes, some pailletted and studded in rhinestones in the smart way, others trimmed with lace. Pastel shades and white.

8 Chapeaux et 40 Dames.

In place of the regular meeting for July the 8 Chapeaux et 40 Dames will attend the picture of "As No Man Has Loved" at the Wardman Park theater on Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. This movie is running for the week of July 11, under the auspices of the 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux, American Legion.

A picnic at the bureau of mines camp at Great Falls, Va., was attended by twenty or more members of this salon on Friday. The trip was made by auto and supper was served under the direction of Mrs. Kolbos, who was hostess at the camp. Plans were outlined at the June meeting for the formation of a drill team, looking forward to the national convention of the American Legion at Philadelphia in October.

The cadets will remain until this afternoon, when they will return to the camp. They were given preliminary instruction before leaving yesterday by Maj. Raymond G. Payne in order that they may be better prepared for the inspection. The boys expect to learn the fundamentals of manning a battery. Only cadets who had received permission from their parents were allowed to go. The proposal met with a keen response at the camp.

MANY TRANSIENTS immediately on reaching Washington, buy The Post as a guide to desirable rooms and board. Experienced keepers of rooms and boarding houses know about this of course. They find their use of The Post's classified pages invariably worthwhile.

CHANGE IS PLANNED IN DECISION OF BOLT OF SHOULDER RIFLE

Springfield Army to Experiment on 1903 Caliber .30 Service.

TRACER AMMUNITION TESTED AT ABERDEEN

As a Result, Small-Arms Program Has Been Prepared for Long-Distance Use.

Efforts continuously are being made by ordnance officers of the army to improve weapons used by the service, and particular attention is being given to the shoulder-rifle, pistol, machine-rifles, and machine-guns.

In order to correct certain defects found to exist in the construction of the bolt of the 1903 caliber .30 service shoulder-rifle, the experts at Springfield Armory, Mass., have been directed to investigate the practicability of slightly changing the design of that part. It has been suggested that several experimental bolts be made of an alloy of steel, such as chrome vanadium alloy, for comparison with bolts of the regular material.

Authority also has been given for manufacture of receivers for the rifle of the same alloy steel for test at the same time. The principal difficulty encountered with the bolt, necessitating these experiments, has been the deformation of the bifurcated locking-lug where it strikes against the cut-off as the bolt is opened.

Agree On Specifications.

Agreement has been reached among representatives of the ordnance office and of ammunition manufacturers as to certain controversial phases of the specifications of the new caliber .30 M1 ammunition, specifications in final form have been prepared at Springfield Arsenal, Pa., and proposals recently will be invited for furnishing 17,500,000 rounds of this ammunition.

Experiments are being continued on caliber .30 and caliber .50 primers, with a view of improving the ignition qualities of each in an endeavor to produce primers having less injurious effect on the barrels of shoulder-rifles and machine guns. Experiments also are being continued with respect to waterproofing caliber .30 and caliber .45 ammunition.

The using services have approved the red tracer as the standard for manufacture in lieu of both red and green tracers.

In addition to experiments that are being conducted on caliber .50 tracer-bullets with a view of obtaining a type which can be manufactured as standard manufacture, experiments also have been initiated for development of a new type of caliber .50 ball ammunition to replace the type now tentatively approved for production. The new bullet for the ball cartridge will be of much simpler construction and much cheaper to manufacture than the present design.

Tests were conducted last month at Aberdeen proving ground, Md., of tracer ammunition, as a result of which definite recommendations were made and a small-arms program prepared for tests of long-distance tracers, with a view of ascertaining the particular advantages, if any, of tracers beyond a given range. It is believed that, after these tests are completed, a more definite program will be outlined for development of improved tracer ammunition for the using services.

Experiment at Fort Monroe.

At the suggestion of the ordnance office, experiments have been made at Fort Monroe, Va., by the coast artillery with a view of obtaining the definite relation between tracer and ball ammunition in firing at targets on the ground at ranges up to 1,000 yards. Sighting is conducted by raising or lowering the machine gun so that the tracer, at a given range, appears to have a definite position with respect to the target, which will insure the maximum number of hits by the ball ammunition on the target. Experiments along these lines will be continued against fixed targets on land and water, after which the data accumulated will be utilized in firing against moving targets in the air.

Two anti-aircraft tripods for caliber .30 machine guns of the new type have been completed, and one has been sent to the coast artillery board at Fort Monroe for test and the other to Aberdeen proving ground. Eight of this type of mount will be available for use at Aberdeen during an anti-aircraft firing program to be conducted in September. Then a 1 1/2-meter caliber coincident type range finder, loaned by the Navy Department, will be used.

Amalgamation of Common British Services Opposed

Special Committee Finds Great Difficulties Barring Union of Intelligence, Medical, Supply and Chaplain Branches.

A report of a committee on amalgamation of British services common to the army, navy and air force recently was issued as a "Blue Book." The committee was set up to make definite proposals for amalgamating, as far as possible, the common services of those branches of the fighting forces, such as intelligence, supply, transport, education, medical, chaplains and other overlapping activities, in order to reduce costs. The report states among other observations: "We are of the opinion that the amalgamation of the common services would only be practicable if formed part of a comprehensive scheme of reorganization, which provided for the establishment of a ministry to control a defense force in which the identity of the navy, army and air force had been merged. So far as we are aware, such a revolutionary idea as the merging of the identity of the three services in one force has never been contemplated. But unless such a ministry is created, we are unable to devise means by which responsibility can be allocated as between the authority charged with the administration of an amalgamated common service and the ministers who are severally responsible to parliament for the administration of the navy, army and air force.

"We are, nevertheless, impressed with the need for establishing closer relations between the three services, in order to insure cooperation for free interchange of information on all matters of common interest and the use by each department of facilities and services provided by the others."

The committee expresses the opinion that amalgamation of the medical departments of the navy, army, and air force is undesirable; that amalgamation of the supply expenditure would be effected by amalgamation of the chaplains of the three services; that amalgamation of the intelligence branches of the three forces is inadvisable; and that amalgamation of the chaplains or any sections of them is not warranted in present circumstances.

FORMER FIELD CLERKS IN MARINES LOSE APPEAL

Such Service Can Not Be Counted In Longevity Pay, Rules McCarl.

LAW SPECIFIES THE ARMY

Warrant officers of the marine corps, who have had service as field clerks, quartermaster's department, will not be permitted to count such service for longevity pay purposes as warrant officers. This ruling was made in a decision by the comptroller general.

The paymaster of the marine corps presented the question as to whether or not warrant officers of the corps should count such service under the provisions of an act of April 27, 1925, which authorizes the appointment of field clerks and field clerks of the quartermaster's department of the army as warrant officers, and authorizes the counting of prior service as clerks in computing their longevity pay.

The marine corps contended that the longevity pay of their warrant officers is assimilated with that of warrant officers of the army, and that the act of April 27, 1925, should entitle the counting of service as field clerks in the marine corps quartermaster's department for longevity pay purposes. The comptroller general also stated that there is no longer in the general assimilation of pay of the marine corps warrant officers with the pay of warrant officers of the navy, but that an act of June 10, 1922, precludes expressly for the pay of warrant officers of the marine corps in the same manner as for warrant officers of the army.

TROPHY FOR GUNNERY WON BY CALIFORNIA

Omaha Leads Light Cruisers in Torpedo Performance for Year.

The U. S. S. California has been found to be the winner of the gunnery trophy in the battleship class for the competitive year ended June 30, that ship having attained the highest figure of merit on the basis of all forms of practices—enlarging into the gunnery competition. During the competitive year, the California was commanded by Capt. William H. Standley and Lieut. Comdr. Marion C. Robertson was gunnery officer.

Following is the relative standing of light cruisers in torpedo performance for the last competitive year: Omaha, Concord, Trenton, Richmond, Marblehead, Memphis, Detroit, Raleigh, Cincinnati, Milwaukee.

Commodatory letters have been sent by the Secretary of the Navy to Lieut. W. B. Coleman, gunnery officer of the U. S. S. Wood, which stood first, Lieut. O. C. Wierum, gunnery officer of the U. S. S. Borie, which stood second, and Lieut. A. M. Petersen, gunnery officer of the U. S. S. Marcus, which stood third in the gunnery competition of destroyers during the last year.

PREPARATIONS MADE TO BUILD CRUISERS

Government Yards Seeking Work on Four Not Yet Allocated.

Arrangements having been made for construction of the hull of light cruiser No. 24, the Pensacola, at New York navy yard, and of light cruiser No. 25, the Salt Lake City, complete, and of the engines of the Pensacola at Cramps' yard at Philadelphia, consideration is being given to questions pertaining to light cruisers Nos. 26, 27 and 28, for which funds are available to start work in this fiscal year.

It remains to be decided which, if any, of them will be constructed at navy yards. There is considerable agitation for localities to have the building of the ships allocated to them.

All five of these cruisers will be of the treaty limit of 10,000 tons displacement and of 8-inch guns; the designs call for the most powerful ships that can be produced within those limits; and the authorized cost of the hull and machinery of each is $11,100,000.

TRANSFERS OF NAVY OFFICERS TO BRING SHIP STAFF CHANGES

Admirals Plan to Take Personnel Heads When Assuming New Duties.

CHOICE OF CHASE AND DE STEIGUER UNKNOWN

Few Replacements Expected in Medical, Supply and Marine Details.

In anticipation of transfers early in September of Admiral Charles F. Hughes from command of the battle fleet to command of the United States fleet, of Vice Admiral Richard H. Jackson from command of the battle fleet divisions of the battle fleet to command of the fleet, and of Rear Admiral Louis R. de Steiguer from command of the fleet division 4, to command of the fleet division 1, consideration is being given to changes in the staffs of those officers.

Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh and Capt. George F. Neal, who have been assigned to the staff of the assistant chief of staff, respectively, with Admiral Hughes, will accompany him for the same duties in the higher command, when he shifts from the fleet division 4 to the fleet division 1. Commander Albert T. Church, now aid and fleet engineer with Admiral Hughes, will go with him as fleet material officer; Commander Felix X. Gygas will continue with him as aid and fleet engineer; and Commander William T. Smith, now aid and fleet gunnery officer, will go as aid and fleet training officer, and Commander Patrick N. L. Bellinger, aid and fleet aviation officer, will go as fleet aviation officer. Lieut. Comdr. Hugh P. Le Clair, aid and fleet radio officer, and Lieut. Comdr. Howard F. Kingman, aid and fleet lieutenant, will accompany Admiral Hughes to Seattle with their present duties.

Officers to Transfer.

It is understood that when Vice Admiral Jackson transfers from the fleet division 4 to the fleet division 1, Capt. Joel R. P. Pringle, chief of staff; Commander O. L. Cox, aid and division engineer, and Lieut. Comdr. S. F. Bryant, aid and communication officer, will go with him to assume their duties at Commander R. S. Crenshaw, now aid and division gunnery officer, probably will go as assistant chief of staff, and that Lieut. Comdr. Marion C. Robertson, now gunnery officer of the California, will go on that ship for duty on the staff of Admiral Jackson as fleet gunnery officer.

So far as now known at the Navy Department, no final decision has been reached as to the composition of staff of Admiral de Steiguer as commander of the fleet division 1, except that his gunnery officer will be Commander Henry K. Hewitt, as previously announced, or the staff of Rear Admiral John V. Chase, who will succeed Admiral de Steiguer in command of fleet division 4.

It is understood that few, if any changes will be made among the staff of the medical and marine officers on these transfers.

Lieut. Comdr. Robert H. English, now on duty in the operations office, Navy Department, will be assigned to duty as navigator of the U. S. S. Mississippi.

CONGRESS MAY RAISE ACADEMY ALLOWANCE

Decrease in Line Officers Reported as Greater Than Annapolis Replacements.

The fact that the present allowance of midshipmen appointments to the Naval Academy will not offset the normal rate of attrition in the line of the navy, probably will result in some concerted action in the near future toward an increase in the number of such appointments.

It is estimated that, after graduation of 1927, there will be a gradual annual decrease in the number of midshipmen to the academy, which will be offset by the present allowance of three midshipmen for every senator and representative it will be impossible for the line to reach the number allowed by law, 5,499. With three appointments, it is evident that the annual decrease in the line will continue until a strength of 4,800 officers is reached, when the graduation of midshipmen will maintain only that number as compared with 5,123 officers on June 4 of this year.

With four appointments, it is estimated that the annual graduation from the Naval Academy would maintain a strength of about 5,400 officers.

Lieut. Comdr. Stevens Given Higher Rating

Lieut. Comdr. Herbert E. Stevens, supply corps, just has been promoted to the rank of commander in that corps, to date as of January 11, 1916, in accordance with special legislation recently enacted.

Commander B. M. Dabson, supply corps, has reported for duty in the bureau of supplies and accounts, Navy Department, in charge of the purchase division.

The following chief petty officers of the navy have been appointed acting pay clerks, as a result of an examination conducted last March: Ernest M. Joyce, U. S. S. Huron; John W. Haines, U. S. S. Henderson; George W. Moore, U. S. S. Bridge; Ernest W. Rogers, U. S. S. Vestal; Clifford B. Fischer, U. S. S. Rigel; and Earl W. Gardner, U. S. S. Rigel.

Man-Without-Country Story Portrayed in Wardman Park Theater.

A film version of Edward Everett Hale's story of Nolan, the man without a country, is being presented this week at the Wardman Park theater, for the benefit of the "Forty and Eight" of the American Legion, officially known as La Societe des Quarante Hommes et Huit Chevaux.

The Wardman Park theater is co-operating with the activities of the Forty and Eight by exhibiting William Fox's production "As No Man Has Loved," based on Hale's story, during the entire week of July 11.

To facilitate the sale of tickets, the organization has established two downtown offices, one at the florist shop of Charles Kohn, 606 Thirtieth street northwest, and the other at the Roma, 1707 DeSales street, northwest.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTHCHER.

The Central High school chess club is, as its name reveals, an organization whose membership is composed entirely of students of that institution. During the past year the club conducted activities with a success unparalleled in its three years of existence. At the expense of the latest international and local Capital City news we will take time today to review briefly the doings of the Central club, as related by their president.

At the commencement of the school year Fred Thomas, president, served as the leader of the organization, with Breward Russell, vice president, and Donald Brown, secretary. The second semester saw Kenneth Stubbs take the president's chair, with Louis Dembitz, vice president, and Donald Brown, secretary. The change in officers was largely necessitated by the departure of Thomas for a cruise of the Orient.

A tournament to decide the holder of the club championship title was held early in the year, with fifteen entrants divided into two classes, each contesting a separate tourney, the winners of each meeting in match play to effect the final decision. In this way the time necessary for the completion of the event was shortened considerably.

Kenneth Stubbs eventually won the title, making the third time he had done so, by winning the class A tourney and defeating J. Hord, the winner of the class B tourney, in a single game, after which the latter resigned the match. A summary of the contestants' scores follows:

Player. W. L. Player. W. L.
K. Stubbs. 10 0 B. Brown. 3 6
J. Hord. 8 4 L. Dembitz. 3 6
P. Russell. 7 5 D. Brown. 2 7
R. H. Muthcher. 1 9

Immediately after the close of the club championship tourney a rapid transit tournament was begun, in which each entrant met every other entrant in three games, each player being compelled to complete their every move within ten seconds. The result was a sweeping victory for the club champion, Stubbs.

Before leaving for the Orient, Thomas contested two matches with Club Champion Stubbs in an effort to wrest the title, but his labors were fruitless, Stubbs winning the first match by a 3-0 score and the second by a 2-1 score.

Simultaneous exhibitions were subsequently given by both Stubbs and Thomas, the former finishing with a score of 5 1/2-2 1/2, and the latter with a score of 7-3. Stubbs also visited the boys' chess club at the University of Maryland, and, after a month, came out with a score of 10-0, after more than five hours of play.

Two opening tournaments were held in an effort to encourage the members in a study of opening tactics, one in which the player of the white pieces was compelled to essay the French defense, and the other in which the black players resorted to the Scotch defense. More practical openings could scarcely have been chosen. Stubbs once more demonstrated his superiority in both events.

The summary shows that in two tourneys each entrant contested two games with every other, once with the white and again with the black pieces. Tournaments of such a character are rare.

HARDEN CAMP SELECTS CONVENTION DELEGATES

Spanish War Veterans to Hold Outing Saturday at Marshall Hall.

Delegates to represent the Richard J. Harden camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, at the convention in Des Moines, Iowa, August 15 to 18, were named at the camp's recent meeting in Pythian temple.

The delegates elected were John A. Gallagher, Thomas A. Hudlow, Jacob Orken, Dr. Albert W. Evans, Daniel Foley, William E. O'Neill and Charles Flatz. Alternates elected were Francis C. Huhn, Bernard R. Lee, John J. Allen, John Hamburg and J. T. Mooney.

In observance of Santiago day, Saturday, the camp will hold an excursion to all camps and auxiliaries of the organization in the District of Columbia, with prizes and cash prizes awarded, among the scheduled events, J. E. Wilson is chairman of the excursion.

Three new members were mustered into the camp. They are Charles W. Davis, Frances A. Torrens and Harry Newton. The semi-annual report read at the meeting by Adjutant Leslie and Quartermaster Hudlow, showed the camp increased considerably in membership and was sound financially through the past six months.

Past Department Commander Arthur H. League, accompanied by several officers of the department, recently went to Walter Reed hospital and installed into office Senior Vice Commander Albert Michaud, who is confined to the hospital. Past President Van Allen, who is also at the hospital, was visited.

Appointment of army band leaders as warrant officers is expected to be resumed by the War Department in the near future. No appointments have been made for several years as an act of Congress of 1922 provided that none should be made so long as the number of warrant officer band leaders exceeded the number of authorized bands.

This excess no longer exists, and the next vacancy that occurs will make it possible to appoint to warrant grade some army musician. Only those who have passed the special band leaders' course at the Army Music school here are eligible for appointment.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS INSTALL DISTRICT HEADS

Department Committee Is Beginning Plans for the Armistice Ball.

NEW MEMBERS SOUGHT

The new department officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were seated at a meeting in the National Guard armory, Union station plaza, Wednesday, by Department Commander Charles H. Reilly. The following officers filled their respective stations: Senior Vice Commander James F. Bird, Junior Vice Commander E. J. Jacques, Judge Advocate Al Jennings, Chaplain Dr. V. O. Anderson, Quartermaster Thomas W. Jones, Adjutant William Homer Carroll, Patriotic Instructor Maj. George A. Wold, Inspector Frank Heise, and Officer of day John J. Allen.

The new council of administration consists of the department officers and the following councilmen: Commander A. E. Pierce, National Capital post, No. 127; Commander Guy H. Birdsall, Equality-Walter Reed post, No. 284; Commander Horace S. Dean, Federal post, No. 824; Commander Douglas A. White, Columbia post, No. 822; Commander Harry Walt, Potomac post, No. 1085; Senior Vice Commander W. R. Thompson, Front Line post, No. 1461; and Daniel J. Leahy, Ernest Wickstrand, Harry P. Clements, John Wischhausen, Capt. Edwin S. Bettelheim, R. G. Moore and E. Lockhead.

The report of the "buddy poppy" campaign, conducted by the department and approved and disbursed of the proceeds was made to the various posts for relief work conducted for the veterans and their dependents in the District of Columbia.

The department welfare committee was instructed to arrange for the annual V. F. W. armistice ball, to be held in the Willard hotel on November 11. This committee is also making plans for the department outing at Marshall Hall, the details of which will be announced later.

The various post commanders were requested to forward to the department adjutant the names of the delegates and alternates elected by their respective posts to attend the twenty-seventh annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in El Paso, Tex., in September.

The council went on record as supporting the outing of the National Capital post, No. 127, to be held at Marshall Hall August 5. The recruiting committee is planning an extensive campaign for new members with a membership of 2,500 as a goal by September 1.

Capital Filipino Club Elects New Officers

Eugenio Fonbuena was elected president of the Filipino club of Washington, at a recent meeting in the Y. M. C. A. hall. Other officers elected were Gil Luna Sull, vice president; Cesar Farinas, secretary; Demetrio Sugutan, treasurer; and Julian Revarez, sergeant at arms.

Inauguration of the new officers will take place Saturday night at the Y. M. C. A. building. The president-elect has announced the following committee chairman: Bernardo Gapuz, publicity; Isaac Capayas, accounts; Alfred Samson, programs; Juan Quijane, rules; Dedine Fendrick, membership; and Alberto Abellera, athletics.

Dozens of men in Washington and thousands throughout the country who are in hospitals, in vocational training or on a compensation status will profit by the amendments to the act governing the veterans' bureau that were enacted at the close of the recent session of Congress, according to the Washington office of the Disabled American Veterans.

In addition to these benefits the changes of the law are expected to simplify and speed procedure affecting administration. Veterans' bureau divisions now are working on orders and regulations affecting the new law, as Brig. Gen. Hines has ordered that the changes shall become effective as soon as possible.

The District of Columbia department, Disabled American Veterans, has already received a large number of requests for aid under the amendments, and the organization here will maintain a full-time liaison service to act as free attorney for men in the preparation and presentation of claims.

MARYLAND PARISH PLANS ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES JULY 25

Prince Georges to Mark Its 200th Year at Services in Rockville.

ALL OF DISTRICT ONCE IN CHURCH TERRITORY

Bishop Freeman and Other Dignitaries Invited to Take Part in Celebration.

Special to The Sunday Post.
Rockville, Md., July 10.—The 200th anniversary of the establishment of Prince Georges parish will be celebrated in Christ church Rockville, Sunday, July 25. The parish, which originally included all of Maryland from Indianhead to the Pennsylvania line and all territory between the Potomac and Patuxent rivers, of which what is now the District of Columbia was a part, now embraces but a small part of Montgomery county, with but two churches—Christ church, Rockville, and Ascension church, Gal-thersburg.

The Rev. Millard F. Minnick, rector of the two churches, who is at the head of the committee in charge, has announced that the Rt.
Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, and other church dignities have been invited and are expected to attend. The program has not been completed, but Dr.
Minnick has announced that at the morning services there will be morning prayer and holy communion and that the Rev. Charles T.
Warner and Enoch N. Johnson, former members of the parish, will participate in the evening services, which will include evening prayer and other features.

Charter Given in 1726.

The act of the colonial assembly granting the charter to the vestry of Prince Georges parish was approved July 26, 1726. The first services were held in the District of Columbia fourteen years before by the Rev. John Fraser. In 1719

Col. John Bradford donated to the church 100 acres of land now the glebe and cemetery of Rock Creek parish and originally a part of Prince Georges parish.

The first church near Rockville in Prince Georges parish was erected in 1738, where the Rockville Union cemetery is now located. The site was given by Thomas Wilson.
In 1822 the church was removed to Rockville, the site where the present edifice now stands, it being donated by Samuel Holland.
The rectory was built at its present location in 1829 on ground given by Judge Kilgour. Both the church and rectory have been rebuilt several times.

Plan Memorial Hall.

As a gift from this generation to those who have died, members of the parish have decided to erect a memorial parish hall and to have therein a tablet containing the names of those who were most active in the work of the church. To raise funds for this purpose, a committee has been named with William H. Baden as chairman, and at the services July 25 the committee will present the pledges as an offering in commemoration of those whose generosity made possible the present place of worship.

3-DAY FETE WILL AID ST. VINCENT'S ASYLUM

Country Store to Be Feature of Lawn Carnival on August 2, 3 and 4.

J. W. COTTER IS CHAIRMAN

Funds for the support of St. Vincent's orphan asylum, described as one of the finest of its type by nationally known social welfare experts in the last survey of conditions in Washington, will be raised through a lawn fete on the asylum grounds, Fourth and Channing streets northwest, August 2, 3 and 4.

and is the principal public appeal for support by the institution, was made yesterday by John W. Cotter, general chairman of the auxiliary of the asylum, in charge of the fete.

Booths will be erected about the grounds of the asylum, and among other amusement features will be a country store, a straw ride, and various other games. Refreshments will include ice cream, cake, lemonade and other soft drinks, and candy.

Under the direction of a committee of women, dinner will be served from 4 until 7 o'clock each evening. Mrs. Annie King is chairman of the dinner committee, other members of which are Mrs. John Berger, Mrs. James Dwyer, Mrs.
John Dunlap, Mrs. Joseph Mc-
Enerney, Mrs. T. B. Holliday, Mrs.
Frank Nesline, Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. M. Martin.

James C. Simpson and Frank

Gunning will be in general charge of the booths and grounds. Mrs.
K. Lane will have charge of the country store; Mrs. Frank Gunning, ice cream; Miss Helen Caranagh, sandwiches and coffee;
Miss Dorothy Nesline, candy; Miss Nettie Fitzgerald and Miss Ethel
DeGaw, of the "bingo" stand; Miss Mary Revlin, lemonade; Louis
Krauss, of the straw ride.

Others who will have charge of miscellaneous booths include C. A.
Vernon, Joseph McCann, M. Sweeney, Frank Kane, John G. Donahue and James A. Wright. John Burns is chairman of the press committee.

SUCCESSOR IS SOUGHT TO PRINCIPAL HOFFMAN

Deceased Colored Teacher
Had Qualities Making Choice Difficult.

TRIBUTE PAID BY KEMP

Fletcher Kemp, superintendent of schools in Arlington county, Va., seeking a successor for the late Edward C. Hoffman as principal of the Jefferson school at Johnson Hill, stated yesterday that he found it difficult to find a colored man or woman with all of the sterling qualities of the former principal.
Hoffman, who died Sunday, was one of the best known colored men in Arlington county, having served for 25 years as principal of the graded school there, and in other civil capacities. His death was regarded as a community loss, a large number of white citizens attending the funeral exercises at the Lomax African Methodist Episcopal church Thursday, including Superintendent Kemp, and Frank Fields and Austin Klopff, Commonwealth attorneys.

"His great aim was to render service," the superintendent said yesterday. "As a teacher of the eighth grade and principal, with three assistants, he was always dependable and loyal, and unselfish in all of his endeavors and purposes. It will be very difficult to find his counterpart."

The former principal was secretary of the colored teachers educational association of the county. He is survived by a widow.

87 NEW HOME SITES IN LEE HEIGHTS, VA., OFFERED FOR SALE

Allotment Seventh Addition
Since Development Started by Ruby Lee Minar.

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY MARKED IN 2 COUNTIES

Projected Large Public Improvements Have Effect in Arlington and Fairfax.

A new allotment of 87 home sites was opened for sale yesterday in Lee Heights, Va. The new tract is the seventh addition to Lee Heights since its development was started by Ruby Lee Minar.

Mrs. Minar reported the largest volume of business in the history of her organization. At the present rate of increase, she said, in excess of a million dollars' worth of land will be sold in Lee Heights in 1926.

"Real estate activity has increased amazingly all over Arlington and Fairfax counties," Mrs.
Minar said. "It is not a boom condition, but is the natural and inevitable result of the tremendous public improvements projected for the Virginia side of the river."

Buy Strategic Land.

"Many people saw this situation coming and began buying up land strategically situated in both counties. They stand to make substantial profits in the next few years."

"I doubt if there is any other community in the United States that is receiving at this time so many and so important public improvements as is Arlington county. As great a volume of real estate business as there is in the county at this time, it is bound to be multiplied many times over in the next few years."

"The day after the water bond election was carried, bringing water to the entire country from the Dalecarlia reservoir, many owners of acreage tracts were holding their land for prices 25 to 50 per cent higher than the day before. The public is acquainted with the great benefits that the new Lee highway and the Francis Scott Key bridge have brought to Arlington and Fairfax counties. Now, the government has started work on the new $15,000,000 Arlington Memorial bridge, which will have a profound effect on development in Arlington county.

Lee Boulevard Important.

"The latest project of momentous interest to property owners on the Virginia side of the Potomac is the Lee boulevard, a super-highway with a 200-foot right of way, the location of which was announced
June 30. The only way for a layman to get a conception of what this new thoroughfare will mean for Arlington county is to investigate the developments which have followed along the routes of similar highways in other parts of the country. Millions of dollars in capital will come into the county.

"I venture to say that inside the next five years practically the entire extent of the county will be divided into home sites and that the county will have been transformed into a city in actuality."

Section 7 of Lee Heights, which was placed on the market yesterday, is a part of the Netherfield farm, formerly owned by Dr. Presley M. Rixey, rear admiral, retired.
The new section extends from section 3-A and 4 to the estate of Dr.
Richard N. Sutton.

Real Estate Sales Managers to Meet

The sales managers division of the Washington Real Estate board will hold its meeting at the Lee house Tuesday, at 12:30 p. m. The division, under the chairmanship of Charles H. Hillegeist, is made up of the various sales managers of the offices who are members of the Washington Real Estate board, and deals with advertising, sales and the various problems in connection with actual selling and transferring real estate in the District of Columbia.

A number of important topics are expected to be discussed at this meeting.

MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS YIELD GREATER RETURNS

Realty Investigators Find Insurance Companies Get
6.19 Per Cent.

STOCKS PAY 4.76 ONLY

The mortgage investments of life insurance companies of the United States have yielded an average gross return of 6.19 per cent over a period of the last eleven years, according to a preliminary report of the Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities to the Mortgage and Finance Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, based on figures furnished by the Alfred M.
Best Co.

The study included 230 companies, all those having assets in 1925 of more than $500,000. The average income on stocks and bonds owned by the same insurance companies over the same period was 4.76 per cent.

The differential in interest returns between mortgage investments and investments in stocks and bonds was, therefore, 1.43 per cent. That is to say, the mortgage investments of the companies in question have yielded approximately 30 per cent more than their investments in stocks and bonds.

Never, save once in the period studied, has the return from mortgage investments been under 6 per cent. This was in the year 1919 when the average return received was 5.90 per cent. On the other hand never have the returns from stocks and bonds owned by the insurance companies in the same period exceeded 5 per cent except during the years 1924 and 1925.

Recognition of the desirability of mortgage investments on the part of life insurance companies who are responsible for investing more than $11,000,000,000 is indicated by the fact that the percentage of their total investments placed in mortgages has increased from 31.65 per cent in 1911 to 40.5 per cent in 1925. That is, the percentage of life insurance funds thus invested in mortgages was, in 1925, 28 per cent greater than it was in 1911. The actual increase is, of course, tremendous, leaping from $1,228,000,000 in 1911 to $4,775,000,000 in 1925.

That is, life insurance companies have increased their investments in mortgages both absolutely and relatively.

BUILDING COST PEAK IS NOT YET REACHED, INDICATED IN SURVEY

Runaway Labor Market Less Evident, Construction Research Bureau Says.

PAY INCREASE GRANTED IN MOST LARGE CITIES

Strikes Also Reported, but Carpenters' and Metal Workers' Agreement Is Helpful.

Indication of a runaway labor market is not so evident as during the earlier months of the year, although the tendency toward higher building labor costs is continuing pronounced, according to the national monthly labor survey compiled by the building construction research bureau of G. L. Miller & Co. The survey said:

"The tendency toward higher building labor costs is becoming more pronounced, although both skilled and unskilled labor is already receiving the highest wages in the history of the construction industry. Building trades employers made little headway toward forestalling wage increases during the spring adjustment period. The peak in labor costs is undoubtedly still to be reached, although indication of a runaway labor market is not so evident as during the earlier months of the year.

"Settlement of the long standing jurisdictional dispute between the sheet metal workers and the carpenters' union has had a most stimulating effect on the entire building industry. This long interunion fight over installation of metal trim was responsible for interrupting hundreds of millions of dollars worth of construction in many localities during the last five years. It was also responsible for withdrawal of the carpenters from the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor and all local building trade councils.

Building Trades United.
"Under terms of the agreement between the two unions, which has already been given the signatures of the international officers, the carpenters are granted the majority of their major demands. This arrangement practically reverses the decision of the national board of jurisdictional awards, which awarded the greater part of metal trim installation to the sheet metal workers.

"Ratification of the settlement plan will undoubtedly result in re-affiliation of the carpenters' union with its 400,000 membership, to the federation building trades department. It will also mean reestablishment of united action and peace and harmony in the local building trade circles throughout the country.

"During the last 30 days near a hundred wage increases ranging from 5 to 25 cents an hour were being granted to building crafts in a score of cities, including Atlanta, Baltimore, Buffalo, Grand Rapids, Indianapolis, Houston, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Washington, Savannah, Ga., Newark, St. Louis, Niagara Falls and White Plains, N. Y.

Many Increases Granted.

"One of the most significant wage adjustments made was in Minnesota, where the Minnesota Building Employers association, representing 'open shop' contractors in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, have granted widespread increases. Twenty trades in St. Paul received increases ranging from 5 to 12½ cents an hour, and in Duluth ten crafts received similar advances. Five trades in Minneapolis received upward adjustments in their scales.

"Little significance was attached to announcement of decreases in wage scales of some crafts in Seattle, Wash., Youngstown, Ohio, and Florida cities. The reductions were small and affected only minor trades, and were more than offset by increases granted more important crafts, such as electricians, hoisting engineers, carpenters and bricklayers.

"The demand for labor continues heavy, except in a few remote localities. Little is heard regarding labor shortage, although some of the larger cities report the need of more skilled workers in the mason trades. In the middle West some surplus in labor has been reported, but this condition is not general.

"Despite the widespread demands for wage increases, strikes are comparatively few, and both labor and employers appear to be showing a disposition to get together, except in a few of the larger centers, where the five-day week and 'open shop' has developed as the paramount issue.

Strikes in Many Cities.

"There are now strike in nearly a score of cities throughout the country, but only one or two crafts in each locality are affected, and a settlement in a majority of the disputes is expected in the near future. In Los Angeles, San Francisco and adjoining territory a strike of more than 10,000 carpenters against the open shop is still going strong and building is reported tied up. In Cleveland the settlement of the laborers' strike has resulted in a resumption of building activity, but the painters, paperhangers and fight for a wage increase and the five-day week. Other cities from which strikes were reported were Kansas City, Indianapolis, Paterson, N. J., St. Louis, Philadelphia, Providence, R. I., Boston, Hammond, Whiting and Gary, Ind.

"In New York city the labor situation is tranquil, and practically all of the building crafts have been granted increases since the first of the year. In Chicago, where a number of increases have been granted, progress has been made in signing new agreements for the year, and the possibility of any serious labor dispute is remote.

"While the five-day week movement in the building crafts has not played as prominent a part in the

REALTY BOARDS SEEKING CLOSER COOPERATION

Committee Heads Are Named to Link National and State Groups.

PLAN WIDELY SUPPORTED

Closer cooperation between the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the 32 existing State real estate associations will be the purpose of committees appointed by the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the National Board of Presidents and Secretaries of State real estate associations.

H. R. Ennis, of Kansas City, Mo., past president and a member of the advisory board; Leonard P. Reaume, of Detroit, and Henry G. Zander, of Chicago, directors of the National association, will represent the National association on the committee to work with the group appointed by the board of State presidents in making out a plan for this closer relationship.

Those appointed by the board of State presidents are: A. H. Barnhisel, Tacoma, Wash., president Pacific Northwest Real Estate association; Joseph L. Felleman, Newark, N. J., president of the New Jersey Association of Real Estate Boards; Guy S. Greene, Detroit, president of the Michigan Real Estate association; Carl C. McClure, Fort Myers, Fla., president of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards, and Max Murdock, Chicago, executive secretary and legal counsel of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards.

The board of State presidents and secretaries presented a report to the directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the recent annual convention of the national body embodying suggestions for closer cooperation between the State associations and the national organization. The directors took immediate action, voting that a committee be appointed from the officers, directors, and advisory board of the association to meet with representatives of the State associations.

wage demands of the workers as expected, it has been gradually gaining ground. The following trades in the industry now are working on the shorter week basis: Glaziers, Newark; electricians, Seattle; lathers, Boston, Buffalo and Seattle; painters, Boston, Bridgeport, Newark, New York, Portland, Ore., Scranton and Seattle; plasterers, Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Providence and Seattle; plumbers, Seattle; steamfitters, Seattle; bricklayers' tenders, Seattle.

ROCK CREEK PARK ESTATES

ULYSSES, hero of Homer's Odyssey... The Wooden Horse, the Fall of Troy. Twenty Homeless years; ten of war, then ten of wandering, striving to reach Home. Adventure after adventure, the playing of the gods... Home at last. Disguised as a beggar in his own household. Slaying in wrath those who would woo his wife away... United with her once more. And the happiness of Home his again.

Ulysses braved untold dangers to reach Home... Your Home today is the incentive that spurs ambition and guides accomplishment. Set it in the exquisite environment of Rock Creek Park Estates! Breeze-kissed trees, sun-burnished brooks, winding roads through bowers of beauty—over one hundred acres "truly a part of the Park" hold every master-touch of Nature to idealize your Homesite. And, in contrast to Ulysses!, you can reach it instantly by perfect Sixteenth Street.

BUILDING VOLUME DECLINES SLIGHTLY, SAYS DODGE REPORT

Decrease From June, 1925, Declared Less Than 2 Per Cent.

RESIDENCES REQUIRE
43 PER CENT OF WORK

Contemplated Structures Are Found to Be 2 Per Cent Higher Than in May.

The volume of building and engineering contracts declined very slightly in June, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Construction contracts let during the month in the 37 States east of the Rocky mountains (which include about 91 per cent of the total construction volume of the country) amounted to $547,792,400. The decrease from May, 1926, was less than 1 per cent and the decline from June of last year was 2 per cent. The very good showing for June of this year was to a considerable extent due to increased activity in the Pittsburgh district, which had last month its highest total so far this year.

The more important classes in last month's building record were: $237,724,900, or 43 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $38,290,299, or 15 per cent, for public works and utilities; $67,960,200, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $54,514,700, or 10 per cent, for industrial buildings; $40,753,400, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings; and $17,036,600, or 3 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

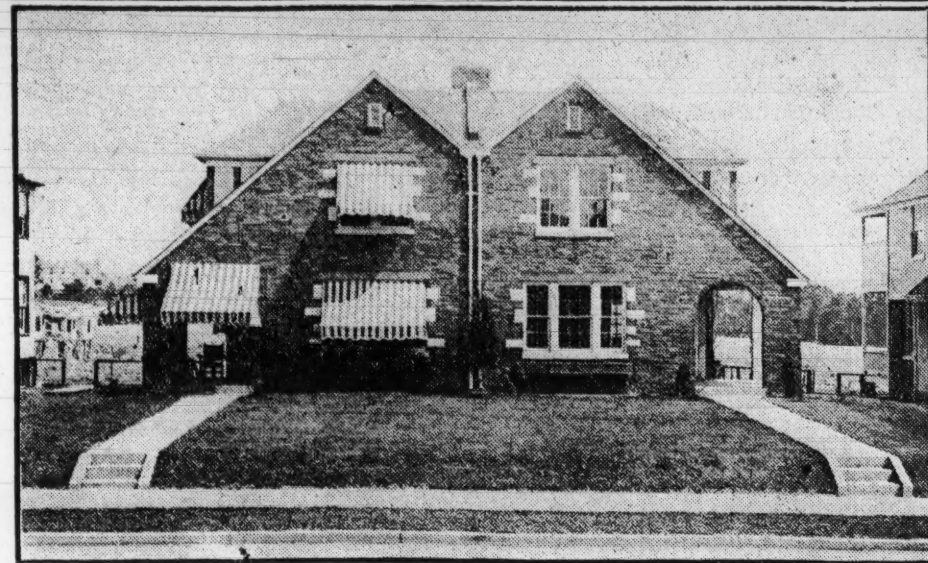

New construction started in the 37 Eastern States during the first half of 1926 reached a total of $3,113,158,500, as compared with $2,748,694,800 in the corresponding period of 1925, the increase being 13 per cent. The figure for the first six months of this year was also the highest on record for the first six months of any year.

Contemplated building and engineering work for the 37 Eastern States was reported in June, 1926, to the amount of $507,281,800, being 2 per cent above the amount reported in May of this year, as well as 16 per cent above the amount reported in June, 1925.

New York and Northern Jersey.

Building and engineering contracts were awarded during June to the amount of $127,149,600 in New York State and Northern New Jersey. There was a decrease of 9 per cent from May of this year and an increase of 4 per cent over June, 1925. The more important items in the June building record were: $70,938,200, or 56 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $18,349,200, or 14 per cent, for commercial buildings; $10,274,300, or 8 per cent, for public works and utilities; $8,323,500, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings; $5,101,500, or 6 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $5,340,000, or 4 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

Two attractive houses, Nos. 3729 and 3727 Van Ness street northwest, Devonshire Downs, purchased by Lee D. Latimer, Jr., and Donald R. Daugherty, respectively. They are of English design and contain eight rooms, with separate garage. They were designed, built and sold by W. C. & A. N. Miller.

Construction started in the district during the first half of 1926 reached a total of $855,979,600, as compared with $825,056,300 for the corresponding six months of 1925, the increase being 43 per cent.

Contemplated new work reported for New York State and Northern New Jersey last month amounted to $198,224,900, being a loss of 2 per cent from the amount reported in May of this year, but a gain of 23 per cent over the amount reported in June, 1925.

New England.

New England had $28,993,800 in contracts for new building and engineering work last month. This was a drop of 18 per cent from May, 1926, and of 9 per cent from June of last year. Analysis of June's construction record showed the following items of note: $18,168,000, or 47 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $6,175,400, or 16 per cent, for commercial buildings; $5,623,000, or 14 per cent, for public works and utilities; $3,274,800, or 8 per cent, for educational buildings; $1,804,600, or 5 per cent, for hospitals and institutions; $1,666,000, or 4 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $1,175,000, or 3 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings.

The first six months' construction total for the district was $210,413,800, which was a decline of only 1 per cent from the figure for the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for New England in June to the amount of $51,013,900. This exceeded the amount reported in May of this year by 4 per cent, as well as the amount reported in June, 1925, by 21 per cent.

Middle Atlantic States.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the middle Atlantic States (eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia) during June amounted to $53,067,600. This figure showed a decrease of 9 per cent from May, 1926. However, there was an increase of 18 per cent over June of last year. The month's record included: $23,904,300, or 45 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $9,261,800, or 17 per cent, for public works and utilities; $6,458,500, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $5,849,500, or 11 per cent, for educational buildings; $2,727,800, or 5 per cent, for industrial buildings; $2,006,700, or 4 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings, and $1,383,600, or 3 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

The first six months' construction total for the middle Atlantic States was $295,430,300, as compared with $276,720,400 in the corresponding six months of last year, the increase being 8 per cent.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for the district in June to the amount of $93,456,700, which was a 6 per cent decrease from the amount reported in May, 1926, but a 33 per cent increase over the amount reported in June of last year.

Building and engineering contracts were awarded last month to the amount of $95,061,300 in the Pittsburgh district (western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky). The above figure exceeded May, 1926, by 48 per cent, and June of last year by 51 per cent. Last month's record included the following items of importance: $30,192,900, or 32 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $22,566,000, or 24 per cent, for public works and utilities; $22,177,000, or 3 per cent, for industrial buildings; $6,986,200, or 7 per cent, for commercial buildings; $6,088,000, or 6 per cent, for educational buildings, and $2,558,900, or 2 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

Construction started in the district during the first half of this year, amounting to $392,995,000, has decreased 5 per cent from the figure for the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated construction planned for the Pittsburgh district, as reported in June, amounted to $97,645,400, which was 37 per cent more than the amount reported in June last year.

Central West.

The central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska) had $146,639,000 in contracts for new building and engineering work last month. This figure showed an increase of 4 per cent over May of this year. However, there was a decrease of 19 per cent from June, 1925. Including in the building record were: $59,141,700, or 40 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $28,001,800, or 19 per cent, for public works and utilities; $19,213,600, or 13 per cent, for commercial buildings; $14,531,200, or 10 per cent, for industrial buildings; $10,383,900, or 7 per cent,

BRICK MAKERS FIGHTING FOREIGN COMPETITION

Inferior European Product Declared Sold at Price Only Fraction Lower.

GOVERNMENT GIVES AID

"Use American made brick" is the slogan of a campaign by the Common Brick Manufacturers of America in behalf of producers of building brick in the United States and Canada. This effort to stay the destruction of a great industry by the importation of brick made by cheap European labor was made possible by the publication in June, by the Treasury Department, of a ruling that all foreign brick should be marked with the name of the country of origin. This order calls for the enforcement of a law that has been in existence since the tariff act of 1922 was passed by Congress, but which heretofore had not been effective in the case of brick.

With the foreign brick marked for identification the American manufacturers, believing their product to be of better quality and more economical to use, will promote domestic brick vigorously. The receipt of large quantities of foreign brick has not lowered the price of brick in the United States because the foreign brokers have made all the profit they could and sold just a shade under the American manufacturer. The building public this side of the Atlantic has gained nothing, but every thousand American workman out of a job. It evidently has not profited the European workers since their wage scale remains at about $1.15 a day as an average.

The latest report of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the Department of Commerce shows receipts of foreign made brick in New York, Maryland, New Hampshire, Florida, Washington, Maine, Vermont, North Dakota.

In spite of these inroads of foreign brick current reports of domestic manufacturers show that there are gains in new business and in deliveries during the past month. The long-heralded slump in building is apparent in only a few places, and there in the most moderate degree. The increased use of brick in residential construction permits the industry to more than hold its own in spite of small loss in the total volume of construction.

The report of 103 manufacturers as of June 1 shows 192,000,000 brick moved from the yard during the preceding month as compared with 146,400,000 moved by 110 concerns in the preceding month. Prices remain stable and have not varied to any extent for a period of two years.

Labor conditions are favorable except in the State of Connecticut, where they have been disturbed for the past year, but are steadily showing improvement.

THIS HOUSE IS DIGNIFIED AND WELL PROPORTIONED

This gabled house is less consciously picturesque than most erections done in the style known as the English cottage, but it has a dignity of line and proportion that is traceable to its Tudor influence, and in addition, a delightful irregularity of angles and broken faces.

Stone, stucco and timber in warm, soft tones are combined in the construction. The stucco is tan, the timber a natural weathered color, and the stone a range of brown to blue with generously pointed joints in cement the color of the stucco. The pleasing irregularities of the house would be lost if violent color contrasts distracted the eye. This combination has the harmony which rests the spectator and sufficient variety of texture and tint to obviate monotony.

That part of the first story wall which surrounds the living room wing is built up of whatever native stone the locality happens to afford; elsewhere the walls are of stucco over either tile or frame. The stuccoed surfaces are broken by weathered beams which belong to the construction, and a part of the house is half timbered.

The entrance porch, which is set under one corner of the front gable, is built up of heavy oak posts and braces, and the two faces of the house within this semi-enclosed space are half timbered. This appearance of great strength in the supports gives balance to that corner of the house.

The English character of this plan is emphasized by the use throughout of casements set in timbered frames. Some of the windows are diamond-shaped, the others rectangular, in leaded frames.

The garage, at one side, is unobtrusive, with an arbor over the entrance which provides protection on stormy days also to the service door of the house.

The living room is delightfully light, with windows on all four sides—a point made possible by the W-shaped plans. French windows lead out on to the garden porch, and a doorway into the hall. This hallway provides access to all downstairs rooms without the necessity of going through any other room, and for rainy weather there is a doorway from the hall—through the pantry—to the garage. Upstairs, three large bedrooms and one small one have been provided, with two baths and adequate closet space.

A half-timbered house of this English type is adaptable to almost any section of the country, save those regions that are pronouncedly Spanish. It is suitable for a small country estate, or it would grace a suburban street. In the latter case it is well worth the investment in a restricted locality because it is a house in which the owner could dwell with pleasure and convenience and an abiding sense of pride in its possession.

JOHNS HOPKINS OFFERS COURSE IN REAL ESTATE

Baltimore Board Sponsors Study Guaranteeing Number of Enrollments.

Johns Hopkins university, of Baltimore, will open a course in real estate practice this fall, which will be added to the curriculum of the school of business economics. The Baltimore Real Estate board is sponsoring the course, guaranteeing a minimum number of enrollments.

Ten scholarships have been offered by the Baltimore realtors to encourage better educational preparation for the real estate profession.

George C. Smith, a member of the executive committee of the industrial property division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for 1927, will act as instructor of the classes. He has served as director of the industrial bureau of Baltimore, and he is a member of the Baltimore Real Estate board's directorate and committee on ethics and arbitration.

The Baltimore Real Estate board's committee on education is planning to outline a two-year course, offering this year a class for advanced students as well as the course in fundamentals. In outlining the courses, the Baltimore board has taken as its guide outlines furnished by the National Association of Real Estate Boards for real estate educational courses conducted by its member boards.

For the past few years the board has cooperated with the University of Maryland in conducting a course.

WELL-BUILT FRAME HOMES INSULATED AGAINST THE HEAT

Simple Experiment Reveals Wooden House Resists
Cold and Warmth.

TRADITIONAL BELIEF FINDS CORROBORATION

Gallagher Lumber Official Points Out Construction Must Be Flawless.

The great interest evinced by builders and home owners in recent years regarding the construction of walls and roofs of residences so as to be nonconductive of heat has resulted in scientific corroboration of the traditional American belief that a well-constructed frame house is warm in winter and cool in summer. Among the numerous experiments that have led to this conclusion one of the most practical and convincing was recently made by Benjamin F. Blumer, an official of the Gallagher Lumber Co., of Washington.

Instead of resorting to the highly technical method of research, which has to be explained, interpreted and appraised after its data have been examined, Mr. Blumer took the direct comparative method wherein the results speak for themselves.

Simple Experiment Made.

He constructed a box of three compartments, in the middle one of which he placed a high-power electric lamp. The box partition on one side of the lamp was of a highly esteemed synthetic building material, much recommended for its insulating qualities; the partition on the other side of the lamp was of natural one-inch pine board. With thermometers installed in the three compartments it remained only to record temperatures at regular intervals. The record is as follows:

Time	Temperature in compartment separated by synthetic material	Temperature in compartment separated by pine board	Temperature in compartment containing lamp
Start	65	65	65
20 minutes	77	64	73
40 minutes	84	63	78
60 minutes	94	60	80
80 minutes	97	58	82
100 minutes	98	57	83
120 minutes	99	56	84
140 minutes	99	55	85

Good Building Needed.

The figures speak for themselves. The frame house dweller, then, does not need to worry about special provision for heat insulation, but care must be taken so that faulty construction and lack

ONE GNAWED CARPETS

Budapest, July 10 (By A. P.).—How he assuaged temperamental prima donnas is shown in the memoirs of Count Geza Zichy, the one-armed pianist and one-time director of the former court opera of Budapest.

An unusually temperamental opera singer once came to him with a request which Zichy felt obliged to refuse. In uncontrollable fury, the artist threw herself on the floor and sunk her teeth into the carpet. In a honeyed voice, Count Zichy remarked: "My dear young lady, don't you realize that your beautiful, pearly teeth are bound to suffer by such rough treatment, not to mention the harm you might do to the carpet? Just consider what the exalted ministry of fine arts would think if I had to report that a valuable Smyrna carpet, the property of the court opera, had been partly devoured by Mademoiselle."

Another majestic prima donna emphatically demanded a raise of salary. Whereupon Count Zichy replied: "But, Madame, don't you realize that if I were to remunerate you according to your merit, the opera would go bankrupt. You surely must know that you are simply priceless." The prima donna's growing anger promptly melted. With a beaming countenance she asked whether she might tell that to her sister artists. When told that she might, she left well satisfied.

ROADS TO BE IMPROVED IN BAY RIDGE ESTATES

Contracts Let for Regraveling, Regrading and New Streets in Unit 2.

WORK WILL BE SPEEDED

Contract has been let to James J. Stehle, of Annapolis, for the construction of new roads and complete regraveling and grading of old roads in unit 2 of Bay Ridge Estates, according to a recent announcement from the Washington and Baltimore offices of the Bay Ridge company.

A force of 20 mule teams and 50 men will be assigned to the work and more than 100 men will be engaged in the improvement of streets and roads in other sections of the property during the next two weeks.

Unit 2, now being made ready to place on sale, was opened July 10. The opening of this second unit only a few weeks after the active selling campaign of this water-front property was begun was made necessary by the virtual selling out of unit 1. The new unit comprises sections 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 of the Bay Ridge Estates property, and, like the entire property, is of great native beauty and attractiveness.

Streets are being cut through the section and will include Wainwright street, Uphur street, Perry street, Dewey street and Mayo street. New street signs are prepared and every effort was made to improve the area to the highest degree.

The sale of the Bay Ridge Estates property, which is within easy motoring distance of Washington and Baltimore, and only 3.2 miles from Annapolis, and the virtual selling out of the entire first unit, which was placed on sale for the first time a few weeks ago, has made necessary the immediate preparation of unit 2, and road work and street construction are being rushed with all possible speed.

Demented Negro Patients Increase

Negro patients in hospitals for mental diseases, according to a bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce, increased in the thirteen-year period from 1910 to 1923 from 131 to every 100,000 of negro population to 192. White patients during the same period increased from 213 to 259 of white population.

Explanation was made that the lower rate for negroes is due to the lack of hospitals for such patients in the South. In parts of the country where they are admitted to State hospitals their rate is higher than that for the whites. There were 20,084 negroes and 244,968 white patients in hospitals for mental diseases in 1923.

STATE OF NEW YORK APPROVES DRASTIC REALTY REGULATIONS

Brokers Compelled to Stand Character Test as Well as Written One.

COURT RULES AGAINST UNLICENSED DEALER

New Amendments Also Demand That All Salesmen Have Permits.

Amendments to the New York real estate license law have just been enacted by the legislature and approved by Gov. Al Smith. The amendments extend the law making it apply to every city in the State and to every county of more than 110,000 population. They require each applicant to furnish information to the State tax department showing his character and his standing in the community, and to pass a written examination to show his general intelligence and his knowledge of real estate practice. Closely following the adoption of the amendments, the New York court of appeals, the court of last resort of that State, has handed down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the original license law. In the opinion accompanying the decision, Judge Cardozo reasserted the right of the legislature to regulate the practice of a profession or a business in the State of New York.

Brokers in Test Case.
The decision was handed down in a case brought by a Brooklyn real estate broker against a client to recover a commission on a sale of property handled by him after his broker's license had expired. The defendant held that because the broker held no license at the time of the sale he was not entitled to a commission. The broker's reply contested the constitutionality of the law basically on the ground that the State had no right to regulate admission to the practice of real estate brokerage because the business of real estate brokers was not of such a nature as to be affected with a public interest.

The law was based on the contention that the public should be well protected in regard to the man in whose agency they place savings accumulated for the purchase of homes and other real estate investments. The decision agrees with this view. It affirms the opinion of the municipal court of Brooklyn and the later decision of the appellate division of the supreme court of New York State, second department.

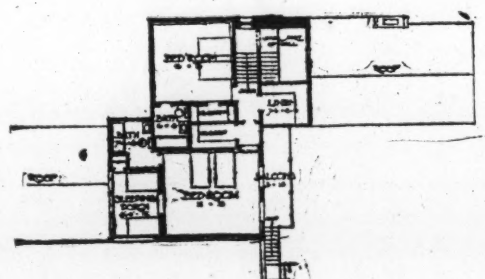

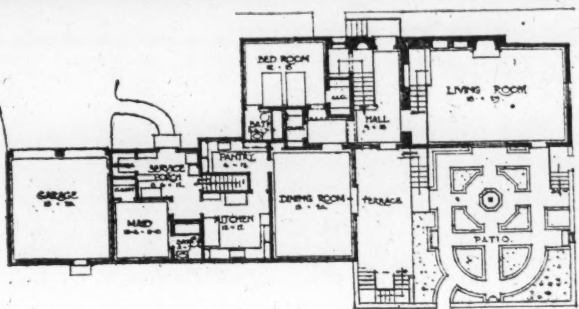

Newly adopted provisions of the New York license law, in addition to extending its jurisdiction, make it essential for the applicant for a broker's license to show that he has been engaged in some capacity in a real estate brokerage office for not less than one year directly preceding his date of application. Brokers are made responsible for having any real estate salesman in their employ who has not secured a salesman's license.

Persons already holding licenses are not affected by the new provisions until September 30 of the current year.

SPANISH ARCHITECTURE IS IDEAL SEASIDE HOME

This house, for California or Florida, with its unmistakable origin, its soft lines and simple surfaces, its lengthwise on its lot, is that from the south side elevation immediately above one gets the impression of considerable size, whereas the rear elevation at the top of the page shows that the house is really quite small.

If you are lucky enough to own a lot in the country—or a patch of land by the sea—you will find the Spanish type of house preeminently suited to the landscape, climate and life of those places. With modifications it can be used in other sections of the country that allow the space and that have not a too firmly established style of architecture of their own.

This house is in stucco, and while it has all the advantages of modern building it retains the simplicity of line of the adobe houses of the south, which are its progenitors. It lies lengthwise on its sloping lot, hugs the ground and follows its rising levels. The exterior is white plaster with soft edges at the corners and openings. Instead of using a straight-edge in ruling up the surfaces of the walls, a texture, as of old work, is given them with a trowel. The roof is laid with handmade, mission type, red tiles, set quite at random both as to horizontal and vertical lines and with a very uneven line along the eaves. This effect is obtained by using many broken lines and by doubling up the layers here and there, all of which produces a very interesting shadow upon the white plaster wall below.

The characteristic feature, the patio, is in effect an outdoor living room. A balcony on the second floor level runs along one side and steps descend into the patio. The patio is paved and has beds of bright flowers and scattered benches and chairs.

The house rises to a two-story height over only a part of the building. The living room is in the one-story wing and the roof timbers are left exposed inside. The rambling construction permits complete cross ventilation, which is essential in a warm climate or in a summer house. The living room is spacious and of fine proportions. The dining room is smaller but of equally good lines. Both living and dining rooms open on the patio, which brings the sun and color of the outdoors into the rooms.

The service section is off by itself in the second wing and the garage is at the end of the same wing. The plan provides for a bedroom and bath on the first floor, which is frequently a great convenience in a family house which is likely to shelter old and young, and it is so well tucked in behind the hall and dining room that it is quite apart from the daytime life of the house.

Upstairs there are two large bedrooms, each with bath and closet, a balcony over the patio and a sleeping porch on the opposite side of the house. The large linen room is a delight to the housekeeper's heart

WOMEN'S GUILD URGES SECRET VOTE FOR MEN

Ballot in Labor Disputes Would Check Strikes, Says Leader.

London, July 10 (By A. P.)—The Women's Guild of Empire is "out to educate women and teach them that they must think for themselves on industrial problems, and not be led like a flock of sheep," declares Lady Muriel Gore Browne, the newly-elected president.

The guild is pledged to combat communism and prevent strikes and lockouts by means of arbitration. But Lady Muriel also says one of the chief objects is to secure the secret ballot for men in all industrial disputes.

"This, we believe, will end strikes," Lady Muriel declares. "Most men do not want strikes and would vote for a peaceful settlement by arbitration. But I go still further. I think women should have the right to vote in labor disputes. They suffer more by strikes than the men. It is they who have to maintain the home and keep the family on meager strike pay. There are women in the mining villages who lost all the comforts from their homes during the miners' strikes and have not yet recovered them."

Lady Muriel says the Women's guild has launched a nation-wide campaign which is gaining strength every day and hopes the movement may be made world-wide. Both Lady Muriel and Mrs. Drummond, the creator of the guild, hope to go to America and enlist the wives of American workers in a similar movement.

Lady Muriel is no stranger to America, as she has been there many times. She is a daughter of the seventh Earl of Dunmore, who was a lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria. Her mother was Lady Gertrude Coke, daughter of the second Earl of Leicester. Her brother, the present Earl of Dunmore, won the Victoria cross for gallant deeds in South African war. Her husband is Col. Harold Gore Browne.

Lady Muriel became interested in woman's suffrage as a result of the self-sacrifice which she saw women of all classes make during the great war. After women obtained the ballot she allied herself with the Guild of Empire and has since held offices and personally managed campaigns to obtain funds for the movement.

8 Beautiful Six-Room, Semi-Detached Homes

Priced at Only $10,950

THESE homes have just been completed and are offered to home-seekers now for the first time. For the family requiring but three bedrooms, this is an ideal opportunity.

Here you will find both stateliness and coziness combined. The illustration above shows their outward attractiveness. The side entrance is a bit unusual. The center hall leads to a cheerful living room with open fireplace. From it you go out on a large concrete front porch which extends across the full width of the house. A lovely dining room and bright, well-equipped kitchen are on the opposite side of the entrance hall. Upstairs there are three delightful bedrooms, with clothes closets of the size you naturally expect. The bathroom, too, is distinctive.

Then, there are double rear porches. Full attic over all of house. Servant's toilet and laundry tray in basement. Garage. Hardwood floors throughout, of course. Tastefully selected electric fixtures.

These eight homes will sell quickly. The values are unusual. We suggest an early visit—a visit over THIS week-end.

BUILDING ACTIVITIES SHOW MARKED GAIN IN SOUTHERN CITIES

25 Per Cent Increase Reported in Amounts Expended
Over First Half of 1925.

MILLION-DOLLAR LOSS IS RECORDED IN MIAMI

Florida City Leads, Despite Drop; Houston Second;
Atlanta Third.

Spectacular building activities in Florida, Texas and throughout the South generally, are revealed in the reports of building permits from the 96 leading cities and towns of the 12 Southern States, announced by S. W. Straus & Co. yesterday.

These cities reported $288,252,991 permits issued for the first six months of the year, compared with $228,891,069 for the first half of 1925, a gain of 26 per cent. The figures for June were $47,673,461, compared with $42,996,310 in June, 1925, an increase of 11 per cent.

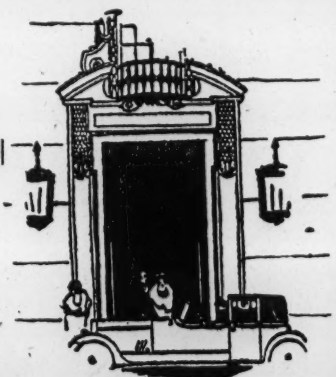

Miami, which led the South in building activities for the half year, reported $20,781,167, a loss of about $1,000,000 compared with the same period last year. Houston, Tex., ranked second with permits for the six months' period of $16,588,435, an increase of more than $5,000,000. Atlanta was the third Southern city in buildings for the first six months of the year, having $12,472,247, a gain of nearly $6,000,000 over the same period last year. Very large gains were revealed in Tampa, Jacksonville, St. Petersburg, West Palm Beach, Coral Gables, Fort Lauderdale and Orlando. Activities in Texas closely rivaled those of Florida, the cities showing the largest increases being Fort Worth, San Antonio, Amarillo and Wichita Falls.

The reports of S. W. Straus & Co. revealed record-breaking operations also in Birmingham, New Orleans, Knoxville, Asheville and Greensboro.

The 29 leading Florida cities gained 51 per cent for the first half of the year, but showed a loss of 17 per cent for June. The reports follow:

	1925	1926	June

for educational buildings; $4,761,700, or 2 per cent, for social and recreational projects; $4,522,500, or 3 per cent, for public buildings, and $3,128,200, or 2 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings.

The six months' construction total for the district was $709,223,300, as compared with $746,344,800 in the first half of 1925, the decrease being 5 per cent.

Contemplated construction work reported for the central West last month amounted to $231,753,700, being 12 per cent in excess of the amount reported in May of this year, as well as 25 per cent over the amount reported in June, 1925.

Construction started during June in the Southeastern States (the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana) reached a total of $51,701,000. This figure showed losses of 12 per cent from May, 1926, and of 30 per cent from June of last year. Included in the June construction record were the following items of note: $18,311,300, or 37 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $14,122,600, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $4,075,500, or 8 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $2,164,200, or 4 per cent, for social and recreational buildings.

Building and engineering work started in the district during the first half of 1926 amounted to $428,792,900, as compared with $335,122,400 for the first six months of last year, the gain being 28 per cent.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for the Southeastern States in June to the amount of $92,881,200. Decreases of 17 per cent from the amount reported in May of this year and of 36 per cent from the amount reported in June, 1925, occurred.

The Northwest.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the Northwest (Minnesota, the Dakotas, and North and South Dakota) during June amounted to $10,398,800. There were decreases of 5 per cent from May, 1926, and 17 per cent from June of last year. The more important items in the June building record were: $3,514,700, or 34 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $2,758,300, or 27 per cent, for commercial buildings; $1,895,200, or 18 per cent, for public works and utilities; $874,100, or 8 per cent, for educational buildings; $626,000, or 6 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings, and $442,000, or 4 per cent for industrial buildings.

The first six months' construction total for the Northwest was $54,130,000, as compared with $51,055,000 in the corresponding period of 1925, the increase being 6 per cent.

Contemplated new work reported for the district in June, 1926, amounted to $14,502,200. This was an increase of 19 per cent over May of this year as well as 35 per cent over June, 1925.

Texas had $24,781,300 in contracts for new building and engineering work last month. This figure showed a decline of 15 per cent from May of this year. However, there was an increase of 21 per cent over June, 1925. Analysis of the building record for June showed the following important items: $12,953,800, or 52 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $6,391,200, or 26 per cent, for public works and utilities; $1,908,800, or 8 per cent, for educational buildings; $1,896,400, or 8 per cent, for commercial buildings; $757,700, or 3 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $527,500, or 2 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings.

Construction started in Texas during the first half of 1926 has reached a total of $123,291,500, being 39 per cent in excess of the figure for the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated construction planned in June of this year amounted to $26,802,800. This was 32 per cent below the amount reported in May of this year, but 3 per cent above the amount reported in June, 1925.

This modern, up-to-date bungalow, located at 302 Pershing Drive, within two blocks of the proposed new Memorial Highway in Clarendon, Va., with six rooms and bath; garage; lot, 60x130. Built three years ago. Will sell for less than cost and will arrange satisfactory terms for quick sale.

FASCISTI ARE SPLIT ON THE INFLUENCE OF AMERICAN IDEAS

Western Europe Doomed by Barbarities of the New World, Says Editor.

SEES ALPS BARRIER TO STULTIFYING FORCE

Noted Critic, However, Holds America Has Dominated Old World Literature.

Rome, July 10 (By A. P.).—Western European civilization is doomed to be submerged and subdued by the "barbarities" of modern America whose cigar-smoking, money-making, gum-chewing and blatantly egotistical prophets will gleefully harness humanity to the time clock and beauty to the industrial machine.

An influential faction of young fascist thinkers, led by Curzio Suckert, editor of La Conquista dello Stato, is of this opinion, and will endeavor to save Italy from this fate at all costs.

Not all Italians, however, are of this belief. In an endeavor to rid Italians of their notion that Americans are a young and barbarous people, a movement has been started in literary circles to induce the United States to arrange an exhibition of American culture.

Poe Dominates Letters.

In support of the idea, Diego Angeli, well known critic, points out that Italians do not all realize that Americans have succeeded in literature. He claims that America has had more influence on Europe than Europe has had on her, if the comparison is made on a proportional basis.

For example, he asserts, Poe dominated the European literary of the late nineteenth century. Charles Baudelaire, of France, copied him. Jules Verne's romances and the Sherlock Holmes stories were based on Poe's stories. "The Fall of the House of Usher" paved the way for "The Picture of Dorian Grey," by Oscar Wilde; "Against the Grain," by Joris Karl Huysmans, of France, and "Pleasure," by d'Annunzio.

Suckert explains that "Italians are by nature unfitted for becoming moderns."

Revolution in Culture.

"To speak of the future," he declares, "is repugnant to our incurably antique nature. Italy represents the strong element of opposition in Europe to the triumphant spirit of modernism. We have to defend a most ancient civilization which stresses all spiritual values against a new, heretical, false civilization which emphasizes all physical, material, mechanical values.

"The difference is of kind rather than degree and if we were to deny our tradition and to follow the new ideals, it would not help us gain equality with the nations dominating the new kind of culture."

The Italian Alps, Suckert's faction says, constitute the last bulwark in Europe beyond which the deadly and stultifying process of Americanization shall not pass. They are properly such a barrier because the Italian people, unlike other Europeans, are not merely unmodern in temperament and habit but aggressively antimodern and typically "antique."

"What we need," says Suckert, "is a cultural revolution to find out what creative means and tendencies are dictated by our natural and historical civilization."

SMALL HOUSE DESIGNED FOR SLOPING LOT

The lot which falls away rapidly from the front line is often difficult to arrange for when building a house with ordinary plans, and yet, if a house is specially designed to fit such a lot, very charming and unusual features may be incorporated in it.

The house pictured is in the Georgian style and has the balance and dignity characteristic of that period of architecture. It is completely free from the flavor of triviality and impermanence which is apt to be apparent in many very small houses. In spite of its compact size this house has character and presence which would be felt among houses of far greater extent and pretensions.

It is shown built of brick with a slate or wood shingle roof and shutters painted to harmonize with the color scheme of the building and roof. The garage on one side of the house is balanced by the service yard on the other—a plan which is not only symmetrical but very convenient. The paneled door, set within the carved pediment and pilasters, is a decorative feature, as are the wrought iron entrance railings. All of the outside trim is painted white. The front lawn is made level for the width of the house and slopes down on each side to meet the level of the garage entrance and the service entrance. There is a hedge across the front of the lot, an American holly bush on each side of the entrance, and a few flowering shrubs at the slopes. The front entrance leads into a little hall and up five steps into the living room which extends the full width of the house. Behind the living room are the center hall, several closets, two bedrooms and the bath.

The main feature of the lower story is the dining room which opens with three French windows and the paved terrace and garden at the back. The laundry and coal room take up the space at each side, and the kitchen and heater room are at the rear of the dining room but the front of the house. The slope of the lot gives them each a small window in the front, and a good-sized one at the side. There is also ample storage space allowed for on this floor.

The great charm of this house lies in the fact that it not only has lines and proportion that will stand the test of critical taste but it has the advantages of the two-story house with the height from the front view of little more than one story. The tall narrow effect of so many small houses greatly detracts from their beauty and prevents their becoming an integral and lovely part of the landscape which is the effect most to be desired.

$20,802,767 LOANED TO HOME PURCHASERS

Newark, N. J., July 10.—Continuing its policy of making mortgage loans on sound real estate security, the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, during the month of June, loaned a total of $20,802,767.50 in this field. Of this amount, $14,897,642.50 was on dwellings and apartment houses in the United States and Canada, which provided accommodations for 4,412 families, the remainder being advanced on city property other than residences and on farms. An indication of the Prudential's sincerity in the effort to make it possible for the individual of moderate income to own his own home is found in the fact that during the first six months of 1926, mortgage loans for such purposes have exceeded those made during a similar period of 1925 by more than $20,000,000.

From January 1 of this year to June 30, loans were made on 11,241 dwellings and 659 apartments to the total of $65,847,400. Through these loans 19,216 families were accommodated with living quarters. The total for the first six months of 1925 was $45,788,650, providing 8,018 dwellings and 413 apartments which accommodated 13,331 families.

GARRETT PARK PLANS FOR COMMUNITY CLUB

Developers of Suburb Donate Land for New Center of Recreation.

Garrett Park, Md., is to have a modern community clubhouse, if plans now under discussion materialize. The land for the proposed clubhouse has already been donated by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, developers of this community, and the real estate firm is also making a substantial donation toward the proposed building.

Demand for such a clubhouse followed the start on the erection of the Battery Park community clubhouse, which will serve the people of Battery Park and Edgemoor, both communities being handled by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory. Final plans will be made at a meeting of the citizens of Garrett Park, which is to be held in the next few days. This community has developed very rapidly, the best illustration being that out of more than 50 houses completed this spring, only a few more remain unsold.

REAL ESTATE EXHIBIT ATTRACTING DISPLAYS

Many Dealers Apply for Space at the First Exposition in October.

Headquarters for the Better Homes and Building Exposition to be conducted by the Washington Real Estate Board this fall, were opened this week in the McKeever & Goss building, 1415 K street northwest. This exposition will be held in the Washington auditorium October 16 to 22, inclusive. While the offices have only been open a few days there have already been a large number of applications for exhibits placed. Inquiries and applications have indicated that builders, real estate men and material and structural concerns are manifesting much interest in the first annual exposition conducted by the board. In a few days it is planned to allot some of the exhibit space that has already been applied for. The board will endeavor to make this one of the largest affairs of its kind held in this section of the country and national manufacturers and commercial houses are being invited to participate. If this exposition carries out its purpose, that of being an educational factor for real estate men, builders and material men, as well as the general public, the show will probably be repeated annually henceforth.

James P. Schick will be in charge of the exposition for the Real Estate Board under the direction of the executive committee composed of Clarence F. Donohoe, John P. Maury, W. C. Miller, Ben T. Webster, Jesse H. Hedges, Theodore M. Judd and A. E. Landvoigt.

THE NINETEENTH EDITION

Charles Lamb, that eminent literary genius, collected no first editions of books. "I collect tenth editions," he said, "they are much rarer." And so it is in buying a home. Your family is deserving of unrivaled beauty of design, a superior quality of workmanship and a wealth of modern appointment and equipment.

Paternal pride would prompt your purchasing a combination of the White House and a fairy castle. But your pocketbook prohibits such a lavish expenditure; and so to give your family the very best that you can afford—and because Burleigh Homes are the accepted criterion of home elegance for people in moderate circumstances (there have so far been nineteen editions of these Homes sold), you go to live in

MAN AIDING FRIEND CAUSES HIS DEATH; CONVICTED IN COURT

Electric Connection, Installed 2 Years Ago as a Favor, Kills German.

DOGS' BATHING BEACH IS ELABORATE AFFAIR

Mail and Express Posted in Moscow Delivered in Berlin Same Day.

Berlin, July 10 (By A. P.).—A criminal court of Leipzig has convicted of manslaughter Friedrich O. Schwelm, whose carelessness in installing an electric light connection two years ago, recently caused the electrocution of his brother-in-law Arthur Hilbig. Schwelm, who is 37 and a carpenter, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined 300 marks.

The state charged that he installed the extension and light cord for Hilbig, as a favor, though he knew nothing of electricity. The light had been in use nearly two years when Hilbig carried it into a corner of the cellar where the dirt floor was soaked with water. The 200-volt current killed him. It is regarded as the most unusual manslaughter case in the annals of German jurisprudence.

Dogs are not allowed to go after sticks and rubbers on the bathing beaches of Alster basin, reserved for human beings. So the park commission of Hamburg has rigged up an elaborate canine bathing beach set off from the rest of the beach by two concrete piers decorated with half a dozen sculptures of pedigreed dogs.

With so many American girls about to try their luck at swimming in the English channel, that bolsterc body of water will look "like a cafeteria counter" when the supply tugs start feeding them, says the editor of Berliner Lokal Anzeiger.

Calling this season's bevy of swimmers the greatest collection of mermaids ever seen, the editor propounds the question:

"Why do so many American flappers attempt to swim the channel?" His own answer was: "They do it to show Europe that they are not merely goldfish, but real honest-to-life fish." His readers, however, were invited to supply their own answers to the conundrum.

Increasing commercial relations between Germany and Soviet Russia have developed an unusually fast service between Moscow and Berlin. Mail and express packages posted in Moscow in the early morning are delivered in Berlin in the evening of the same day. Combination passenger and mail planes negotiate a trip of 56 hours by express train in 8 hours, with stop-

AMATEURS TOLD TO STAY IN THE LITTLE THEATERS

Walter Hartwig Sees Future Remuneration Through Dividing Profits.

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—If the Little Theater movement is to succeed, those within the ranks must be real artists and not leave to seek careers on the professional stage.

So believes Walter Hartwig, who four years ago started the Little theater tournaments in New York, the last three of which were won by the Dallas players.

Hartwig looks forward to the day when the Little theater will be so well established it can provide remuneration for the members through a division of profits.

At present he hopes to see the numerous groups begin nationwide tours and through their general excellence enhance the spoken drama "on the road."

"By this I mean the Dallas players would go to San Francisco and other large cities for engagements of a week each," he explained.

"Chicago, Cleveland, New Orleans, Louisville, the Carolina playmakers and others would do likewise. Each could come to New York for a week's run."

Hartwig has been stage manager of Daniel Frohm for many years. He is pessimistic about the present professional theater.

"It has been molded into a form and everything placed on a business basis," he gave as one of the reasons. "Certainly, no theater can expect to progress when the mechanical back-stage are paid more than most of the artists."

"When a Little theater actor or playwright achieves recognition and seeks added fame on Broadway, he only weakens his own organization and virtually has no opportunity for the accomplishment of anything worthwhile on the professional stage."

In this connection, he pointed out that Oliver Hissell, of Dallas, brought four actors to New York last year and returned with two. Numerous players who had their early training in the Little theater now are on Broadway—some employed and others making the dreary round of the agencies.

One of the encouraging features of the Little theater to Hartwig is that not only is it developing actors but playwrights, directors, stage managers and scenic artists as well.

Electrical Earnings At New High Level

The electrical industry reached new high levels, according to the reports of central station gross earnings for the first quarter of 1926. This figure of $439,000,000 indicates that the gross business of central stations this year will exceed that in 1925 by about 8 per cent.

The sale of securities by central stations has also proceeded at a record rate this year so that total capitalization of these companies will probably aggregate in excess of $5,400,000,000 by January. It is interesting to note that whereas a mercantile establishment turns over its capital five times a year or more, the central station industry turns its capital but once in five years.

M. BRIAND FISHING EXPEDITION TO FORM A CABINET

Opening of the Season Important Event for French Anglers

WEATHER SPOILS PRIZE

Grand Duke Alexander Medium, Gets Me From Late Czar

Paris, July 10 (By A. P.).—Premier Briand's recent foray of his tenth cabinet spoiled a perfectly good fishing expedition that he had planned. The French leader had just given up his attempt to form the ministry when the fishing season opened and the veteran premier began overhauling his fishing tackle for a raid on the streams of his little place at Cocherel, in Brittany. Former Premier Herriot undertook to form a cabinet, but was unsuccessful and M. Briand was called to the rescue by President Doumergue.

"It was lucky for the fish," M. Briand said when he received the summons.

The opening of the fishing season was an important event not only for the premier, but also for thousands of Frenchmen in humble walks of life. The traditional fishermen who sit at the Seine for hours to catch "minnows" betook themselves to the nearby country to try their luck at bigger fish.

Every train leaving the city on the first day of the season was packed with eager trawlers. In many cases the entire family accompanied the angler.

Rotted buds and stunted flowers on the rose bushes were found at the celebrated rose gardens of Hay les Roses by those who made the annual pilgrimage there this year. The rose garden of the city of Paris at Bagatelle in the Bois de Boulogne is in the same condition and the jury that presides over the annual contest of new varieties of roses there has decided that no prizes shall be distributed this year. Prolonged rain after prolonged cold, after premature budding in February, are the causes of the garden disaster.

Roses cultivated commercially for perfume or for the essence of roses also were affected by unfavorable weather conditions, although less than the garden varieties, because they are mostly cultivated in the south where the weather was less severe.

Passengers in Subway Are Intensive Readers

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—To ride on the subway between two persons, one reading a Yiddish newspaper and the other a Chinese journal, is nothing unusual to the New Yorker.

Yellow, white and black people, representative of all nations, are the underground commuters. And all of them read. It may be a newspaper or tabloid of any language, or Shakespeare, Shaw or Cobb. But the confirmed subwayite always reads—unless he is too tightly jammed to raise his hands.

One ride would convince any critic that Father Knickerbocker's stenographers and sales girls are either the best or worst read in the world.

Their subway literature ranges from "Sadie's Love Quest" and "Advice to the Lovelorn," to Barrie and Lewis. On one trip two adjoining girls were separately reading Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter" and Robert Ingersoll. Any number of modern and popular writers could find encouragement in the numbers reading their works.

Books mostly are in the hands of feminine readers. Men take the newspapers. Students, of whom there are great numbers, seem to like the trains as study halls. Probably there could be no greater test in concentration.

The "classes" ride in shifts. Laborers predominate around 6, 6 and 7 a. m. There come clerks, stenographers and business men. Brokers and bankers are mostly in evidence between 8:30 and 10. After them come the housewives on shopping and visiting tours.

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

OVER in Philadelphia at what headline writers succinctly call the Sesqui—the Sesquicentennial International exposition—there is being staged three times a week "the biggest theatrical performance in the world," a mammoth historical, educational and musical spectacle presented in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of American Independence.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey have the biggest show on earth, of its kind, but this one in Philadelphia, undoubtedly, promises to be the most magnificent pageant ever staged. It is called "Freedom," assembled under personal direction of that master craftsman, R. H. Burnside, for many years producer of all great exhibits at the Hippodrome, in New York, before that gigantic playhouse—said to be the largest theater in the world—was turned into a vaudeville palace.

Just to give an idea of the stage at the sesqui, where "Freedom" holds forth, the New York Hippodrome could be set upon its boards. It is that big. Built at the open end of the new stadium, where 100,000 people may be conveniently and comfortably seated, the stage at the sesqui is the largest ever constructed in America, perhaps, the world. It measures 400 feet square, with footlights, fly-loft, back-drops and all the paraphernalia usually associated with back stage. So this out-door theatrical spectacle has all the advantages of an indoor production.

SATURDAY a week ago, dramatic editors and critics from major cities of the United States were invited by the mayor of Philadelphia and the sesquicentennial directors to run over to the City of Brotherly Love to have a look at "Freedom." They went, thrilled at the prospect of seeing something new under the moon.

At luncheon in a Russian tea-house on the shore of an Italian lake, the outgrowth of an old swimmin' hole in South Philadelphia, observers of things dramatic in America were told by William W. Matos, chairman of pageantry at the sesquicentennial, of the glory that is the sesqui and the grandeur that is the pageant.

Up spoke old De Wolf Hopper, who has a major part in the performance, and recounted that in all his stage career—going back some 97 years, or thereabout—this is the most stupendous thing that ever engaged his attention or his services. He plays the role of History, the only man with a speaking part; and though De Wolf has a voice of boom and bombast that reverberates and re-echoes in such theaters as Poll's, it strikes ever so slightly upon the ears even with the aid of amplifiers in the Philadelphia stadium, so that what he has to say is much better read from the program. At least this is so for those who must, perforce, hear him a mile away from the stage.

THERE are 1,500 professional actors and actresses engaged for the presentation of "Freedom." This, as De Wolf Hopper states, is the largest cast in which he ever appeared. Another thousand persons, musicians, stage hands and those usually associated with production, give some inkling of what goes to make up a theatrical performance of this nature.

So that nothing would be alighted, Mr. Burnside and his coworkers in this task—one of them being his fair young daughter, Katherine—delved back in history as far as history goes, reaching into the Stone Age for the very beginning of freedom. From there, they worked through the Egyptian period, the fall of Nineveh, the Grecian period, coming up to the birth of Christ, at Bethlehem; then to the Roman era, with special attention to Nero, the arch enemy of freedom, and so on to the Middle Ages, with episodes from the reigns of Charlemagne and Alfred the Great, touching upon English history all the way up to the Magna Charta, going over to France for such enlightenment as liberty brought forth with the French revolution, ending with the fall of the Bastille—and all done in 22 episodes.

This was the outline of the pageant as given on the program, and constitutes the first part only of the great spectacle.

The second part starts with the discovery of America as its natural springboard, takes such incidents as the landing of the Pilgrims, the Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's ride, the battle of Lexington, and so on up the line to the actual Declaration of Independence and some of the outstanding events that happened afterwards.

THE mammoth stadium is darkened; as dark as any playhouse in the world just before the curtain goes up. On the huge stage, the footlights bringing them into play, British forces under Gen. Thomas Gage, leave Boston. There is a lantern hung aloft in the belfry tower of the old North church, the onward move of horses and men, steeds galloping over tread-mills on stage, and the sound of shot and shell. That is the scene on stage. From out a side wing of the stage darts a rider—straight for the stadium; the lights are turned on, the place made brilliant, and Paul Revere dashes round the great track before the awed audience; one of the most thrilling rides ever depicted on stage or screen or stadium floor—and thousands stand and cheer as Leonard Berry, the rider, charges down the fairway and disappears behind the mass of scenery; Paul Revere's warning to the Middlesex villages has been heard throughout the countryside.

NATURE'S elements spoiled the first night of this magnificent enterprise, a piece of pageantry that will stand while the sesqui lasts as a living monument to one of the greatest stage directors in America; one whose original ideas and method of procedure have, over a period of twenty-odd years, helped bring the American stage to its present peak of perfection.

"Freedom" is the masterpiece of R. H. Burnside. When it is finished, and handed over by him to the sesqui officials, with his own stamp of approval thereon, all America may journey to Philadelphia knowing that there—in the stadium—is really "the biggest theatrical performance in the world."

2 MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS AT EARLE

Two superlative musical attractions and a supporting triumvirate of acts of the first grade combine to make the week's vaudeville bill at the Earle theater one of the most notable of the year. The headline feature will be furnished by the Royal Mountain Ash Welsh choir of sixteen highly cultivated solo voices, an organization that is famous as the finest of its kind of which Wales can boast. For eight consecutive years this quadruple-quartet has won first honors in the Welsh national singing contest. The Earle is fortunate in being included upon the brief American itinerary of this male chorus' American tour. The extra added attraction will be contributed by Sam Robbins and his Baltimoreans, famous orchestra of a dozen jazz melody artists from the Century roof, Ned Wayburn revues and the Ernie Young revue. In addition to the brilliant instrumental ensemble, this crack band of syncopationists presents a quartet of champion Charleston dancers.

Other notable inclusions in the stage portion of the week's entertainment embrace Van Cello and Mary in a novelty pedagogical offering of rare cleverness and agility bearing the title of "Foot Feats"; Bobby Bernard and Adele Keller in an amusing skit with special songs, "Mama Loves Papa," especially written for them by William K. Wells, and "Hot" Schaefer and Bernice in a laughable bit of whimsy that bears the name of "An Auto Tangle."

The photodramatic feature of the bill to be inaugurated this afternoon at 3, will be First National's release of Edwin Carewe's production of "High Steppers," a screen adaptation of the story of "Heirs Apparent," by Sir Philip Gibbs. In this ultramodern subject the pivotal roles are played by Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes with an exceptional supporting ensemble led by Dolores Del Rio, Alec B. Francis, Rita Carewe, daughter of the director; John T. Murray, Emily Flazoy, Edward Davis, John Stepping and Clarissa Selwynne. The story is of two girls and a boy all of whom "stepped," but not in the same way nor for the same reasons.

The entertainment will be rounded out by the customary abbreviated film features and orchestral and pipe organ musical embellishments.

"Puppy Love" Coming.

Following presentation this new week at the National of the comedy, "The Family Upstairs," the National Players will offer "Puppy Love," and this will be followed by the Anne Nichols success, "Puppy Love." The latter piece was originally directed by Clifford Brooke for the Broadway and road engagements.

PARAMOUNT JUNIORS AT THE PALACE

A sparkling comedy cocktail of joyous romance, "Fascinating Youth" will introduce at Loew's Palace for the week starting this afternoon, sixteen of the prettiest girls and handsome youths in America—the Paramount Junior Stars of 1926, who, a little more than a year ago, were selected from 40,000 candidates in all parts of the country, to constitute the first class of Paramount's new school of photoplay acting.

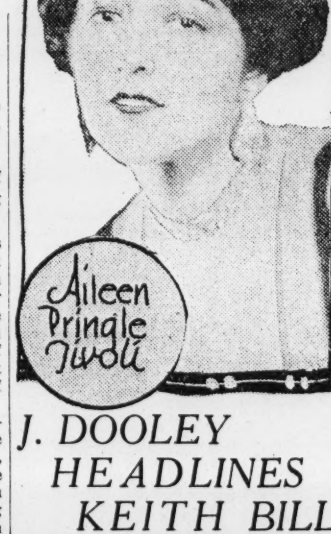

"Fascinating Youth" is an original story specially written for the Junior Stars by Byron Morgan, author of numerous hits for the late Wally Reid, while the production was directed by Sam Wood, long famous as an important director. In addition, the Junior Stars are supported by a group of stars, including Thomas Meighan, Richard Dix, Adolphe Menjou, Clara Bow, Lois Wilson, Percy Marmont, Chester Conklin, Director Malcolm St. Clair and others.

Buddy Rogers and Ivy Harris have been selected for the central roles of "Fascinating Youth," which reveals, against the midwinter splendor of the Adirondacks, the gayety of Greenwich Village and Paramount's Long Island studios, the story of a wealthy young society idler who falls in love with a village sketch-artist at the very moment when his father has selected a girl of his own social sphere as the young man's bride.

To maintain his own self-reliance, the young man attempts to attend the event helps temporarily to solve the trouble, but there is still the iceboat race prize of $10,000 to pay. Desperate, the young man lays aside his manege-rail, Prince Albert, jumps into ice-racing togs, and wins the iceboat race as the only means of escaping jail.

A brief Sennett comedy, "Muscle Bound," the Pathe Newreel Pictures, Topics of the Day and a superb musical background by the Palace symphony orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Thomas J. Gannon, are among the added hits of the program.

North Beach is getting to be the regular Sunday mecca for a group of the National Theater Players. Each Sunday finds a squad of them motoring down for a swim. Rhea Dively has been unanimously named swimming mentor for the troupe.

J. DOOLEY HEADLINES KEITH BILL

There will be no let-up in the high standard of bills set for the holidays last week at B. F. Keith's theater. The bill for the current week at the popular Fifteenth street home of the two-a-day will be topped by that ever-favorite comedian, Johnny Dooley, in a new act presented by E. K. Nadel, entitled, "Dooley Doodle Revue."

This is said to be the most portentous offering ever attempted by Mr. Dooley and promises to make a high-water mark in vaudeville. Dooley's antics are well known, and he brings with him this trip a big company of talented beauties and dancers, including Ralph Sanford, Delbert Faust, Pauline Arley, Connie Madison, Dorothy Rogers and Peggy O'Neill.

Keith's theater brings East for the first time on this bill, Adler, Well & Herman, the California humming birds, who offer an act of music that is decidedly out of the ordinary.

Next in line is Billy Shone and his beautiful partner, Luise Squire, late of the "Pollos," in "Lobby Follies," a clever vehicle written by William K. Wells. It is best described as "a peppy parade of persiflage and pulchritude."

Marguerita Padula and company will offer "Tory Novelties." Ruth and Dick Gilbert, noted song writers, record makers and broadcasters, will present for the first time with the Gladys Wilbur girls, "Bathing a La Mode."

The company includes Dorothy Kelley, Sara Stockton, Elaine Griggs, Hazel Brown, Esther Leppman and Mary Kaminsky. Harry Thurston, the London hippodrome star, will make his first American appearance presenting "Character Studies of London Life." Judson Cole, conjurer of them all, assisted by the audience, will be seen in a humorous interlude. Lottie Atherton will present a unique dance offering. The usual screen features, Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day and the Pathe News Pictorial will complete the bill.

"THE CAT'S" COMES TO COLUMBIA

The second week of the new 1926-27 photoplay season at Loew's Columbia, starting this afternoon, will bring as the featured attraction of the program, another brilliant and delightful picture from Paramount's "Fifteenth Birthday Group," entitled "The Cat's Pajamas" and featuring a cast of remarkable note in Antonio Moreno, Betty Bronson, Arlette Marchal, Theodore Roberts and others.

"The Cat's Pajamas" is the highly modern title of a gay, fast, frisky and spicy comedy from the pen of Ernest Valda, the famous young Hungarian playwright, who recently astonished the New York theater by turning out in rapid succession such hits as "Fata Morgana" and "Grounds for Divorce." "The Cat's Pajamas" is an original screen story which has been characterized by Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton, while it constitutes the first directorial effort under the Paramount banner of William Wellman, one of the newer directorial geniuses of the day.

Gorgeous with its gowns and gayety, spicy with fervent love scenes and fascinating in its glimpses of back-stage atmosphere, "The Cat's Pajamas" offers Mr. Moreno a role of striking and unusual appeal as a famous and intensely popular opera star of noted attainments at amorous who, to win a bet and vindicate his own reputation as a great lover, wins the heart of a temperamental French beauty who was long suspected of having no heart at all.

No sooner, however, had he accomplished this conquest to the satisfaction even of the losing bettor than there enters his life a little American girl model from a modiste's shop who, apparently without effort, captivates the heart of the opera star as completely as he had captured the heart of the French beauty. The manner in which the famous singer escapes from the complications thus engendered and wins the heart of the girl whom he adores makes "The Cat's Pajamas" a comedy of engrossing delight and exquisite beauty and appeal.

The management of Loew's Columbia has supplemented first local presentations of "The Cat's Pajamas" with a fine group of added program features, including the Tuxedo comedy, "Honest Injun," the International Newsreel pictures, Brustlof's musical embellishment and other subjects of like appeal.

Six Outings Planned At Chesapeake Beach

Six organizations will hold outings at Chesapeake Beach this week, carrying more than 9,000 excursionists. The Employees' Beneficial Association of the Washington Gas Light Co. will go to the resort on Wednesday, the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows on Thursday, the State council of the Daughters of America and the William B. Cushing camp and auxiliary of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War on Friday and the Modern Woodmen of America and the Washington division of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf on Saturday.

Dancing to music by Ralph Garren and his Carolinians, salt water bathing, fishing, boating, picnicking, boardwalk promenading and touring Amusement Fairland are some of the diversions at the beach. Hundreds of government employees and others are spending their vacations at the resort. The summer colony constantly is growing.

"THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS" AT NATIONAL

In "The Family Upstairs," which the National Players will offer for the new week commencing Monday night, there is a pointed, though entertaining, moral example for relatives, especially parents, who interfere in the heart affairs of their children. Every parent is at heart a matchmaker, but methods differ with various parents, and in "The Family Upstairs" one sees the over-zealousness of anxious parents at most spoil the romantic prospects of their marriageable and lovable young daughter.

Harry Dell, author of this comedy of domestic life, accomplished two distinct themes in the piece, one heavy with heart interest, the other, sturdy in its picturing of the joys and disarms of an average middle-class American family. He has crowded his characters into a New York flat, and propinquity does the rest. They almost succeed in crowding happiness from each others' lives.

The Hellers are concerned mostly with marrying their daughter to a young bank clerk who has a future. The youngsters get along nicely when left alone, but so fearful is Ma Heller that the romance won't bloom successfully that she turns love's smooth pathway into a rocky and perilous trail.

The piece has its humor and its pathos and is particularly appealing in the deftness with which the types are drawn. Ruth Nugent played the young Heller girl when the play premiered at the National here, slightly more than a season ago.

"A Trip to Chinatown," adapted from Charles A. Hoyt's side-splitting comedy of the legitimate stage, is the photoplay feature at the Rialto this week.

This hilarious farce was directed by Robert P. Kerr and features Earle Foxe, Margaret Livingston and J. Farrell MacDonald. Not satisfied with the stellar attraction, the producers surrounded these headliners with one of the most perfectly balanced casts ever assembled at the West coast studio. The list includes Anna May Wong, George Kuwa, Harry Woods, Wilton Benge, Maxie Astaire, Gladys McConnell and several others.

The action begins as Welland Strong (Earle Foxe), the gentleman with an explosive lung, starts for San Francisco. What happens to him in the ensuing six weeks follows the stellar attraction, the first of the interludes are incorporated in a screen play.

Much of the action is laid in San Francisco's romantic Chinatown, replete with the utmost fidelity, and many of the interiors are gorgeous in the extreme. It is said to be the most costly comedy of its length ever produced. Thousands of extras were necessary for the revelry scenes in Chinatown, and special comedy writers were employed to supply the director with novel situations.

A special stage presentation, arranged by Mische Guterson, the International News and other subsidiary features will complete the program.

FARCE CHIEF AT METRO

The eight-day program to be inaugurated at Crandall's Metropolitan theater this afternoon at 3, the last to be offered prior to the closing of the house for two weeks of alteration and beautification, will have as its major film attraction one of the most vivacious and most contagiously hilarious feature-comedies of the year—Al Christie's elaborated camera rendition of "Up in Mabel's Room," the brisk and breezy farce by William Collinson and Otto Harbach, originally produced on the stage by A. H. Woods.

The auxiliary offerings will embrace a wide variety of abbreviated camera subjects and a musical program of orchestra and solo hits of particularly noteworthy quality.

"Up in Mabel's Room" concerns the adventure of the members of a fashionable house party on Long Island who are thrown into a perpetual state of consternation by the attempts of a beautiful young woman to win back the husband she thinks she has divorced and his frenzied efforts to recover the movement of a plot that is original, continuously laughable and as incapable of adequate expression in cold type as all farces ought to be.

Marie Prevost is cast in the role of Mabel and contributes one of the sprightliest and most thoroughly captivating character studies she has ever brought to the silver screen. Her finely balanced and highly competent supporting cast bristles with distinguished names in this field of spontaneous endeavor. Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Harry Myers, Maud Truax, Paul Nicholson and Sylvia Beamer are the players of primary importance whose excellent work is ably seconded by Arthur Hoyt, Carl Gerard, William Orlamond and others in every sense worthy of their roles.

A feature of the musical program arranged by Daniel Breeskin, conductor of the Metropolitan symphony, will be the solo debut of W. Marsden, newest addition to the permanent personnel of the orchestra. The concert overture to be offered by the Metropolitan symphony, Mr. Breeskin conducting, will be comprised of the melody gems from Kalman's operetta of "Sari," and the recurrent theme of the interludes score for the feature will be "What Can I Say After I've Said I'm Sorry?"

they went with the result that they have provided the music world with several popular members. The group have just sold a number to Irving Berlin, "If I Can Find the Kind of Girl I Dream About." This song has been recorded by Mr. Gilbert for three different recording companies.

It was only a short step from song recording to vaudeville, and Mr. Glavin went on to record "Pretty Baby" and "Mine."

The Gladys Wilbur Girls (there are six of them) will prove to be a great addition. Each girl is a special dancer in her own right and has had considerable stage experience.

DECORATIVE ART SPLENDID IN CONCRETE

By ADA RAINEY.

SOMETHING new under the sun is the valuable contribution of a Washington artist to the realm of art and architecture. The story of this contribution, that is really a discovery, of which the far-reaching results have not yet been determined, is a romance of absorbing interest and of great importance to the future of architecture and decorative art. A material as flexible as clay to the sensitive fingers of the sculptor, as permanent as marble and as rich in color possibilities as pigment to the brush of the painter, has been found and used successfully in the interior decorations of large areas adaptable to the necessities of a modern cathedral. This is the brilliant achievement of John J. Earley.

The record of this achievement can be seen in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart on Sixteenth street, designed by Murphy & Olmstead, architects. The interior decorations have been executed by Mr. Earley in the new material, which is a concrete aggregate, composed of cement and small particles of marble, stone or ceramic, which form a solid and enduring surface that has taken on the hues of the brilliant mosaics and the richly colored marbles that delighted the hearts of the medieval craftsmen and artists. This modern edition of "The Story of Venice," which might aptly be called the "Story of Washington," is truly a wonderful story in stone of Christianity told in fitting symbolism. It is glowing with warm color within, the walls are of a rosy hue, enriched with a wealth of decorative detail, yet there is no ornamentation or overelaboration. The warmth of the walls is relieved by a pure blue of the spandrels and the arches above the capitals.

All Concrete Aggregate.

In this Shrine of the Sacred Heart for the first time the entire interior decoration, including wall surface, columns, pilasters, arches and all the decorative details have been made of concrete aggregate as invented by Mr. Earley. This church, architecturally and decoratively, has been pronounced a great success, and as such acclaimed throughout the country and known to architects and decorators. Few, however, know it in Washington for what it is, a really great work of art.

It is the first time that this particular thing has been done, the entire interior of a large church, on so elaborate a scale, composed of concrete in various aspects of diverse colors and with rich textural effects. Indeed, the interior of the church is so beautiful in color, so satisfying in the symbolic significance of the decorative details, that one can well conceive of the time when pilgrimages will be made to it as to a shrine of art, as well as to the shrine of which it bears the name, and pilgrimages made to San Vitale in Ravenna.

The early church in Ravenna is the prototype of the present edifice, but there is no hint of imitation, save in the general feeling and the sources of a kindred inspiration. Well may the moderns believe that the Shrine of the Sacred Heart interprets in a twentieth century manner the feeling of the Byzantines for the same ageless theme. This theme is expressed in a manner appropriate to the needs of the age attuned to the speed of the motor and the airplane.

No Discordant Feature.

Because it was built by a group of men working in harmony, it expresses an extraordinary degree of unity, and it is a unity without any discordant features. It was built more quickly than was possible to the builders of old, who had to quarry their marbles and with painstaking labor cut their mosaics bit by bit to form the great pictures that are painted on the walls of the great basilica. But with the modern mosaic made in the factory by the advantage of great machinery, the mosaicist can make possible color combinations as effective, as vivid and as enduring as by the slower methods.

At present Mr. Earley is at work on some cloisters at the Franciscan monastery in Brookland. These cloisters would not have come into being but for the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, which showed forth the possibilities of concentration, gate and proved that there is literally no form in architectural work in which it is not possible to use this material successfully. Murphy & Olmstead are again the architects of the cloisters, but the decorative work and the sculptures in bas-relief, of which there are fifteen, are the work of Mr. Earley.

The cloisters are the expression in architectural form of the rosary and the idea imbedded in it. The rosary is not entirely a Christian symbol. It was used by the Buddhists and Mohammedans in early times as an aid to concentration, each bead giving forth, when frequently used, the power of the idea for which it stands. The Latin rosary has fifteen decades, with ten beads between. The beads between first carved by the Italian artists were formed in the shape of a rosebud, then from a spiritual sense, each rosebud was a prayer, and the rosary was a bouquet of offering upon whose fragrance was wafted the prayers of the devoted.

The present cloisters have 15 chapels corresponding to the 15 mysteries in the life of Christ which are presented for contemplation during the recitation of the rosary. Thus the cloisters are a veritable architectural rosary in which this idea is presented thus for the first time. This form of meditative prayer has been translated into architectural form, from the simple cloisters which have been used from of old. The appeal of the rosary is through contemplative meditation and not through oral repetition of prayer.

These chapels illustrate in bas-relief the 15 important events in the life of Jesus Christ and are divided into three groups called the joyful mysteries, the sorrowful and the glorious mysteries. The sculptural work of Mr. Earley is full of feeling and pure beauty of line. The compositions, which harmoniously fill the spaces, fittingly illustrate the inspiring theme he is depicting.

These bas-reliefs have in them something of the spontaneity of the early Florentine spirit and a certain charm quite unusual. The columns are of ivory tinted concrete, which has the appearance of warm cream marble. The columns of varied forms used in the Italian Romanesque style are red, green and buff concrete aggregate. They form the support of the cloisters that extend for a 1,000 feet in rectangular form surrounding the monastery. Above the cloisters are arches. Between each arch there is a circular disk decorated with a symbolic motif.

There are 30 known forms of the cross as used in Christian symbolism employed in these motifs. The arches are arches. Between each arch there is a circular disk decorated with a symbolic motif. There are 30 known forms of the cross as used in Christian symbolism employed in these motifs. The arches are arches. Between each arch there is a circular disk decorated with a symbolic motif.

The part color, skillfully arranged as it is, gives an important part in the whole, which is most effective. In the great length, the extent of which has scarcely been exceeded in any of the famous cloisters, the color, there is no monotony by reason of this color and the effective use of the columns and the decorative symbols. Beds of roses 40 feet wide will form a living carpet within the cloister and will add the charm of nature to the stone arches that are an effective background and through which glimpses of the hills and trees beyond can be seen.

A note of interest to the ensemble is being added, which is the little chapel of St. Francis of Assisi, who is the patron saint of the order. This is an exact reproduction of the tiny chapel which was given to St. Francis by the prior of the Dominican order after the former had imported him for a place in which to worship God. It was built by the Italian artist Portinella. The present structure has been built of the same sort of rough stone and it will be decorated when completed as nearly as possible like the original.

Mr. Earley is a Washingtonian and has done most of his work from his studio here. He has been working with concrete as a decorator and sculptor and then began experimenting with the possibilities of further development of concrete. He had undertaken to build the walls, entrance and terraces of Meridian park, using for this construction rough aggregate. He believed that the material could be greatly improved and made to adapt itself to finer forms by using a different quality of stone in the mixture. He then began experimenting and at each stage used different and finer qualities of stone and later porcelain and mosaics. It is, of course, well known that concrete was used by the Romans in pre-Christian times in the building of their great structures, such as amphitheaters, basilicas and aqueducts, that have withstood the corroding influences of time. Recently concrete has proved itself the great permanent material of the present time for the colossal structures that are being built, as well as the great bridges. Even concrete has been used in the decoration of the interior of houses as well.

Decorative treatment is possible in an infinite variety of ways that will add the quality of beauty and permanence to the walls, moldings and all parts of the modern house. The making of this concrete is based on the best knowledge that can be obtained on the subject. This is, in fact, based on the careful experiments made in the great scientific laboratories.

It is, however, the esthetic side of the subject that is particularly interesting and this is the special contribution of Mr. Earley. Recognized by Country. Not only in Washington is this aspect coming to be realized, but throughout the country generally. Indeed it is not too much to say that Mr. Earley is becoming nationally well known for his work, which, strange to say, is but scantily known here. At present he is also working on the Church of the Holy Family in Dayton, Ohio. He is doing the decorations for the chapel of the Novitiate of the Sisters of the Incarnate Word in Houston, Tex., and, in addition, working on the buildings for the Louisiana State university at Baton Rouge. All of which prove that his work is being largely recognized and put into use.

An architectural sculptor, quite apart from his recent discoveries, the work of this artist has attained note. It is full of feeling, power and high technical excellence. A crucifixion in full relief, a life-sized altar piece in the monastery at Brookland, is a most impressive presentation of this subject. It is seldom that a sculptor has a great sense of color. It is extraordinary that a sculptor should be the inventor of a plastic medium that is suited not only for sculpture, but is effective in color as well. Indeed, it may be said that the color interest is the important thing in the work of John Earley, who has made possible greatly added interest and has extended enormously the use and durability in form and in color of sculptural decorative and architectural materials. This is truly a notable achievement in the realm of art.

RANCHING WITH ROOSEVELT, by Lincoln Lang (J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia).

Although Theodore Roosevelt has taken part in his last roundup and has struck the long, long trail to eternity he lives not only in the hearts and thoughts of those who knew him as governor of the Great Empire State of New York, President of the United States and leader of the famous Rough Riders, but those who took part with him in the adventures in the great open spaces.

This book by a companion rancher depicts the arrival in the cattle country of a bespectacled young man who feared no man nor fractious yearling. Enthusiasm and tenacity of purpose soon made the other ranchers respect him. They always gave a welcome when he came back again and again to hunt buffalo and prong horn, to learn the trick of branding and buy and equip Elkhorn ranch.

The author, a cowboy, one of the last of that band of old timers who knew the young Roosevelt, has written a book which will be a real addition to Rooseveltian libraries. In the foreword he points out that had Theodore Roosevelt never been of the frontier, never known the bad lands of the earlier days he would not have developed certain greatness of character any more than the Lincoln character could have been developed without the frontier.

The book is written in a particularly clear and exclusive manner with flashes of wit and pathos and a clever art of analyzing people and events and their effect on the evolution of the world. Not the least interesting parts of the book are the 24 illustrations, which help to tell the story of the young Roosevelt and the part he played in the West.

THE SCENEWRIGHT, by Andre Smith (The Macmillan Co., New York).

This book is especially designed for use of the scenic artist of the Little theater, and those who are interested in this work as a part of the art of the theater today.

The concordance and illustrations and charts drawn by the author will, no doubt, be of inestimable value to the beginner and the expert alike.

THE HOLY BIBLE, Masonic edition. (American Branch of the Oxford Press, New York.) "Upon the altar of every Masonic lodge supporting the square and compasses lies the Holy Bible," Dr. Joseph Fort Newell writes in the foreword to "The Bible and Masonry: The Great Light of the Lodge." This treatise by Dr. Newell, as well as the very excellent concordance and illustrations of the book, while intended for the use of Masons, will lead to general understanding and use of the Bible. The Bible will be of great value to the ordinary Bible reader as well.

The Bible itself contains the Old and New Testaments, according to the authorized version. The part that the Bible plays in Masonry is evidenced by the blank certificate and records in its front, in which can be filled in the names of the lodge and the time initiated into the important records of a Masonic life.

The novel is divided into chapters entitled Enchantment, Disillusion, Readjustment and Romance.

DEAN INGE IN NEW BOOK SEES BETTER CAUSES FOR DIVORCE THAN INFIDELITY

America has become accustomed through numerous magazine articles contributed from the virile pen of the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's, London, to the original views of this divine who has earned the title of "The Gloomy Dean."

Therefore, there is certain to be much interest in his latest book, "Lay Thoughts of a Dean." (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

Dean Inge's fearlessness in both his writings and his sermons is well known. In the present volume he has not minced words through expressing a wide range of thoughts. More admirers will be added to the legion of those already possessed and he is likewise bound to win more opponents on which to launch his shafts by the new book.

Indeed, the dean carries little for indiscriminate praise on the one hand and news of an enemy just arouses his heroic soul to a new conflict, he is apt to read the criticisms with more equanimity than many of our authors enjoy in this pursuit. The dean has learned the rewards of sincerity and the rewards of the truth-teller.

Style Is Sprightly.

Yet no matter what his theme may be, his style is always sprightly, his material always informative and his arguments always provocative.

The most startling views of the dean's in the new book many will find in his opinions frankly expressed on divorce and birth control. These are subjects too often handled with evasion by clergymen and yet they are vital problems in the opening of the twentieth century. The dean does not spare those who hold the bonds of matrimony lightly. Speaking of the marriage vow he writes:

"The truth, of course, is that the marriage vow is not a declaration of all, but a promise of life-long love and fidelity. It is the most sacred and solemn obligation into which a man and woman ever entered, an obligation enforced by every consideration of honor, decency, justice and religion. To say that our affections are not under the control of our wills is to bestialize human nature and to strike at the root of the validity of all contracts."

Nor does the dean hold with those who would make adultery the only cause for divorce. This should be of particular interest to Washingtonians where the divorce law is so drastic in this regard. The dean writes: "And yet I see that those who favor an extension of the grounds of divorce have much to say for themselves. I am not much impressed by Lord Buckmaster's hard cases. Hard cases make bad law is a maxim accepted by all lawyers. But the fewer the hard cases the better the law, and it seems to me that it might be safer, in the interests of morality, to grant divorce for chronic, contagious diseases, incurable drunkenness and brutal cruelty than for adultery."

Cites Chief Need.

"The church is, I think," continued the dean, "probably mistaken in ruling out such offenses as I have mentioned as possible grounds for civil divorce. But I feel much more strongly that our chief need is the creation of a sound public opinion, condemning adultery in all circumstances as a shameful, now, giving up such apologies for just as our novelists are now giving us."

Writing of birth control, he pleads for more frankness. "Only a few very foolish persons," he exclaims, "think that it is either immoral or 'retardant.'"

One of the most interesting chapters in the book is that devoted to the portrayal of John Colet, a former dean of St. Paul's, founder of St. Paul's school and friend of Erasmus, who died just 400 years ago.

Dean Inge shows amazing insight into the life and career of his predecessor. The fact that Dean Colet in his day was a revolutionary in his sermons and lectures inspired the present dean, no doubt, with that "fellow feeling which makes us wondrous wise" and in this instance gave him a complete understanding of the man who had come before him.

One striking instance of Dean Colet's career is related graphically by the author when he preached in Westminster Abbey on the occasion of Cardinal Wolsey receiving his cardinal's hat. Princes of the church, new or old, held no terrors for the valiant dean and he did not hesitate in his sermon to admonish the new cardinal to be humble-minded, which advice history tells us was not taken to heart by the lordly Wolsey.

Upholds Classics. The dean points out in a memorable closing paragraph that Colet "belongs to that class of great men who depend for their place in history on the testimonies of their friends. Like Socrates and Dr. Johnson, he has strong personal influence on some of the ablest men of his generation and was regarded by them with reverence and affection."

Dean Inge takes a firm stand on behalf of the higher classics in college courses in a chapter entitled, "The Legacy of Greece," and he sums up his able argument with the declaration: "We can not afford to throw away the wisdom of the past. It is too precious a treasure to be lost."

He sees in the decline of the classics a deplorable state comparable with the fact "that the Bible, which has been a great popular educator in England, is no longer much read."

That the classics are an antidote to too much secularity is another claim of the dean's. "I honestly believe," he insists, "that if translations from some of the best Greek and Latin authors were included in the school curriculum much of the present custom of tucking them to sleep, some at the top and some at the bottom of the bed, were all collected from the memories of people who were children on the island, nearly a century ago. The book has a gay colored frontispiece, and black and white illustrations by Eric Bower."

Book Notes

"Father's Gone A-Whaling" is the title of a story of old Nantucket for boys and girls, that Doubleday, Page & Co. published Friday. Alice Cushing Gardner and Nancy Cabot Osborne, the authors, gathered material for the story from old residents of the island who remember the era before cook stoves when Nantucket was the whaling port of the world. The sheep shearings and the Quaker school, the children's baths and the ancient custom of tucking them to sleep, some at the top and some at the bottom of the bed, were all collected from the memories of people who were children on the island, nearly a century ago. The book has a gay colored frontispiece, and black and white illustrations by Eric Bower.

How O. Henry's most famous Christmas story, "The Gift of the Magi," came to be written was told by William Johnston recently at the memorial program given on the anniversary of Sidney Porter's death. Mr. Johnston, who is ideas editor of the New York World, had contracted with O. Henry for a weekly story when the author was not yet known to fame. In the third year the World was paying O. Henry $130 a story. At about that time the magazine editors began to compete for his stories until he was being offered $1,000 and $1,200 a piece for all the tales that he could write.

"Look here, colonel," he said to Mr. Johnston, "I have been waiting to have you speak about it." "Well, colonel," he asked mildly, "sense of fairness keeping him from proposing to break his contract? What can we do about it?" "We'll tear up the contract on one condition—that you write me a Christmas story at the old rate."

"You're on, colonel," he answered, and that is how that wonderful story, "The Gift of the Magi," came to be written.

"I don't either," replied Mr. Johnston. "I have been waiting to have you speak about it."

Through this book runs a theme of vital interest in the problems of the hour, and it is plainly to be seen that this man is a real thinker and philosopher and that a kindly wisdom may be found in even his caustic remarks. E. E. P.

REASONABLY PRICED ROOMS WITH BATH HARD TO FIND HERE

$25 Rent Could Be Made Into $50 by Sanitary Installments.

IMPROVEMENT HELD TO YIELD $300 YEARLY

Property Owners Are Believed to Have Overlooked This Opportunity.

A young man in this city, while hunting for a room not long ago, found a situation which, if the landlords, plumbing supply houses and real estate men had recognized and tried to correct, would have meant hundreds of dollars to them. This young man had the quite normal idea that frequent bathing was a necessity rather than a luxury; and consequently desired a room with a private bath. After thoroughly scouring the city he was forced to give up, disappointed and disgusted. The only places he could find that had the character he sought were priced so highly that only "captains of industry" could afford to rent them. In his search he looked at rooms renting from $15 to $35 per month, which had neither bath or running water in them. Similar rooms with bath and running water rented for $40 to $50.

Would Pay for Self.

For example, to show how money is being lost, take a room renting for $25 per month, put a private bath with it and it will rent for $50. In twelve months this room will bring in an additional $300—enough to convert any floor space five feet square into a modern bathroom.

This shows conclusively that the bathroom is the biggest dividend paying room of any in a house. Yet there is a very noticeable scarcity of them. The bathroom will pay for itself in one year's time and its installation increases the property value far more than its costs.

Just why the property owners and agents have not recognized this fact is hard to understand. Nor is it possible to understand why plumbing dealers themselves have not thought of this before now and started an advertising or selling campaign to put adequate bathing and toilet facilities in every dwelling.

In little more than a century, the United States has developed from a pioneer state to an established community. There has been a transition from the handicraft stage of limited production to the mechanical stage of volume production. At one time most of the population was engaged in agricultural pursuits, then lumbering came forward, followed by mining and concentrated mass production. As the railroads pushed their way westward our population followed and new pursuits were taken up.

Specialized production on a large scale has been the keynote of American manufacturing development. The only reason this country can make high-grade products, priced within the reach of all, is because of this specialization and the development of natural resources on a large scale. Not only is the American manufacturer a quantity producer, but he is a quality producer as well. The usual manufactured output is neither cheap, coarse, tawdry nor inferior; nor except in a limited way does it conform to a luxury standard. Goods are made to give long, satisfactory service.

These facts are especially true of plumbing and heating materials and appliances. In these particular fields America leads the world. Quantity production, development of natural resources, and a desire on the part of the buying public for service and comfort, has enabled the manufacturers of plumbing specialties to produce quality goods at a moderate price. The service of the modern plumbing dealer completes the process, whereby the most modest of American homes can afford complete domestic sanitation.

Editors in Palestine Pick Up Radio News

Jerusalem, July 10 (By A. T.).—Hebrew newspaper offices at Tel-Aviv have been getting their news quickly and cheaply since the introduction of radio news from the European capitals.

Two enterprising radio enthusiasts have formed what they call a radio news bureau, and have set up offices in Rome, Moscow, Paris and London daily.

With the aid of an amplifier and a stenographer, the news is transcribed into Hebrew and flashed to the newspapers, and publication follows only a few hours later than in London.

Ruud Light Opera Hour Applauded by Mail From All Over Country.

GIVE INSIGHT INTO LIFE

Radio applause letters are never monotonous and the life of the man who answers them must be particularly interesting if he believes the words of J. O. P. Shaver, who has that particular job in connection with the Ruud light opera hour.

"It is impossible to classify radio letters," says Mr. Shaver. "They come from everywhere and everybody. We had one the other day from a hospital in Kentucky where every bed was equipped with head sets. It seems that a vote is taken each night on what programs should be tuned in, and that the Ruud light opera hour was a heavy favorite. That makes us feel pretty good."

"Another instance of this 'multiple receiving' was in Kansas where a rural telephone company connected all its subscribers with the Ruud light opera hour."

"But one of the best came from a now-staid husband who recognized a tune that he had associated with his courtship."

"I'll never forget it," he wrote. "I was sitting in the gallery in my peg top trousers and she was down in the dollar-and-a-half seats next to me. I got a good seat for $1.50, with my rival. He had money. I didn't. I had almost decided to give up the ship. That tune you played the other night was in the show and it saved me. And I took her away from my rival. The song was 'Faint Heart Has Never Won Fair Lady.'"

"So it goes," says Mr. Shaver. "Each letter is interesting and each one is greatly appreciated."

The Ruud Water Heater Artists are giving programs each Monday over station KDKA and KFKX at 8 o'clock Eastern time.

Miss Ellen Wilkinson A Parliament Pioneer

London, July 10 (By A. P.).—Miss Ellen Wilkinson has earned for herself the title of pioneer among the women members of parliament in more ways than one. She was the first woman M. Now she has gone pioneering again, and is the first woman M. P. to drive her own car to the house.

STORK MORALS HIGH; FAITHLESS ARE SLAIN

Berlin, July 10 (By A. P.).—Mythological couriers of babies, storks have a moral code more strict than that of the angels upon whom they are supposed to bestow life's little blessings, believes Annie France-Harar, noted ornithologist.

Long observation, Miss France-Harar said, has convinced her that flocks of storks have a system of "legalized" marriage and divorce. Unfaithfulness is punishable by death, but as a single standard prevails in storkdom, only the female is made to suffer. The male gets off with a reprimand.

A stork execution was witnessed at Stydia, Greece, recently, by her and Dr. Orthman, former German army surgeon. About 50 storks, after encircling a given spot, suddenly swooped down upon a solitary nest in which sat a female bird, her head drooped in expectation of doom.

The flock hacked the female to pieces with their bills. Dr. Orthman has witnessed three such divorce tribunals and infliction of the death sentence in a year.

CLIMATE DETERMINES CHOICE OF HEAT PLANTS

Vapor, Steam and Vacuum Systems Best Where Changes Are Rapid.

CROWDS USE PRIVILEGE

Berlin, July 10 (By A. P.).—Co-education in Germany is still far behind that in state universities of the United States, the Prussian ministry of education reports.

Despite the relatively high position of women in politics, the report continues, the people cling to the idea that a university education is unnecessary for a girl.

STOVES BEING DISCARDED

Constant trouble in heating a home may result from failure to properly select and install the system in the first place or from failure to properly operate the plant after installation.

To meet rapid changes of temperature, the vapor steam and vacuum systems are equally good, for they respond quickly. On the other hand, hot water, being slower to heat and to cool, is better suited to climatic conditions in which the temperature does not show too rapid variation.

If a home is situated in a location exposed to sweeping blasts of wind, then radiator heat will be found most convenient and effective, for such heat can be better controlled from the inside, independent of outside atmospheric conditions.

Ranking as fuel consumers, with equally intelligent firing, the vapor system stand lowest, with hot water next in line; the vapor steam system follows. Thus the vapor system is less expensive when it comes to buying fuel.

When selecting the type of heating to use, there are many other considerations to be regarded, however, beyond the single one of fuel consumption. Many of these are subjects upon which only expert opinion is of value. It is well, therefore, to seek and follow the advice of a reputable heating contractor, one whose experience and knowledge covers all forms of heating equipment for any building.

REFUSED TO GIVE PONY FOR CHICAGO'S CENTER

Edgar Lee Masters' Grandfather Preferred Spoon River Corn Lands.

$400,000 FOR AN ALLEY

Chicago, July 10 (By A. P.).—The grandfather of Edgar Lee Masters, poet, just about a century ago refused to trade his pony for 40 acres of land in what became the heart of Chicago.

Now the city council of Chicago is considering a proposal to sell to the Marshall Field estate a little downtown alley one block long for $400,000.

Many real estate stories have been written about the phenomenal growth of Chicago, but one of the most interesting has been contributed to the Journal of the Illinois Historical society by its poet.

When Squire Davis Masters returned from the Blackhawk war he scorned a chance to trade his pony for the land, described as "some-where between the Chicago river and Lake Michigan," which corresponds generally to downtown Chicago. Squire Masters had his eyes on the fertile black corn land of Morgan county, near Spoon River, which his grandson made famous.

In the case of the alley strip proposed to be sold to Marshall Field, each side of the 40-foot strip, about 600 feet long, is shadowed by a towering department store. It normally is filled with trucks delivering merchandise and taxicabs and private cars delivering shoppers.

DISTRICT BATHTUBS NOW TOTAL 96,800

One to Every Five Persons Is Estimate of Plumbing Inspector.

Washington has sufficient facilities to lead the world in cleanliness. One bathtub to every five persons in the District of Columbia is the estimate made by A. R. McGonegal, District plumbing inspector.

There are 96,800 bathtubs or individual shower baths in the District, not counting showers used as an attachment to a tub. Mr. McGonegal pointed out that on an estimated population of 490,000 this would give one tub to every five persons here, probably the highest rating of any city in the world.

Shower baths are rapidly displacing tubs in the more modern homes in the District, Mr. McGonegal said. Many of the showers now installed are built over the tub, thus affording an opportunity for both a tub bath and shower bath.

ENGINEERS' COUNCIL SEEKING TO SOLVE PROBLEMS OF RADIO

Public Service Solution of Broadcasting Explained
by Cornell Dean.

STATIONS DECLARED INDIFFERENT TO PLAN

Judicially Minded Committee of Technical Men to Ask Aid of All.

A "public service solution" of the broadcasting problem is sought by the American Engineering Council, according to an announcement by the council's president, Dean Dexter S. Kimball, of Cornell University.

An investigating committee will be named by the council to examine the whole situation, which, he declared, threatens to create "a radio chaos of inestimable complexity" affecting 20,000,000 listeners.

"Many of the problems," Dean Kimball said, "are fundamentally engineering in nature, and will be studied by a special committee in an unbiased, broad-minded and comprehensive way, so that accurate conclusions may be made generally available in convincing form."

The engineers, he asserted, acted after a preliminary survey had shown that factual studies in radio could be carried on with advantage to the public interest comparable to that attained by the council's investigation of waste under Secretary Hoover and by other investigations, covering the world aircraft situation, the problem of coal storage, the three-shift day in industry and the relation of safety to production.

Sees Universal Concern.

"The annual sales of radio equipment exceed in value $500,000,000," Dean Kimball continued. "It is estimated that there are some 20,000,000 listeners in the United States. Hence radio questions are of almost universal concern and of tremendous commercial significance."

"There is no doubt that they affect the public interest at every point. It is probably fair to say that there is no disinterested agency of national scope which has thought of these problems with the thought of a public service solution."

"It is evident that these problems involve many engineering considerations. The subject appears, therefore, a logical matter for consideration by the engineering profession."

"The American engineering council's investigators will seek the cooperation of every interest concerned. The aid of the legal and administrative officials of the Department of Commerce or of any other radio regulating body that may be established by Congress, will, it is believed, be readily obtained."

"We feel sure that the trade and commercial questions involved will be adequately and promptly presented by the business interests that are responsible."

Educators Welcome Idea.

"Our survey committee consulted with numerous educators regarding the desirability of such a study being made by American engineering council, and it appears that such a study by American engineering council would be welcomed by them."

"The large broadcasting interests have expressed no opposition to an engineering study of radio. Rather they seem indifferent to it, apparently being in doubt as to how such a study could serve any useful purpose."

"In our opinion, however, this indifference results wholly from a lack of appreciation of the usefulness which might be served through having an impartial, judicially-minded committee of technical men studying these problems and recommending through the council certain principles for general adoption."

"Factual studies of the radio broadcasting problem will usefully serve the public interest through the application of engineering principles."

"Special attention will be given to an analysis of the relative costs, effectiveness and difficulties of the various methods used in broadcasting educational, religious and like programs."

Time Diversion Studied.

"Another important field of inquiry involves the economic soundness of division of time between expensive stations as contrasted with the use of multistudy stations with a single broadcasting station."

"Numerous conflicts of interest are arising, and difficulty is increased as the religious, educational and other fields of broadcasting enlarge their activity. There can be at the present time no generalization made as to the proper solution of these differences. Each local problem must be separately considered and a decision appropriate to the local circumstances reached."

"There are now 540 broadcasting stations, of which at least 200 give regular programs of considerable interest, commanding substantial audiences. There are approximately 600 additional applicants to whom broadcasting licenses have not been granted by the Department of Commerce."

MRS. CHAMP CLARK TO MAKE ADDRESS IN POST RADIO HOUR

Tells of Jefferson's Life in Varied Program for Tomorrow Night.

REFRIGERATION TALK AND MUSIC PLANNED

Salvation Army Musicians to Play; Camp to Be Explained.

Three talks and varied musical selections will be included in The Post program to be broadcast from WCAP, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. station.

As a member of the board of governors of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial association and perhaps the leading authority on the life and works of Thomas Jefferson, Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the late Speaker of the House of Representatives, will speak about the great Democrat. The story of the dedication of the home of Jefferson on July 4 as a national memorial to the father of Democracy will be told by Mrs. Clark during her ten-minute talk.

A description of modern refrigeration methods for the preservation of foodstuffs and the process involved in the transportation and storing of perishable meats, dairy products and vegetables will be given by an official of the Cudahy Packing Co., which maintains one of the largest refrigeration plants in the East here. The talk will reveal facts concerning the intricate arrangement for preserving foods at the large markets in the city, where thousands of people are accustomed to purchase supplies direct from wholesalers.

Talk for Children.

The start of the program will be a yarn for the children by Elizabeth Poe, of The Post staff. At 6:25 p. m. baseball scores will be announced.

Instrumental music will be given by a group of musicians from the Salvation Army. In contrast with its effort to comfort poor people during cold winter months, the Salvation Army at this season affords free transportation, as it is enabled to by popular subscription, for hundreds of families, bringing them in groups at ten-day intervals to Patuxent, Md. Here the children who have no regular relief from the heat of city pavements are permitted to swim and engage in outdoor sports. Brigadier William H. Barrett will outline briefly this recreation camp between musical numbers by his staff members. A vocal recital by Duncan Thomson, accompanied by Edna McCauley, will supply a novel part of the program, the presentation alternating in song and recitation.

Maj. Ferris Lauded.

Included in written applause received for those who appeared on the last semi-monthly radio program was a letter from Mrs. Dean Cherrier, member of the League of American Pen Women, which said: "I happened to be in the rear of the Pickwick Arms at the time The Post program numbers were announced and all those present were interested in the rendition of the Hungarian love song by Maj. Ferris. His rendition of 'Flanders Fields' was superb; several baseball fans present were delighted with his recitation of 'Tony at the Bat.' I wish we might hear him again."

F. C. Heigle, 2310 Connecticut avenue, wrote: "You radio folks tell us when we have particularly enjoyed a certain artist on the air, to let you know so this is to say that Mrs. Heigle and myself with friends who were listening in during The Post hour enjoyed Maj. Ferris' presentation immensely. Our only complaint was we did not have enough of him."

When I bought the Kelvinator one of the things that made me hesitate was that I wondered how long it would stand up. We have now used it about four and one-half years and it is running as well as when I first purchased it."

ELECTRIC OUTLETS HELP TO ENTERTAIN BUNGALOW PARTIES

Device Comes in Handy in Preparing Meals at Convenient Places.

MEALS OUT ON PORCH ARE MADE ENJOYABLE

Many Unnecessary Trips to Kitchen Are Spared; Wagon
Used in Serving Tea.

By SUSAN ELLEN DODGE.

Those who are fortunate enough to have a summer home usually like to have their friends enjoy it with them. The truth, however, is that country house or bungalow entertaining often is not made simple enough. It is surprising how easily one can manage if ample use is made of facilities electricity has made available.

When we were having our little bungalow wired I had electric convenience outlets installed on the porch, in the breakfast room and at various points where they would come in handy for preparing meals on electric table appliances and for lamps. That was certainly a happy thought, for these outlets have made possible many a party which, without them, would have been a task. We have nearly all of our evening meals out on the porch and often Sunday breakfast, as well as tea or supper when guests are present.

Makes Entertaining Easy.

You can not imagine how easily meals are prepared on the electrical appliances. I have a complete set of them. That is a grill or table stove as it is sometimes called, waffle iron, toaster, percolator and water kettle. With these I am able to prepare a wholesome meal good enough for any purpose and with the least possible effort even when cooked and served on the porch.

To save myself all unnecessary trips to the kitchen I use a tea wagon to convey the appliances, food and dishes. The table is the set and the food is started cooking. When it has been cooked I serve it directly from the grill pan, hot. Whatever is left over for a second serving is kept warm over low heat, which means that the food thus cooked and served is eaten warmer than if cooked on the kitchen range and served from there.

All the soiled dishes may be piled on a tray and placed on the lower shelf of the tea wagon. I usually serve three courses—the entree, salad and dessert. When the first course has been eaten I pile the dishes on the tray and serve the salad, which I bring in a bowl to the table. If our dessert is to be cake and fruit, this is also brought to the table on the initial trip, but if it is something chilled or frozen in the electric refrigerator it is usually brought in at the last minute. This means a trip to the kitchen, but I put it all on a tray, so only one trip is necessary.

Sometimes I have as many as eight and ten persons in for Sunday afternoon tea. I make my sandwiches and cakes early in the morning or even the day before, and the electric water kettle boils water out on the porch. Sometimes I even make waffles in my waffle iron or cinnamon toast in the toaster. These things give a really delicious variety to the otherwise usual tea party. Try it on the family first, so that you will acquire proficiency and you'll never entertain any other way during the summer vacation.

Electric Securities Growing in Volume

New public offerings of electric light and power securities during the month of May, including stock, bond and note issues, amounted to $66,316,000, as compared with $86,373,000 for the same month of 1925. This figure brings to a close the five-month period with a total of $560,551,442, as against $501,448,000 for the corresponding period of the previous year.

The largest individual offering was made by the Indianapolis Power & Light Corporation, which utility, incidentally, was represented twice in the month's list of new issues, in the form of first collateral trust gold bonds amounting to $10,000,000. Though long-term financing predominated, several short-term issues appeared.

Trackless Land Spanned by Wires.

The Southern California Edison Co. is now constructing its third 220,000-volt line which will be 223 miles long, crossing a partly mountainous region and extending northward through Bakersfield from the Los Angeles power zone. The whole line is to cost $11,000,000 and will be in operation over part of its length early in 1927. About 75 miles of road must be built, because the line in places runs through rough country that has no highways.

Power Cables Span Mississippi.

The country's largest cables to conduct power across a river have just been installed at St. Louis, Mo., spanning the Mississippi river from the huge Cahokia power plant. Three 33,000-volt cables each 1/2 inches thick and 2,500 feet long were laid. Previously the maximum length of such cables that could be manufactured was 1,200 feet. It is planned to install 24 more of these 2,500-foot single length cables from Cahokia to St. Louis.

Electricity Used in Palestine.

Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Haifa and Tiberias, all of them in Palestine, are now equipped to perform daily miracles, producing light by the turn of a switch. In Tel Aviv the poly-lenders have even progressed to the point of using curling irons and heating pads. Power costs 40 cents a kilowatt hour, as compared to America's average of 10 cents.

Utilities Pay Big Share of Taxation

Seven hundred million dollars a year or approximately $23 every second of the day and night are poured into the public coffers in the form of taxes by public utilities throughout the United States. This is approximately one-quarter of all the taxes paid by the incorporated industries of the country.

In New York State the tax payment of the gas and electric companies alone will exceed $30,000,000 this year and that in New York City approximately 10 per cent of every electric light bill is returned to the public treasury for the relief of general taxation. Drawing a parallel between the privately owned, tax-paying public utility like the New York Edison Co. and the publicly owned nontax paying utility like the hydroelectric system in the City of Ontario, Canada, Arthur Williams, vice president of the New York line, said recently that during the past year the Edison company has rendered 2,000,000 bills at an average cost to its customers of approximately one-half that for corresponding service supplied by Ontario.

NEW ELECTRIC ENGINES FOR NEW HAVEN ROAD

New Type of Locomotive Has Both Alternating and Direct Current.

SERVICE IS ECONOMICAL

The first of seven electric locomotives of a new type, which utilize the advantages of both alternating and direct current, has just been shipped from Erie, Pa., by the General Electric Co. to the New Haven railroad.

These locomotives each contain a traveling substation, picking up 11,000 volts alternating current from the overhead trolley wire and changing it to 600 volts direct current, used to operate the driving motors.

One of the outstanding advantages of alternating current generally used by large public utility companies in bringing electricity for light and power from waterfalls many miles distant is its economical transmission at high voltages for long distances, according to engineers.

This same advantage is present in the economical distribution of alternating current power along the main line of the New Haven railroad. It has also been recognized by engineers that direct-current motors for driving locomotives are more rugged in construction and more reliable in operation than alternating-current motors. The new locomotives combine both these advantages.

Five of these new locomotives will be used for freight service on the main line of the New Haven road between Oak Point, N. Y., and New Haven, and two will be placed in yard service for switching purposes.

Colorado River Dam Will Rise 312 Feet

A dam 32 feet higher than the famous one bearing the name of the late President Roosevelt is about to rise in the Colorado river and close a narrow gorge to back up water for the double purpose of irrigation and power generation. It is the Horse Mesa power dam, 17 miles below Roosevelt, Ariz.

The structure will be 312 feet high. Bedrock, 34 feet below the water level, has been cleaned for the dam foundation. A series of holes was bored 50 feet deep and cement injected under high pressure so as to fill any possible fissures and thus prevent leaks. The dam proper will begin to rise at once.

ELECTRIC WATER PLANT PROTECTS AGAINST FIRE

Pressure System Especially Valuable on Farms Where Risks Are Reduced.

HAS OTHER ADVANTAGES

"There is always," states J. B. Strider, of the Thomas Electric Co., "a peculiar sense of satisfaction which comes over any of us when we have taken some step that insures the comfort or the safety of our family or the protection of our property. In no instance is this peculiar sense more definite than it is when the farm home has an electric pressure water system installed and immediately possesses a protection against fire, which it has never had before."

In the United States and Canada in 1925 there were total fire losses of $373,500,550.00. A farm building was burned every fifteen minutes. To a large percentage of this appalling amount was caused by fires in country homes and rural districts. There is some encouragement in the fact that this loss is $4,000,000 less than that of the preceding year.

Improved methods for fire protection and the installation of equipment like pressure water systems are having their effect, not so much in reducing the risk, perhaps, but enabling the home owner to throw a stream of water on the fire in its incipient and before it gets to be a full-grown, devouring flame.

"Of course, protection from fire is only one of the many advantages which the rural home enjoys when it has its electric pressure water system. One of these electric pressure water systems can be used wherever there is electricity, from high-tension line or from a farm lighting plant. It is automatic in its operation."

"Moderate-priced electric pressure water systems can be secured which will pump 200 gallons an hour, a quantity more than sufficient for the needs of the average farm family, stock and the like."

"A farmer near Timkin, Kans., said recently, that he had saved many times the price of his electric water system, when a stream of water which it pumped put out a serious fire which started in the kitchen and threatened to destroy the entire house. Cases like this could be cited in great numbers."

"Everybody knows that the possibility of fire around the farm premises is ever present. It is only a matter of good business to provide effective means to combat it. The electric pressure water system is one of the most effective means yet found, and it provides so many other worth-while advantages and pays for itself so positively, that fire protection with such equipment really cost nothing at all."

No Misleading Signals In New Traffic Light

A new improved electric traffic light operated by a new type of electric synchronous control was demonstrated for the first time last month before the conference of mayors of New York State in session at Schenectady by C. A. B. Halvorson, of Lynn, Mass., designing engineer.

The new light, somewhat similar in external appearance to the red, amber and green signal lights used in some cities, is different in that it contains a phantomless optical system. This prevents the sun's rays from being reflected and thereby causing false or misleading signals, which add to the confusion of motor and pedestrian traffic. A wide angle lens makes the signals visible from all points during daylight and night hours.

Fill Your Home With Cool Outdoor Air

The nuisance of smoke-filled rooms, the closeness of stale air, the heavy odors of cooking food—all these are immediately eliminated by the American Blower Home Ventilating Fan.

This handsome, sturdy appliance fits right into any standard width window without installation expense, is reversible and easily portable. Your electric shop will give you full information and demonstration.

X-Ray Used to Test Underwater Cables

A power company on the Pacific coast is beginning to use an X-ray machine in testing big cables that are to be laid underwater to carry electric current. Sometimes the smallest flaw in insulation or in a joint will cause a cable failure in service and endless trouble.

The company's idea is that if a cable is slowly passed through the beam from an X-ray machine it will be possible, by watching the image on a fluorescent screen, to spot defects and remedy them before the cable goes into service.

25 ELECTRIC BUSES TOUR SESQUI TRACT

40-Cell Battery Propels Sightseers Over Grounds of the Exposition.

Among the many unique features at the Sesquiennial exposition at Philadelphia is the method provided for transporting the crowds of sightseers about the 750 acres of the exposition grounds.

A fleet of 25 electric buses of a design that provides maximum comfort, convenience and safety for the passengers are operated within the exposition inclosure, passing the principal buildings and points of interest. The buses are operated by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co.

The buses have an overall length of 33 feet 6 inches, with a wheel base of 291 inches. Each is driven by two electric motors through a system of concentric gearing and receives its power from a 40-cell, 29-plate storage battery suspended under the frame of the bus amidships. The batteries are charged on the exposition grounds at a garage and charging station. Each bus follows a route approximately 4 miles long, returning to the charging station at the end of each route.

Old Worries.

NEW MODELS OFFERED

A new line of eight cabinet models of electric refrigeration just announced by a leading manufacturer shows clearly the vast strides made in the evolution of refrigeration from the days of the cave man who endeavored to preserve his foods in the depths of a cool, dark cave to the modern day method of using electricity. From cave to electric refrigeration is a romantic story in itself.

As man advanced in his march toward civilization, he kept always the thought of food preservation uppermost in his mind. The first form used was the cave, which later gave way to the use of crocks placed in cool running brooks and wells. It was the best method available to keep foods fresh and palatable.

Then an ingenious Yankee thought of the idea of making a box to contain his food which was placed on ice covered with sawdust. Soon came the familiar ice house which stored the summer's supply of refrigeration.

Gradually the wooden box, free of any insulation, gave way to the development of the refrigerator which gained rapidly in popularity as the best means available for the preservation of food. It has served its purpose for many years, but electric refrigeration has come to replace it and afford the housewife the proper and adequate protection of foodstuffs.

Though electric refrigeration is still in its infancy the experimental stage has been passed and its greater advantages over the old-fashioned method are pronounced. A prominent feature of electric refrigeration is the fact that it is automatic, requiring no attention and freeing the housewife of former worries and annoyances caused by ordinary refrigeration.

Electric refrigeration maintains a constant dry, cold atmosphere at all times, keeping foodstuffs fresh. It checks the rapid growth of bacteria which occurs in a temperature above 50 degrees—the danger line. Freezing trays make it possible to supply actual ice for drinking and other purposes. Numerous desserts of a wide variety may also be prepared in the freezing trays if desired.

SEARCHLIGHT HALTS STEALING OF AUTOS

Used in Worcester, Mass., to Inform Police When Bandits Are in City.

A 30-inch searchlight made 30 years ago by the Thomson-Houston Co., one of the predecessors of the General Electric Co., has after its long life been put to a new use. It is credited with having been instrumental in reducing the number of thefts of automobiles in Worcester, Mass., by half, according to officials of that city.

This searchlight was installed on the roof of the Bancroft hotel as an advertising device, its beams showing the location of the hotel to motorists traveling by night. But it had not been used for that purpose for some time.

It was decided this spring to repair it and use it to flash notice to Worcester patrolmen when bandits were operating in the city.

Bunker Hill Monument Lighted.

The Bunker Hill monument, in Boston, now stands out against the night sky, a brilliant white shaft. It is floodlighted with lamps playing 15,000,000 candle-power of illumination upon it.

A Saving Servant

Not everyone is fortunate enough to be able to hire fellow human beings as servants. The accomplishments of such servants, however, dwindle when compared with those of one everyone can easily afford and utilize—electricity.

Besides changing the darkness of night to daytime light, electricity lightens labor, speeds services and creates comforts unknown before its development. The housewife of today has more leisure time, less burdensome work and greater joy from living than her grandmother would have thought possible. The man of today enjoys the comfort of electrically-blown breezes, electrically-cooked food, electrically-transmitted entertainment, electrically-propelled and time-saving transportation—and many other things his grandfather found unattainable.

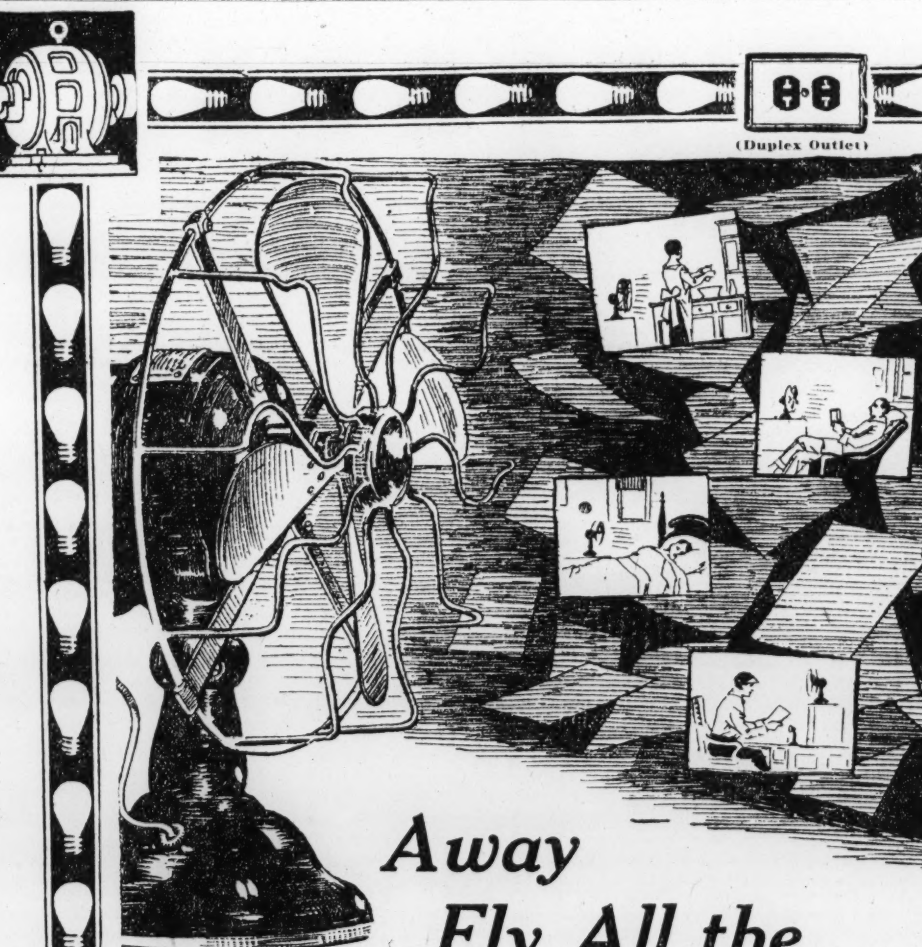

Because of electricity—mankind's most saving servant—everyone can work more efficiently, enjoy more leisure, sleep sounder and live longer!

Away Fly All the Discomforts of Heat

When the Electric Fan starts a-whirring.

The strain and exhaustion of these oppressive, sultry days flutter far and away like a house of cards when this modern dispenser of refreshing breezes gets on the job.

The cost of a fan is relatively small—the upkeep insignificant.

Install one or more Electric Fans, we suggest, while the need is most apparent and the greatest comforts are to be gained.

Miss Ada L. Bush, of the domestic commerce division, and Miss Gladys Bush, of the correspondence division, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, have returned from a two weeks' vacation at the resort of Virginia, Va.

H. L. Colwell, of the division of simplified practice, has returned from Pittsburgh and Columbus, Ohio, where he interviewed manufacturers and contractors in regard to simplification.

R. M. Hudson, chief of the division of simplified practice, has returned from Pittsburgh, where he conferred with the chairman of the management week committee.

Miss Margaret Hoyle, of the division of simplified practice, is passing a three weeks' vacation at her home in Virginia.

Mrs. Lucile B. Purdy was called to her home in Battle Creek, Mich., on account of the serious illness of her sister.

Miss Stella Roberts has gone to her home in Red Star, Ark., for a month's vacation.

Miss Bertha Kuehnmast is passing a vacation with her relatives in Minnesota.

Miss Jane B. Sherzer had a visit from her brother, Dr. William Sherzer, whose home is in Ypsilanti, Mich., and who is professor of science at Michigan university.

Miss Gertrude Volk, accompanied by several friends, motored to Sherwood Forest for the week-end.

Mrs. and Mrs. Noble Waldron passed the week-end at Spolman's island.

Miss Alice Engle and Miss Ida Hodgkins passed the Fourth at Chesapeake Beach.

Mrs. Marion Tolian entertained guests from Philadelphia over the week-end.

COMMERCE
Mrs. Helen L. Bennett was welcomed back at the division of mineral resources and statistics, bureau of mines, on Tuesday. Mrs. Bennett had been absent since Christmas due to serious illness, and only recently returned to Washington from place by Thursday. A. A. Munch, of the Pittsburgh station, will probably remain in Philadelphia as long as the exposition is open.

Mrs. M. F. Jones, bookkeeping section, bureau of mines, has driven to East Gloucester, Mass., with her son, Joseph Jones, for a vacation of several weeks.

Mrs. Amy B. Clinton, of the chief mechanical engineer's office, bureau of mines, had Miss Florence Harris, of the bureau with her on the cruiser Blue Bird over the holidays.

Miss Alice V. Petar, division of mineral technology, bureau of mines, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Peter, have gone to Ocean City, Md., for several weeks.

Miss Vera Crockett, division of mineral technology, bureau of mines, spent the holidays visiting friends at Frederick, Md.

Will Visit in Virginia.
Mrs. Alberta Fitzhugh, division of mining research, bureau of mines, is absent on a month's vacation. She planned to pass some of the time in the Rappahannock district, Va.

Dr. Albert Loomis, helium division, bureau of mines, returned to Washington to pass the holidays with his family at Takoma Park.

Dr. Loomis was recently transferred to the Pittsburgh station of the bureau when the cryogenic laboratory was moved there from Washington.

Miss Margaret Light, explosives section, bureau of mines, is absent on leave.

E. A. Selfridge, lumber trade commissioner to the Far East, left Washington Wednesday on an extended itinerary through the Middle and Western States and will sail from Seattle in the latter part of August for Tokyo, where he will take up his duties.

Mrs. Blaine T. Frazier, of the division of supplies, has tendered her resignation to go to her home in Ohio.

Harold D. Hayes, of the radio section, bureau of navigation, passed the week-end and holiday in Atlantic City.

D. B. Carson, commissioner of navigation, is on an official trip to New York city.

Miss Sara G. Barnitz, of the radio section, bureau of navigation, is passing a three-week vacation at her home in Millinburg, Pa.

Have Tennis Tournament.
Mrs. Ida Revie and Miss Rose Sokolsky, of the radio section, bureau of navigation, accompanied by several friends, passed the week-end and holiday at the home of Mrs. Hilda Williams in Ocean City, N. J.

DRIV. NO CAR WITH DEFECTIVE BRAKES

GOOD TIRES, BRAKES, AND WATER SYSTEM NEEDED BY TOURISTS

A. A. Urges Owners to Watch Mechanics in Inspection Work.

CARE IN SELECTION OF OILS IS ADVISED

Suggests Accessories to Be Taken Along for Emergencies.

With every indication that motor touring, and particularly long-distance touring, will exceed all previous records in volume this year, the American Automobile association today sounded a note of warning about the importance of keeping the car fit while en tour.

The time to take precautions is before the tour starts, the A. A. A. warns, pointing out that otherwise the motorist is liable to let himself in for hurried repairs and incidental delays, which are liable to mar the tour.

The warning stresses the necessity for three preparatory precautions—a thorough cleansing of the water circulation system, the assurance that the brakes are in perfect order, and the marshalling of good rubber. But these were only the high spots, the A. A. A. listing half a score of other suggestions, these being based on the experience of the thousands of emergency road service stations maintained by the national motoring body and its affiliated clubs.

The tires should be either new or in first-class condition, all cuts and abrasions having been filled with cement, and a reliable gauge to keep the pressure at a proper level should be tucked into a side pocket. A daily five-minute inspection will prove a mighty influence against tire trouble, the A. A. A. statement declares. It continues: "A thorough inspection and overhauling of the car, with the motorist standing over the mechanic, will pay handsomely in freedom from vexatious delays and breakdowns. Upon the lubrication will depend at least 80 per cent of the car's service. Either determine definitely that the oils particularly suited to your car may be obtained en route or take enough with you to last until you return. The same applies somewhat to gasoline. Always insist on a reliable, dependable brand. To insure continued efficient operation, go over the grease cups and other points of lubrication before starting each day's trip.

"The wise tourist carries at least two new spare tires complete, with at least two spare tubes in waterproof and dustproof bags."

A comprehensive tool kit and a complete set of chains to prevent skidding and to help extricate the car from mud holes also are essential.

The tool kit, it is suggested, might include a large monkey wrench, a small monkey wrench, two sizes of screw drivers, a set of socket wrenches, a set of open-end wrenches, a pipe wrench, a machinist's hammer, a set of punches, cold and cape chisels, two sizes of files, a pair of pliers, a knife and possibly a small vise. A good jack, preferably of the long-handled variety; a powerful hand pump if the car is not equipped with a power pump, a lug wrench and a small block of wood to go under the jack in soft ground also are a part of the equipment.

"If you want to be the acme of efficiency," the A. A. A. adds, "you will take along a small supply of extra bolts, nuts, cotter pins, wire, rubber tubing for the windshield wiper and possibly emergency repairs to the gasoline line and other small items of the kind. A set of substantial tire irons might at a critical moment prove the most valuable part of your equipment."

The motorist also is advised to carry a tow rope, which, it is pointed out, is "one of those things you may never have to use, but which will prove its preeminence right in your equipment if the emergency should happen to arise."

The new gasoline strainer and an air cleaner will increase the efficiency of the car, and some sort of light to illuminate the right-hand ditch at night when passing other cars also is desirable. An extra roll of wire and electric light bulbs will not be amiss and, if there is room for it, a bottle of distilled water for the battery will eliminate frequent stops to "give the battery a drink."

"There is one more accessory of tremendous importance," the A. A. A. concludes. "That is a large and prominent bump of common sense. If you have that, your days a-wheel should be pleasant and untroubled, and your car will carry you there and back without complaint. But the car of the car should begin before the tour starts. If you overlook this you overlook the best bet for successful motoring."

DIAMONDS ARE USED IN MAKING CHASSIS FOR MARMON AUTOS

Stone Employed as Points in Cutting Tools Which Machine Engine Bearings.

DERIVED IN MAKING OF LIBERTY MOTORS

Most Exact Work Is Done; Accuracy Scaled to Ten-Thousandth of Inch.

Quite a fortune in uncut diamonds is represented at the Marmon plant in Indianapolis. The gems, however, instead of ornamenting tiaras, dog collars or pendants or adding to the brilliance of a "diamond horseshoe" at the opera, are put to the most utilitarian uses, being employed as the points of specially developed cutting tools for machining the main engine bearings of the Marmon chassis, the most expensively built chassis in American motordom.

"These delicate, diamond-tipped implements are designed for the most exacting work, with a margin of accuracy scaled down to a ten-thousandth of an inch."

The use of diamonds in the manufacture of bearing surfaces is an original Marmon process and was developed by the Marmon factory at the time of the world war, when the plant, placing its entire resources at the command of the government, was engaged in turning out Liberty motors for the airplane fleet. It was born, as it were, of the emergencies of war time.

Born Out of Liberty Motor.

The Liberty motor crankcase was made virtually in an upper and lower half, and as a consequence the skilled workmen at the Marmon plant experienced great difficulty in boring the main bearings and keeping them in alignment as well as of uniform size.

Steel tools were found unequal to the test. But when ordinary methods failed, one of the tool-room mechanics, an unsung hero of the war, conceived the idea of machining the required surfaces with diamonds and proceeded to design an implement that would do the work.

The result was astonishing. The Gordian knot had been cut, and the problem was solved. As a result, an entire set of diamond-pointed tools was perfected, and dedicated to the task of putting the finishing touches on the Liberty motors.

Additional Scraping Voided.

The wizardry of the diamond tool permitted the artisans to bore the upper and lower halves of the crankcases separately, and to stock them without having to worry about matching the two halves. Thus, the parts could be drawn from the stock room indiscriminately and fitted together in the assembly with such accuracy that additional scraping and line-reaming was unnecessary.

Prior to the adoption of the diamond-cutting process, as many as 85 scrapers had been used on the crankcase bearings. With the new process, however, all but two of these scrapers were eliminated and these two were used only to burr the edges of the bearing seats.

It was found that these diamond tools cut so accurately and were so durable that sharpening and adjustment could be done away with and the entire production of Liberty motors were diamond machined without further ado.

How Diamond Is Mounted.

The method of mounting the diamond in the tool, the invention of one of the Marmon company's own mechanics, is equally interesting. At the end of the steel holder is bored a recess just large enough to permit the particular gem chosen to be inserted. The insertion being made, the steel is peened around the gem with a sharp-pointed tool until the diamond is held securely in place.

To secure it more firmly in position, molten brass is poured into the space between the diamond and the holder, completely filling the recess. The holder is then trimmed down around the stone, and the diamond ground in diamond dust until the desired edge has been obtained.

Kellogg Has Auto With Refrigerator

Probably the most elaborate touring motor car ever designed is the de luxe land cruiser built a few years ago for W. K. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich.

In addition to being equipped with a modern bathroom, kitchenette, electric stoves and other conveniences, it has an electric refrigeration plant similar to those now used for central refrigeration in apartment houses.

NEW TOURISTS' RECORD IS PREDICTED THIS YEAR

General Improvement in Highways and Autos Held as Great Incentive.

DRIVING RELIEF OFFERED

Statisticians conservatively estimate that this year will see more motor tourists on the highways of the country than ever before in the history of motoring.

General improvement of arteries of travel and constant refinement of the motor car have done much to promote the constantly increasing popularity of motor car touring. When the average motorist starts out on a motor trip, he not only wants to be relieved of mental worry as to the car's condition en route but physical driving fatigue as well.

This explains in part why there are so many Cleveland sixes making tours on the highways of America this year. With the Cleveland six owner there is never need to worry that the car will be properly lubricated on the trip. The Cleveland six one-shot automatic chassis lubrication system, which oils every bearing by pushing a plunger, takes care of that. What is more, the car can be properly oiled while moving along the road or standing still. In view of this, mental worry as to whether the car is delivering the proper amount of lubricant on long tours or, in fact, all the time, is entirely banished.

With the average motorist, much of the physical strain experienced while touring is primarily caused by hard steering. Cleveland engineers spent much time and thought to forestall this objectionable feature in the Cleveland six and they have been successful. A ball-bearing steering knuckle was adopted in connection with the steering mechanism, which makes it possible for a child to steer the car with ease.

Extra long, resilient elliptical springs with special mountings which virtually serve as miniature shock absorbers do away with the objectionable side sway and choppy up and down motion which on often experiences on unimproved highways.

The seats in all models are deep cushioned and the backs are well arched for restful relaxation.

In the future a great deal more thought is going to be exercised by motor car manufacturers in regard

SIMPLIFIED HEADLIGHT INSTRUCTIONS FAVORED

Massachusetts Official Urges Lamps for Autos That Are Easily Adjusted.

WANTS BETTER DESIGNS

When the instructions for adjustment of headlights issued by the motor vehicle administrator can read simply: "Aim the lamp so that the beam is confined below the level of the lamp center," a long step will have been taken toward the solution of the head-lighting problem, declared Alfred W. Devine, of the Massachusetts State registry of motor vehicles. In an address at the recent summer meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, the public must not be given lamps that are so complicated that they can not be adjusted by following the fewest possible number of simple rules. Rather, every effort should be made toward developing units that require no focusing adjustment.

The first step toward improvement in automobile headlighting conditions, said Mr. Devine, should be the correction of inferior headlamp equipment. Common sense should be used in the design and construction of the lamp so that difficulties shall not be encountered in ordinary usage. Immediate attention should be given to two outstanding difficulties: First, the variation from designed optical characteristics by reason of improperly shaped reflectors and improperly located light sources, and second, the insecure mounting of headlights.

The necessity for designing lamps so that they do not have an excessively high maximum beam intensity can not be stressed too strongly. The maximum intensity should be near the top of the beam, and from this point or zone the intensity of the beam should shade off gradually without confusing contrast.

The strength of lamp mountings calls for the most serious consideration. Lamp supporting brackets usually are attached to the fender supporting brackets, and weakness to the comfort of the tourist. The popularity of national touring demands that the hours spent at the wheel of a motor car should not be marred by the presence of mental and physical strain.

of the latter against twisting or bending stresses may render a properly designed lamp supporting bracket useless. Headlamps are many times subjected to a force of possibly 75 pounds, exerted by hand near the top of the lamp while cars are being pushed about in garages and other places, and any part to or through which this force may be transmitted should be sufficiently strong to withstand it without distortion.

The difficulties that have thus far prevented the best results from the present system of headlighting are inferior equipment supplied with the automobile and improper use of the equipment by the car owner or operator. Headlighting should be handled by the car builder as a safety matter and in such a way that further state regulation will be unnecessary.

PRICE CONSIDERATION HELD SECOND TO QUALITY

Chevrolet Official Declares Public Becoming More Careful of Values.

The American public is deciding its purchase of automobiles upon quality rather than price, according to R. H. Grant, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

"The increasing regard for quality also is apparent in many fields other than that of the automobile," said Mr. Grant.

"For instance, a man buys a garden hose not on the basis of which hose is the cheapest, but on the basis of what service he will get for his money. If he believes that the cheaper hose will fall after a season of use, he will purchase a more expensive hose that will serve for several seasons."

"This attitude is becoming more and more apparent in the automobile industry mainly because the public each year is becoming more familiar with motor-car values."

In addition, in the automobile market other considerations that are influencing buying are colors, style, performance and riding qualities.

"Buyers of necessity have to group themselves into price classes, but within the range of their price class they are discriminating. Consequently, other considerations as well as price have to be given careful thought in order to make the appeal to the largest possible number of buyers in a particular price class."

SERVICE ON QUANTITY BASIS MEANS COST DROP

Packard Dealer Says Owner Profits by Repair Work on Large Scale.

CITES INDUSTRY RECORD

Service costs to car owners are expected to show a material reduction when repairing and trouble prevention go on a quantity basis, according to the latest views in automobile circles.

Just as quantity production has resulted in constant reductions in list prices of cars, it is pointed out, so is quantity service to reduce the cost of keeping cars in proper working order.

According to Oscar Coolican, local Packard dealer, nothing is gained by the car owner when he decides to do his own servicing, since this tends to break down the quantity idea and makes it impossible to offer major service work at low figures.

"The shops that turn out the biggest jobs in the shortest space of time and at the lowest rates commensurate with guaranteed work are the ones that are handling the greatest number of small service jobs," he explains. "Furthermore, the small jobs are regular and not spasmodic. The most successful manufacturer aims to keep production at the same peak week after week. It is the same thing with successful servicing."

"Just as soon as service, in general, is on a quantity basis, it is reasonable to expect that we shall see the same benefits to the service buyer as we have seen in the case of the car buyer. When people are buying cars as they happened to have had money enough to indulge in transportation, production was as spasmodic as it was limited, and prices were high. Now, as they are getting out of this period in service and should soon reach a point where any motorist will be able to obtain the finest work in record time and surprisingly low figures, because the service business will be on a quantity basis."

Outside and inside—in body lines and finish, in fittings and appointments—it's clearly evident that this car DOES lead its field.

But you'll never really know how FAR it's in the lead until you get in and DRIVE it.

For here is a motor that ranks among the FINEST—with its SMOOTH, quiet, responsive power-flow.

And here is a chassis that is big and STRONG and rides with a solid STEADINESS that will delight you.

Then there's force-feed lubrication to all main bearings, connecting rod bearings, and camshaft bearings—so that you can ride at top speed for prolonged distances without straining or harming the powerful motor.

There's an oil purifier, air cleaner, gas filter—you'll have all oil, air and gasoline thoroughly CLEANSED with a more EFFICIENT motor as the result and one that is LONGER lasting.

And Nash-designed four-wheel BRAKES—lightning FAST in operation, and equalized PERFECTLY on all four wheels. Together with full balloon tires and five disc wheels, they're included in the price.

STRAIGHT EIGHT CAR BECOMING POPULAR; MARKET IS GROWING

Output in 1926 Will Be at Least Double That Manufactured in 1925.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN HUPP AUTOS

New Features Have Revolutionized Car; Body Construction Is Better.

Two years ago, according to Charles D. Hastings, president and general manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, public opinion was rapidly crystallizing itself into the belief that the limit in motor cars had practically been reached. From then on, the word went round at the manufacturing end that the car of the future could safely choose from any one of a dozen or more motor cars and be satisfied that he had made a good motor car investment.

"That opinion has been revised a dozen times since," he pointed out. "In the face of it several manufacturers have produced a new type car—the straight eight—developed on a new engineering principle. It was not more than five years ago that competent, progressive engineers declared that the straight eight could not be produced in America, except in limited quantities. They discussed at length concerning its admitted features of remarkable performance, smoothness, power and inherent long life. But, they argued, it will always be impossible to produce such a car in quantity. The necessity for extraordinarily fine manufacturing in such a car will prohibit its ever making its appearance as a serious contender in the American market, where the public is definitely and wholly convinced of the superiority and greater practicability of large standardized production."

See Growing Market. "These several straight eight manufacturers even a year ago became thoroughly convinced that the straight eight was destined to occupy not only a large part of the market of the finest cars, but a considerably growing market. As evidence of their judgment, the sale of straight eights in 1925 was more than five times what it attained in 1924. In 1926 they will at least double their 1925 market. Already we see the public buying of straight eights at almost as large a level as that for all other types of fine cars combined. Today more eights are being bought than any other type in a fine car."

"Since the public reached the opinion that the limit had been closely approached in motor cars, we have developed and accepted all these outstanding improvements: Four-wheel brakes, oil and air filters, improved ignition systems, far better crankshafts and engine operating parts, balloon tires, better gasoline mileage, a much faster accelerating engine with longer life, vastly better body construction and a process of finishing bodies that has completely revolutionized our previous conception of what a motor car body should look like. "Our engineers are continuing to make notable contributions in every field of motor cars, from those of lowest price up to and including the finest."

Queen Adopts Dress Of Peasant Women

Jerusalem, July 10 (By A. P.).—Marie, of Roumania, in the interest of economy and serviceability, has adopted Roumanian peasant dress. Only at court ceremonials or elaborate state occasions does she wear European silks or satins. Even while riding in the streets of Bucharest she may be seen any day attired in the picturesque hand-embroidered linen costume of the peasant women. Her designs worked in gold, red or blue thread with a flowing kerchief wound around her head, a bright red and white, hand-knitted apron, and red leather boots.

Women Dramatists To Rule at Theater

London, July 10 (By A. P.).—Only the work of women dramatists will be produced by Sybil Thorndike during her summer season at the Ambassador theater in London. Miss Clemence Dane's "Granite" and "Mariners" and Miss Susan Glaspell's "The Verge" are the three plays Miss Thorndike will offer. Miss Thorndike gave the original English production of "The Verge" in London more than a year ago, when it was heralded by critics as a play which entitled the American woman dramatist to be ranked with Eugene O'Neill.

Autoist Called Crazy Who Relies Solely on Brakes

Using of Lower Gear in Descending Steep Grades Urged Strongly; Motor Condition Plays Big Part in Decelerating Car.

By ERWIN GREER (President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago, Ill.)

Some afternoon when you want to be enlightened as to the dumbness of your fellow man (and perhaps yourself), why, drive out to where there is a steep grade, park your car at the bottom, then walk halfway up, to stop and ponder the efforts of motorists ascending and descending that hill. You will get enough grade information to last you a lifetime. After you have laughed yourself sick at the other fellow, why try driving up and down that hill yourself—to see just how good you are.

The chap who makes a bull in going down a steep hill seldom has a second chance to do it over—there isn't any more. Brake linings are affected by the weather—did you know that? Linings will swell and take hold better on a damp day than on a dry day. This means that you could descend a hill nicely one day and not so nicely the next day. The motorist is the boy who can judge grades accurately. Watch him and you'll note that he casts an appraising eye down the hill, then shifts into second or low gear as the case demands. He takes no chances on burning out a set of brakes, because he knows he will need them for emergencies later.

But the man who slides down a steep hill without shifting into a lower gear, depending solely on his brakes, is—crazy. Sooner or later he'll be riding a runaway that will throw him.

The condition of an engine plays an important part in descending hills. Just as compression aids a car in climbing a hill, it also holds a car back in descending a hill. New cars do not "runaway" so easily as the valves have perfect seats and the pistons are tight. And tight bearings also combine with maximum compression to hold the car back.

But the master driver can cope with any emergency, as proved by

MOTOR CLUB COMPILES AUTO TOUR GUIDE BOOK

New Publication Contains Maps, Trips and Information Concerning States.

With State highway departments, as well as the Federal bureau of roads, working toward general sign posting of the highways, the motorist of today who tours needs but a map and itineraries. With this in mind, the 1926 Associated Tours Guide, the official road book, compiled and published by the Automobile Club of America, has been arranged so that both the itineraries and the maps contain the route-numbering systems. This new issue of the guide also has a large folded map covering the United States east of Chicago, and a resume of speed laws, licensing regulations and gasoline taxes, as well as information for motorists entering Canada.

The guide lists seventeen tours and by following the carefully selected itineraries and clearly defined road maps with which the guide is filled, summer vacationists are enabled to tour by motor through the most charming sections of eastern United States and Canada, to seashore, mountain and country resorts. All tours in the guide are compiled with a view to scenic charm, and the roads mapped are the best stretches of hard-surfaced highway that the country affords. For transcontinental tourists, there is a double-page Atlantic-to-Pacific road map showing the several routes across the United States, accompanied by complete itineraries for this increasingly popular trip. There is also a tour to the International Lake and mountain region of Vermont and Canada, which is a section new to most motorists.

A feature of the Associated Tours Guide that motorists will appreciate is that the itineraries are arranged to allow for logical stopping places at the end of each day's run at towns where accommodations may be readily secured. Not only are there synopses of State motor laws, but ferry schedules and lists of good hotels and garages also increase the guide's usefulness to the automobilist.

For the accommodation of car owners, the guide is distributed through local news dealers, book stores and drug stores in all parts of the country, or may be obtained at the Automobile Club of America, 12 East Fifty-third street, New York.

FILM STARS, AT WORK, ARE HEAVILY INSURED

Big Policies Carried Because So Much Depends on the Picture's Completion.

$2,000,000 ON ONE MAN

New York, July 10 (By A. P.).—The monetary value of movie stars to producers is indicated, among many ways, by the heavy insurance carried on several of them.

When a picture is in production, the general policy appears to be to insure the life of the star since so much depends upon the actor living through the period of work unhurt. Mary Pickford is one of the most heavily insured women in the world, her policies aggregating $1,500,000. These cover life, accident, endowments, furniture and travel, as well as prints of several films she prizes highly. Douglas Fairbanks, her husband, during the course of production sometimes carries insurance amounting to $2,000,000, the figure being smaller in proportion to the cost of the film play being made. Personal insurance of Rudolph Valentino totals approximately $1,000,000. He always is insured for an amount equal to the cost of the picture being made.

Buster Keaton has increased his personal insurance with the growth of his family. His beneficiaries now include his wife, Natalie Talmadge, their two young sons, and his mother and father. The total approaches $1,000,000.

Samuel Goldwyn, the producer, pays premiums on a $500,000 policy carried on Ronald Colman, one of his stars. Vilma Banky, another, had her eyes insured for $100,000 when the producer brought her to this country several years ago, and also has $250,000 to cover her life.

I looked at the sides of the road and a big ditch was there waiting for just such fools as we. But I hadn't figured on Red—who has had some 40 miraculous crashes in his racing life and still lives. Red smiled at my horror, then stepped on the accelerator, raced the engine and caught second gear with a jerk that nearly snapped my head off. From second to first was the work of a second and we were safe. That I am living today is due to Red's expert knowledge of road racing.

MASONIC NOTES

The customary open-air religious service at Temple Heights this afternoon at 4 o'clock under direction of the Rev. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain of the grand lodge, is to be addressed by the Rev. Dr. William L. Darby, general secretary of the Federation of Churches. The music will be directed by J. Walter Humphrey, K. C. C. H., with Past Master Harry G. Kimball as accompanist.

Officers and members of the following lodges, Harmony, No. 17, Max Abel, master, and Warren G. Harding, No. 39, John K. Willis, master, together with officers and members of the following chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star, Mizpah, No. 8, Mrs. Bessie E. Short, matron; Mendel Behrend, patron, and Brookland, No. 11, Mrs. Virginia Carleton, matron; Ernest C. Saltzman, patron, with their families, will be special guests at this service. All members of both fraternities and their families, as well as the public, will be welcome, and ample seating accommodation will be provided.

In consequence of inclement weather last Sunday the mansion was thrown open and the service was held on the porch. A very interesting address was delivered by the Rev. Frank Steelman, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. Increasing attendance at these open-air services has been most gratifying.

Religious services at the Masonic and Eastern Star home this afternoon at 3 o'clock will be held under auspices of Columbia lodge, No. 3. The Rev. Joseph T. Herson will be in charge. Automobiles will be provided to convey those who desire to attend from the intersection of Georgia avenue and Rittenhouse street northwest to the home. Members and their friends are invited to attend these services.

Junior Warden Robert H. Turner will preside during the conferring of the E. A. degree at the communication of Justice lodge, U. D., Friday evening.

Watson P. Shepherd, high priest of Hiram chapter, No. 10, announces that the chapter has called off its convocations until September 13.

THE SHRINE

Illustrious Potentate Charles D. Shackelford is planning a picnic for the nobility of Almas temple and their families. Although the date has not been set, the potentate says an elaborate entertainment will be provided which will have a particular appeal to the wives and children. According to the tentative plans outlined by Potentate Shackelford a ceremonial for Almas temple will be put on this fall which should prove an unusual one in many respects.

Telegrams and letters by the score are pouring in upon Potentate Shackelford from temples and individual Shriner throughout the country commending Almas temple for the unusual hospitality extended to members of the order who stopped over either to or from the Only One car to compare

And that an Italian Car Several Thousand Dollars Higher than the Hupmobile Eight

Thoughtful and analytical engineers, looking for a car to compare with the beautiful Hupmobile Eight, find only one.

That one is an eminent Italian eight, built in the painstaking European method, and priced several thousand dollars higher than the Hupmobile Eight.

That is both significant and important; for if these engineers are correct in their judgment, it means that the doors are closed to every car in America which might aspire to compare and compete with this Hupmobile product.

But far more significant and important is the other fact that the public today is rapidly adopting engineering opinion and judgment as its own.

For this car is being bought today in large and increasing volume by those who heretofore paid the same price or a higher price for cars other than eights in their search for the ultimate.

Any good car is smooth—up to a point; and that point is the degree to which its principle permits it to be developed.

But smoothness is inherent and inevitable in the straight eight principle; and in the high state to which Hupmobile has developed that principle, smoothness is the very essence of its performance.

It is the last word in liveliness. Its get-away is faster, and especially it is faster in second gear, which almost everybody uses nowadays in starting.

And yet, with its eight cylinders, the Hupmobile is showing a frugality and an efficiency in gasoline consumption that are amazing to those who thought they had driven economical cars.

We speak specifically about smoothness, quick-footedness, economy in running and upkeep, modish beauty, quality in the manufactured product, spacious riding luxury.

You have the assurance of engineers—inquiring, eminent men—that the Hupmobile Eight has brought these attributes to their highest expression.

If you have never experienced the difference between the finest eight-cylinder performance and the best of other kinds of performance, one real test of the Hupmobile Eight will establish eight-cylinder superiority for you, forever.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

Monday—Fraser camp, initiation.
Wednesday—Maple camp.
Thursday—Mount Vernon camp.
Friday—Boothers' club.

Fraser camp tomorrow evening will present a class of novices in woodcraft to be initiated. The boosters' degree team will officiate.

Clerk C. D. Holland received an ovation at Elm camp Friday evening upon his return to his duties, after a siege of illness.

Maj. L. C. Jones reported to Officers' council Tuesday evening that the uniform rank companies in Baltimore, Hagerstown, Cumberland and Grantsville were making satisfactory progress. Elaborate preparations are being made at Blittinger to receive the Washington degree team. Capt. Helgesen reported that Company B would wear the new zouave uniforms with fezes. Local sovereigns desiring to accompany the team are requested to communicate immediately with Maj. Green.

The question of moving the location of Maple camp from Capitol Heights to West Potomac, Md., will be discussed Wednesday evening. Judge Louis F. Litz will address the meeting and visitors from Washington will be in attendance.

Consul Commander Litchfield told Alpha camp at Friday's session that he has some new talent for entertainment features. Cooperation with Elm camp's entertainment committee will be given and rehearsals for a joint minstrel show will be immediately begun.

Old Glory camp will make a visitation to Elm camp in a body in the near future.

On July 21 Hickory camp will be the guest of Oak camp.

Mount Vernon camp has been requested to send a full delegation to the boosters' convention Friday.

GOOD FOR YEARS AND YEARS AND YEARS

ALMOST A YEAR AGO the industry began to say: "Something is happening in the automotive world".

The public had found itself suddenly presented with a car that fulfilled beyond all expectations its conception of what a car should be and what a car should do.

It was powerful. It performed with dash and spirit. It was at home in any traffic. It was easy to drive and easy to park. It was beautiful. It offered comfort and luxury . . . yet its price was low.

Immediately great interest focused upon this car. Day by day that interest grew more and more intense. It doubled and redoubled as the weeks and months rolled by. On thoroughfare and highway this car asked no favors, feared no road.

Then, when endurance took first place among its proved qualities, in the hands of thousands of owners—the final proof of excellence was established.

Today public preference stands at a new peak of enthusiasm for the car that won its place by right of merit.

This public preference confirms the fact that something, indeed, was happening a year ago.

With the greatest year in Oldsmobile history now a highlight in the history of the industry itself; with thousands of owners lavishing their praise upon this car; with a record of performance and stamina established . . .

Now what was happening may be freely told:

GENERAL MOTORS was mustering new hearts and heads and hands to the service of Oldsmobile. A new staff of leaders was taking command.

From distinguished service, in all phases of the industry, they came, bringing with them a new appreciation of public wants and needs, a new will to serve, new pride, new vigor and new skill.

They shared a common vision, cherished a common aim, held firm to a common purpose which they were determined to achieve.

And with Oldsmobile each man recognized the opportunity to achieve that common purpose. Shoulder to shoulder with him stood others just as earnest, just as capable as he. At their absolute command were the envied facilities and veteran craftsmen of one of the pioneer manufacturers of the automobile world. Back of all this, at their disposal, lay the vast resources of General Motors.

Seizing these facilities, they bent to their task with a will.

United in their purpose they dedicated to its achievement not only heads and hands but hearts . . . their whole-souled ambition to perform a public service, to fulfill a public need.

How well they succeeded, everyone now knows.

Why they succeeded is this:

DEEP-ROOTED in the mind of every man who plans or builds or tests Oldsmobile is the unwavering determination that his knowledge and skill and resources shall render constant service . . .

. . . that the American family may have, at a moderate investment, a car that gratifies their finer tastes as well as satisfies their every need . . .

. . . that Oldsmobile shall not be wanting in a single essential factor that contributes to performance, comfort, beauty or long life . . .

. . . that in the design, material and manufacture of every detail, the strictest standards shall be rigidly maintained . . .

. . . that their boundless resources and matchless facilities shall be utilized to the utmost to provide these qualities at the lowest possible cost . . .

This is more than a purpose; it is a creed.

It is accepted as a trust, with the firm determination that nothing shall ever deflect the loyalty of Oldsmobile from this ideal.

This—our steadfast pledge—is your firm assurance.

Age of Child's Skull Is 20,000 Years

Gibraltar, July 10 (By A. P.).—Miss D. A. E. Garod, a student of the Institute de Paleontologie Humaine, Paris, who has been excavating here, has made an important discovery of portions of a human skull belonging to a young person.

The find was embedded in hard tufa with typical Mousterian implements.

The skull is of the same age and type as the celebrated "Gibraltar skull" discovered at Forbes Quarry in the Colosseum and now at the College of Surgeons Museum, and according to a conservative estimate it is probably not less than 20,000 years old.

Gifts Enough to Fill White House Twice Over

Surprising Results of the American People's Incurable Fondness for Giving the President and His Wife All Sorts of Presents

Dr. John H. Finley pointing out to the President the beauties of a rug made by Armenian orphan girls for Dr. Finley to give President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. C. W. Ramsey, wife of Congressman Ramsey, of Iowa, and the rug which an 85-year-old resident of Bloomfield, Iowa, made for Mrs. Coolidge.

During his term of office the President receives more hats than he could wear out in a dozen lifetimes. This is one presented to the late President Harding by the citizens of Wyoming and it bears on its band an invitation to him and Mrs. Harding to attend the "Frontier Days" celebration at Cheyenne.

tasting it," wrote the giver, "it would gratify me to have you testify to its quality."

Animals have always been popular with Americans for presidential gift purposes. But folks' idea of pets varies as much as or more than their idea of something good to eat.

Back in Roosevelt's time there came two snarling lions. Not so long ago two bears from the South arrived at the White House. They drove up to the main entrance in a Ford car. They wanted no one but the President and bristled and growled at the sight of the uniformed men. But Congress has not provided the White House with a wild animal den and these bears were sent to the zoological park.

The largest eagle ever caged was sent down from Alaska but it, too, had to be content with the zoo as a home rather than live at the White House and be petted by the chief executive.

A similar fate befell an aristocratic crocodile that came from Florida. Apparently the giver believed that the reptile would be more than welcome, for it was accompanied by some very specific instructions as to how it should be kept in the White House pool.

Then there are the domesticated animals in abundance. Because President Harding had his special dog it has come to be somewhat the fashion to send dogs. It must be confessed that American commercialism enters into the matter, for there is bound to be a certain popularity attached to the species that finds the greatest favor at the White House.

The executive mansion, as a matter of fact, now has more dogs and cats as a part of its household than at any other period in recent history. Today there are three dogs and a fine black tomcat, known as Blackie. Blackie is a great favorite with President Coolidge and often sits on his shoulder and follows him about the house.

Blackie takes the place of the erring Tige, the delinquent tomcat that strayed away and was paged by radio across the nation not so long ago. The paging and broadcasting while meaning well stimulated many lovers of cats to send their pets to receive the caresses of the President. It almost rained cats for awhile.

The Hardings had but one dog, the well-known Laddie Boy. Today the White House kennels are presided over by a beautiful white collie, Rob Roy, who when sent by an admirer was called Oshkosh. But the name wasn't popular with Mrs. Coolidge who could see no way of calling a dog "Osh" or "Kosh." So she named him Rob Roy.

Rob Roy's companion is a very nosy Airedale. When he was received the newspaper men called him Laddie Buck, thinking of course of Laddie Boy of other days. But the Coolidges, noticing that this dog was very curious, appropriately named him Paul Pry.

Then there is still a third pet that was sent by a kennels club in Massachusetts.

If Mrs. Coolidge had accepted all the dogs which America's citizens have offered her the White House would require the largest kennels in the world.

His name when received was Cal's Pal, which didn't lend itself to every day usage any better than Oshkosh. At present he is being watched for some trait of his own which will decide his name.

Not all of the cats and dogs are as well received, however, not even when accompanied by lengthy testimonials to their intelligence and good character.

There are some Americans that seem to think that the White House kennels are public and will board and take care of dogs at all times and for any citizen's convenience.

One New York woman wrote a few weeks ago that she was sailing for Europe and would send her pet dog to the White House to be kept until she returned from abroad. Before anything could be done to save Fido the train trip, he arrived blinking and winking one morning in a very costly crate. But it was the wrong place for Fido. The President and his secretary decided that they had no time for the training of Fido and this puppy went right home.

The President likes dogs and cats, but does not care for any cows. Yet President Taft did. He accepted a family milker by the name of Pauline. There are now no sheep, though President Wilson enjoyed watching a flock of them graze on the White House lawns.

Even elephants appear among the gifts. But these are the ivory, hard rubber or wooden ones and are designed as good luck emblems. So is a tiny horseshoe, the size of a fingernail, which comes every year from an old blacksmith in West Virginia. They have come regularly, without regard to change of party, since the days of President McKinley.

Following the last election there came one day a miniature presidential chair from an 11-year-old boy. His letter said:

"I am mailing you a miniature Presidential chair which I made in school. I am so glad that you were elected, as you were my choice. Most of the kids at school wore your buttons and if they didn't I asked them the reason why. This chair that I am sending to you is Five-year-old Beatrice Helm bringing to the White House a cake which she made all by herself.

As every American citizen knows, the White House at Washington is a good sized building. Statisticians estimate, however, that it is not half large enough to hold all the gifts which are actually received by or proffered to the President and his wife during a four-year term of office.

One of the most striking characteristics of the American people is this apparently incurable fondness for overwhelming the President and his family with all sorts of presents. It seems to be as natural for the average American to want to give the President something as it is to lift his hat when the chief executive passes in the street.

And such gifts! The tastes of the American people are informal and their purchases odd. There seems to be no known rule that will classify them. Perhaps some psychologist will turn his thick glasses White Houseward some day and we shall then learn something of what guides the typical American's mind in its selection of a present for the President.

In the earlier days it seemed to be cheeses that ruled as the favorite. Thomas Jefferson was called to the door of the White House to see a six-horse team bearing the inscription, "the greatest cheese in America." It lasted for more than a year and was the piece de resistance of many a state dinner.

Among eatables in those days cheeses occupied about the same place as Thanksgiving turkeys in modern times. Andrew Jackson received and accepted a giant cheese which went slowly as a food. Perhaps every one tired of cheese. So, as he neared the end of his second term, he ordered it served at his last public reception. "Nose witnesses" relate that "the atmosphere of every room and throughout the city was filled with the odor. It was met at every turn—the halls of the Capitol were perfumed with it, from the members who partook of it having carried away great masses in their coats."

Besides the cheese Jackson received "a whole hog" from Kentucky, whisky from Pennsylvania, beef from New York, besides various other eatables.

But as the habit grew along with the republic of sending gifts to the President it was more and more necessary to examine closely the various articles and frequently it was better to return the present than to keep it. Not but that the thought behind the gift was appreciated, but as Congress never supplied room to store all this vast array of presents it was manifestly impossible to accept them all.

Then, too, the President is human. When it is food that he receives, as it so frequently is, he can't eat it all and remain a live and healthy President. The spirit may be willing but there are other deterring factors.

President Coolidge recently received from a Western college professor a basket of herb wine, apples and walnuts. For some unknown reason the gift was accompanied with a quantity of salve and liniment. In these days all articles of food received at the White House are carefully investigated. Medicine is "put aside."

A recent basket came from a home in Arizona addressed to Mrs. Coolidge. There was a letter accompanying the gift that read:

"Some time ago I took the liberty of writing to our dear President. My sister thought me presumptuous, but I felt especially led to do so because I am a firm believer in prayer. During the campaign I worked hard for our President and followed him all along with my prayers.

"I am now taking the liberty of sending you some old-fashioned cookies. The receipt is 100 years old. They are not pretty, but will keep indefinitely unless you and our dear President like them. Their name is Pioneer Cookie."

"In the postoffice they said you would never see them. But I pray that you will and enjoy them as much as the elderly lady that made them. I remember you and our dear President daily in my silent hour, morning and evening. Wishing you God's very best—"

Gifts of food depend upon the season and the locality of the giver. Thanksgiving brings quantities of turkeys, quail, sausages and rabbits' feet. No sooner do apples, oranges and nuts make their appearance at the opening of the season than the President receives a shipment.

Early in the year it is crisp spring lettuce and other choice vegetables that reach the White House pantry. The following letter was recently received with a gift of potatoes:

"I am sending you by express one dozen North Carolina grown sweet potatoes as a token of my appreciation and congratulations to you. I am only a poor tenant farmer, but I am an American citizen and love the flag of my country for which my forefathers fought and died. The principles of the great Republican party, for which I have always stood, are very dear to me."

The only trouble about this well intentioned gift was that the sender failed to pay the express charges and the President had to pay them. This is not unusual. Many gifts arrive with charges to be collected at the White House.

Cans of pure maple syrup and sugar, preserves, jellies, cakes, pies and other food dainties are frequent gifts. But sometimes these presents have a string attached to them. Within the last few days a consignment of cookies came all the way from Austria with a request that the President taste them and then—lend their maker money to set up a bakery! When a string like that comes with a parcel, the gift goes back.

One of the unusual fruits that came to tempt the President's palate was the "Coolidge Feijoa," discovered in South America in 1890, taken to France and brought to California in 1900. "After SWINGING BASKETS PUZZLE.

For several months scientists have been puzzled by swinging baskets brought from Borneo and set up in the Peabody museum, Cambridge, Mass. As soon as they were in place, reports Popular Science Monthly, they began their peculiar swinging, which suggested perpetual motion. Many explanations for this phenomenon were offered, but none seemed to cover it satisfactorily. Some thought there was something supernatural about the baskets, since they were originally "grave offerings." Finally two young scientists succeeded in stopping them by putting a kink in the wire from which they hung.

"WELL, Miss Hazel," said the Clerk of the Committee, as he dropped in for a chat, now that we've got Congress off our hands, what are you going to do with the balance of the vacation?"

"Your Senator may not be a candidate this year," replied Hazel with a deep sigh, "but my work has just begun. I'm editing this speech for the Congressional Record, and there're fifteen more of 'em coming."

"Your boss sure is prolific," said Philbert.

"The combination of a campaign and 'leave to print' keeps my hands full," Hazel admitted.

"After spending the winter in Europe I guess your Senator must have a lot of addresses in his system."

"Take this speech, for instance, 'Has the Farmer Got His?'" said Hazel. "The Senator wrote that at Monte Carlo, and it's so full of French slang that the boss picked up on the Riviera that if I let it get in the Record this way people would think he was running for office up in Quebec."

"I can see that you have to be very careful with the blue pencil," said Philbert.

"My dear," said Hazel, "between the Senator's grammar and the general worry over the back-to-the-farm movement just now I'm shot."

"It makes me shudder, too, thinking of all these statesmen going back home to the farm this summer. How is your Senator coming along since he was welcomed by his constituents? Is he convalescent yet?"

"My dear," said Hazel, "the Western prairies are ablaze for him—they've already burnt him in effigy in five counties, and Congress has only been adjourned a week."

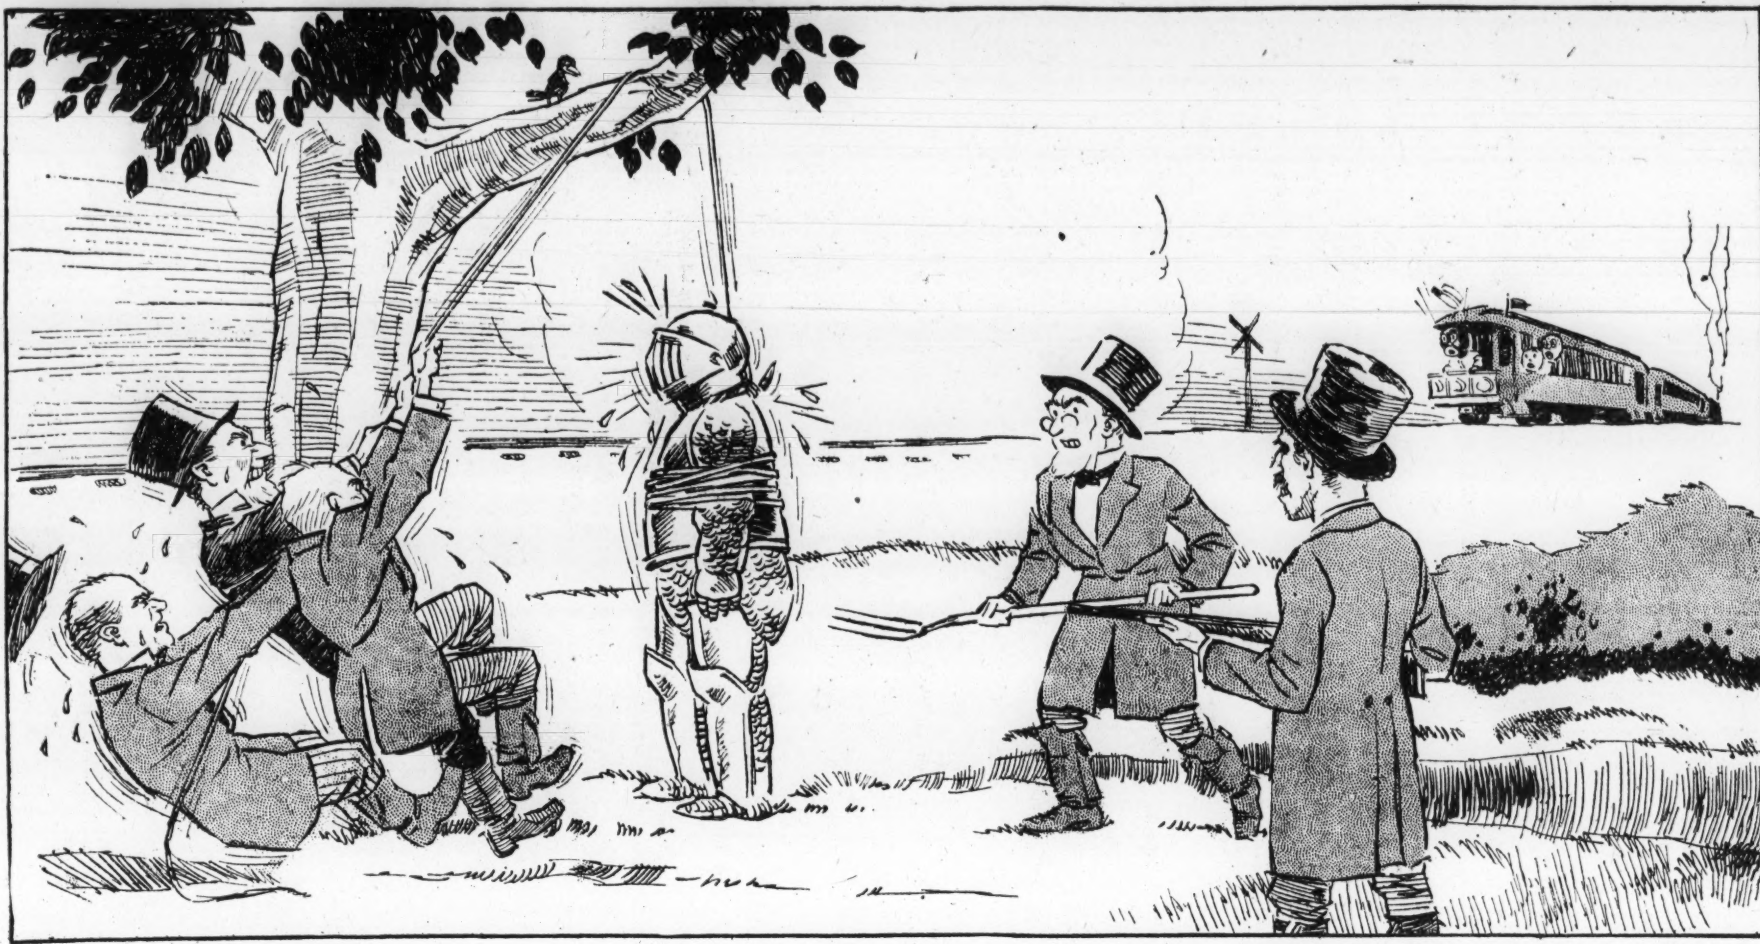

"I SURE am glad my Senator isn't up for decapitation this year," said Philbert. "Still, your boss is mighty resourceful—he ought to pull through if anybody can."

"I'll say!" said Hazel. "He's the political Houdini of the Senate. You know what that genius did?"

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

"Well," said Hazel, "the secret's out now, so there's no harm in telling you, but we sure did keep the lid on the stove while the fire was getting started. It was his own idea, too. I thought I'd die."

"What was it?" interrupted Philbert. "I'm telling you now, ain't I?" said Hazel. "My dear, after the Senator had thought up the plan all by himself, he went down to the National Museum, and borrowed it, and I'll tell you, he left Washington with the easiest mind he'd had this session. He said he judged he could get home and sneak into the house through the back way without anybody recognizing him. He had it in a box in his drawing room and put it on after he got on the Pullman, and it's lucky he did."

"The reception committee of indignant farmers got a rope over a limb and tied one end of it to the senator's neck, but they couldn't hoist him off the ground—he's the luckiest man in Congress."

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

"My dear," said Hazel, "the reception committee stopped the train three miles from the old home town, and searched every car, and when they came to the boss' drawing room, there he sat in a suit of Thirteenth century armor, with a vizor and cuirass and everything, and if he'd kept his mouth shut they'd never have recognized him in another thirteen hundred years."

"That's his trouble," admitted Philbert.

"Well, my dear," said Hazel, "the chairman took him out and walked him down the railroad siding a piece until they came to a big oak tree, and then the reception committee of indignant farmers got a rope over a limb and tied one end of it to the Senator's neck, but they couldn't hoist him off the ground—he's the luckiest man in Congress."

"Still, it was a narrow escape."

"I was thrilled to tears when I read the account in the Daily Palladium," said Hazel. "They had two columns on the front page."

"It ain't every Senator can get that much publicity nowadays," said Philbert admiringly.

"He certainly eats it," said Hazel.

"That was a bully idea about the armor," admitted Philbert.

"My dear," said Hazel, "the reception committee didn't know what to do. They tried to pry his iron suit off him with their pitchforks, and one member of the committee let go with both barrels of his shotgun, but the buckshot bounced off his legs like hailstones on a tin roof; and then they loaded him into a five-ton truck, and escorted him into town, with the band playing the funeral march from Saul. The Senator had sweat so the headpiece was rusted on, and he couldn't budge it."

"They ought to have taken him to a blacksmith shop," said Philbert.

"Somebody thought of that," said Hazel, "and one farmer said he understood there was an old-fashioned blacksmith shop at Five Forks, 86 miles away, but when they got to town there was a gang working on the street car tracks at Broad and Main, so they burnt the Senator's vizor off with an acetylene torch, and that's the only thing that saved him. As soon as he got his chin free he climbed up on the back of the truck and delivered an address, and by that time there was 20,000 people there, and the roads swarming with automobiles hurrying in. The Senator shoved the whole responsibility for the defeat of the farm bill off on Frank Stearns, and the idea swept the crowd right off their feet. They never had suspected him before, had always blamed it on Wall Street, and when the Senator sprung it on 'em they were petrified. It was a brilliant stroke."

"So he's the guilty party!" said Philbert.

"The Senator explained the whole thing," said Hazel, "and made it as clear as mud—it was a plot of the Big Interests to crush the farmer! My dear, they escorted the Senator down to the Opera House, and somebody got a can-opener, and pretty soon the Senator got shed of his cuirass—said that now he was back home among his own people it was safe for a defender of the farmers to lay aside the suit of mail—and then he ripped into Andy Mellon and in five minutes the crowd got so worked up they put him in a wheelbarrow, armor and all, and carried him home, with the band playing 'Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes.' It was the grandest reception the Senator ever got, and he wrote me the next day that he felt pretty well satisfied about the situation, that all he had to do now to get reelected was to bust up the Republican party."

"Is the situation among the farmers as bad as what I hear?" asked Philbert.

"You wouldn't believe it," said Hazel. "My dear, I know families right in my own county that haven't bought a new limousine for two years, and folks always used to a comfortable living, too. The suffering is acute. I know one family in the Hickory Hollow district that had to sell the only Cadillac they owned, and bring their two sons back from Oxford."

"The corn situation is certainly terrible," said Philbert.

"Who's talking about corn?" asked Hazel.

"I thought you were," said Philbert.

"I'm talking about the Florida land boom," explained Hazel. "When that blew up it sure did hit the people hard out in my country. I know one family that'll never buy another quart of Everglades building lots, and the money that might have been made in orange groves that are going to be planted just as soon as dykes can be built to keep the ocean out is a heavy loss."

"The Florida situation is bad," admitted Philbert.

"Folks-out my way who've been used to having their ticks and chiggers all winter are hard hit," said Hazel. "I'll bet I have a dozen intimate friends who'll have to cut out the trip to Miami next January on account of the failure of the Grapejuice National Bank of Hocko-Poko, and that's just one thing. It's awful!"

"The ramifications of the economic depression in the corn belt are certainly intricate," said Philbert.

"Take my dad, for instance," explained Hazel. "He's mashed flat by the crash of the Floral Stables boom. Just ruined. He wrote me only the other day that the only way he could afford to get the front parlor decorated this summer was to paper it with the oil stocks he bought from a millionaire Omaha street car conductor in 1920."

"Still, it ought to be artistic," said Philbert.

"It's all right to be artistic, my dear," said Hazel, "and I would be the last one to be unappreciative of beauty, but when it comes to putting $20,000 worth of wallpaper in one room Congress must act. That's what dad thinks, and my Senator feels the same."

"It breaks my heart just to listen to you," said Philbert. "I didn't realize the agricultural suffering was so devastating."

"Take mortgages and interest, for instance," said Hazel. "Land that was worth $75 an acre and sold for $280 in 1920 is now worth $400 and you can't get $90 for it! And did President Coolidge do anything about it? Let him look the Western farmer in the eye and answer that question!"

"WELL, everybody has his troubles," said Philbert. "Sometimes I'm plumb discouraged myself—I got three more rejection slips this week."

"Did your new manuscripts come back?" asked Hazel feelingly.

"Those New York magazine editors have got an arm like Walter Johnson," said Philbert. "I can't write novels fast enough for 'em. That makes 38 I've got in my trunk, not including the one I'm polishing up now."

"It's an outrage, Philbert," said Hazel, "and I'm going to take the matter up with my Senator when the farm bill comes up next session. The Senator says it's bound to pass then, and when I explain the situation to him I know he'll be glad to add an amendment for the down-trodden authors of the country. And besides, think of the support that would win for the bill."

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

"Oh! for crying out loud! Philbert, if you were really as dumb as you make out, none of your manuscripts would come back. Don't you see my idea?"

"I do get a faint glimmer," admitted Philbert.

"There'll be a revolving fund of $100,000,000, and the government will purchase all the rejected manuscripts turned down by the ignorant editors."

"The idea impresses me favorably," said Philbert, "explain it to me, please."

"Then the government will export the manuscripts to England and dump 'em on the foreign market for what it can get."

"That's the solution!" said Philbert—"but where do I come in?"

"You get yours in cash. The rejection slips are redeemable in gold."

"Miss Hazel," said Philbert, "let's you and me go up on the Willard roof this evening and dance. You sure have taken a load of anxiety off my mind."

"All right—but keep this matter a secret," said Hazel—"I've got to let the Senator get all the credit for the scheme. Just so I draw my salary, he can have all the glory."

I Find Switzerland

By Will Rogers

WELL, all I know is just what I read or what countries, or things, I hear the guide talk about as we drag our weary bones from one old Church to another, or from in front of one old painting to another. Well, sir, we were going along the other day; wasn't bothering a soul, and wasn't caring much what happened to us or just where we went, and the first thing we were stopped by a different band of Soldiers and they said, both of them, that we were in their Country. I said, whose country? And he said, "Why you are in the middle of Switzerland."

I told him, "Why, we haven't been away from the Hotel but a little while. How could we be in the middle of Switzerland?" But I couldn't argue with him. He evidently knew Switzerland better than I did. I would have sworn it wasn't Switzerland. I couldn't hear anybody yodling or falling off a Mountain, or see feathers in anybody's hat. But he told me to walk over here to the line and he would show me that I was in Switzerland, and sure enough we walked over there and it said Switzerland on one side of the rock and France on the other, and then a hundred yards to the north of us lay Germany, and one mountain south lay Italy, or the Kingdom of Mussolini.

WELL, I had always heard a lot of Switzerland. Every time we read a headline in the papers about universal Peace or "War is expected to break out in the Balkans tomorrow afternoon," why the date line is always in Switzerland. It's the Rumor factory of the world. When two Nations can't hardly agree on war by each remaining at home, why they decide to have a conference where they can generally draw up the plans and start it right away. I happened to think that there was a conference going on there at that time, because I had come over on the boat with an awfully fine bunch of fellows who were going to Geneva, to hold what they smilingly called a "Preliminary Disarmament Conference." They entered into it with about the same hopes for success that I would tackle Hamlet in tights.

So I just thought I will go by and see my old friends and see what a conference looks like. And on my way down there this morning I will just see what Switzerland looks like, and kinder study out her history and tradition. Switzerland is the most independent country in the world. They have neither imports nor exports. Its sole commodities are Conferences and Neutrality. When Nations get ready to make peace or war (and they generally don't know which they are making), why they always go to Switzerland. Geneva and Locarno are the principal conference towns. It's kinder like Atlantic City is for bathing Contests (without water). It has a corner on all Conferences. It has had fewer wars and has been the starting place of more of them than any Nation that ever lived. They just sit around and remain Neutral during these wars and then collect from all ends. It's the only country where both sides can go and meet and have a drink together during that particular war. Switzerland is a kind of a Speakeasy for any and all sides. There is little private rooms all over and anybody can come and meet anybody else and Switzerland just winks knowingly and says nothing. It's the Blind Tiger of Europe.

"Adam swung on Eve"

THEY knew something when they settled there too. They said to themselves, "The best thing about a war is to keep out of it." But they also figured there is a lot of Jack in them at that, if you are placed right. So they commenced to figuring, "Where can a fellow go to be near enough to see a war but still not be in it?" So they picked out the spot they have now, and they picked better than they knew, for it has never been necessary to even go out and try and get a better location. Their grandstands were built by nature. All they had to do was to get the hotels ready to take care of the guests or accomplices of a war that are always around but never really in one. They built roads up to the topmost peaks so you could get a close-up of the wars. Then if you were kinder finicky about your wars and didn't like that particular one, why Switzerland would always be willing to board you for a few weeks till one come along that you did like. They had various different combinations of Nations around them that could generally be placed in action if you could get enough spectators.

Then of course you would think that it would be dull in between wars but there is where you are wrong. They had really what is an all the year round business. The minute a war was over, if there was none booked to start within the next few weeks, why they would hold what they called a "Peace Conference" to prevent other wars. Well now off hand you would think a country wouldn't allow a conference to be held here that would be for the purpose of taking away their means of livelihood. But they were smart. They had made a close study of history for hundreds and hundreds of years back and an old smart one of them told the others, "Don't interfere with them holding these peace meetings here. Let them go ahead. They are held after every war, since Adam first swung on Eve for not having his breakfast. Apple there on time. When she come to, her and Adam held a Peace Conference. It was to do away with all wars between Husband and Wife."

Well, the old learned Swiss that was telling this got to laughing so much when he thought how successful that conference had been that he convinced them that there really was more conferences than there was wars, because sometimes it took two or three conferences before they could get a war started. So he won his point, and the Swiss constitution is one of the shortest. It says, "This Nation must give aid and board and lodging to any and all conferences to either prevent or start wars. No preference is to be shown. All Conferences are to be held inside the Home Grounds of Switzerland, but all fighting is to be confined to the outside. If two Nations get to fighting inside our domain we kick 'em down the mountain, across the line, and if they don't observe these rules we won't watch 'em fight again."

So in that way they have lived 600 years in peace, and have seen every war and it hasn't cost them a nickel to do it. Confer or fight; it don't make any difference to Switzerland. They are going to get theirs either way.

The Truth About the Beauty-Baited Trap The Blackmailers Set for Sir Hari Singh

Revealed for the First Time, the Amazing Details of the Plot That Cost the Indian Potentate Nearly $1,000,000 and Imperiled His Chance of a Throne

The Maharajah of Kapurthala, who was entertained by Sir Hari at Douglas Castle at Scotland during the shooting season.

By CAPT. J. C. ARTHUR
Late of the British Army and Long the Trusted Friend and Adviser of Sir Hari Singh.

CHAPTER VI

SIR HARI SINGH'S brief but rather eventful stay in France and several months of social and sporting life in Ireland and England had made his presence in Europe widely known and commented on. The lavishness of his entertainments, his unique dress and rich displays of jewels, his fleet of motor cars and corps of Indian servants and his own good looks and winning personality were the subjects of general wonder and admiration.

In the previous chapter I told how, when the racing season was over, he went to Douglas Castle, the hitherto residence of the Earle of Hume and of the Red Douglas in Scotland, for the autumn shooting. At this ancestral seat of the lairds of one of the most famous Scottish clans the Rajah prepared to outshine himself in the way of entertainment.

But he found the season at Douglas Castle rather disappointing, although the sport was excellent and the place was filled with guests during the whole time he was there. The guests were mostly people whom Sir Hari had met in England and Ireland with a few Indian officials. The guns usually numbered about ten and they included Gen. Rose, of the Indian army, and the Maharajah of Kapurthala, the great Indian potentate. There were two charming Irish ladies whom I had introduced to Sir Hari during the Dublin horse show. He had given them a very special invitation to be his guests for the shooting and they had accepted.

As the autumn drew to a close there occurred an incident which very nearly gave the young prince from Kashmir heart failure. King George and Queen Mary were at Balmoral castle and, rulers though they were, found themselves almost helpless as the result of a great railway strike which had paralyzed the Scottish roads. They wished to return to London and were forced to make the long journey by motor car. Their majesties' aide-camp communicated with Douglas castle and informed the rajah that he would be privileged to entertain the king and queen at luncheon on a certain day. Through some unfortunate error the luncheon was scheduled wrongly and their majesties arrived a day before they had been expected.

It is a commentary upon the virtual impossibility of fazing a competent English butler, when I say that the luncheon was arranged with the utmost rapidity and without the slightest suggestion of unpreparedness.

One wily old jeweler who knew from previous experience how fond these Indian potentates usually are of pretty European women appeared in the rajah's drawing room one evening accompanied by a young woman with the face of an angel. While she stood coyly by his side with her opera cloak drawn tightly about her he described her charms and graces with the frankness and enthusiasm of an auctioneer. She was, he said, an accomplished dancer and would be delighted to dance with Sir Hari as often as he pleased. "Reveal more of your matchless beauty to His Highness, my dear," he finally cried with a dramatic flourish of his arms. At this command the young woman flung her wrap open and revealed a really exquisite figure draped in the most fashionable of evening gowns.

The rajah's party was out shooting and had no idea of the presence of the royal visitors until the return to the castle in the evening. The butler had handled the entire situation with tact, had explained the mistake and had carried out the program arranged for the next day to the complete satisfaction of the British royal party and of the rajah when he learned of it.

Nevertheless it gave Sir Hari a terrific shock and he experienced additional tremors a few weeks later when he received word from court that he was to have audience with the king.

The railway strike determined Sir Hari and his friends to return to London without further delay. The Maharajah of Kapurthala had gotten away by rail just before the tieup and as we anticipated there might be trouble we had sent some of the servants back to Curzon street with a great quantity of luggage. This left only small personal effects which could conveniently be stowed in the motor cars for the return journey or left at Douglas castle to be forwarded by rail or motor lorry when opportunity afforded.

The rajah personally drove his car with me as a passenger. The route we took was somewhat ragged, as Sir Hari decided he wanted to visit a number of places in which he had been particularly interested and frequently announced his wish some time after we had passed the road leading most directly to them. He was moody and full of whim on the way. I could not help thinking that it was because he missed the absolute authority he enjoyed at home in Kashmir and the far better sport he found there. He was also disturbed by the railway strike which not only upset his plans and the plans of his guests, but actually forced the British king and queen to return home by a long and tiresome motor journey.

I have mentioned the great hunting preserves of Kashmir of which Sir Hari owned some of the largest and best. Several of the preserves cover districts 50 or 60 miles square. The Viceroy of India seldom fails to be the guest of the maharajah at least once a year for the shooting of game both big and small. He had to make a curious journey from the quasi-modernity of Delhi to the still primitive kingdom in the heart of the Himalayas.

He comes by rail to Rawal Pindi, the "end of the line" in the Punjab. This is about 200 miles from the valley of Kashmir and Srinagar. From Rawal Pindi there is a road passable for motor cars through the Marye Pass where the snow remains on the heights during the entire year. The journey down the other side of the pass continues until the Jhelum is reached and crossed by the bridge at Kohala where one leaves British India proper and is in the realm of Jammu and Kashmir. From this point the road follows the river along its tumultuous and picturesque course until the stupendous gorge at Baramala is reached and one stands at the gateway of the beautiful vale so widely famed in song and story.

The people of this land have a strange and very ancient legend to account for its creation. The history of the country was transcribed from the most ancient writing in existence when the Mogul Akbar conquered it in the sixteenth century. In the earliest of the four great books from which the story of Kashmir was taken it was stated that the valley was once a lake and that it was drained of its water by the great sage Kasyapa, son of Marichi, who in turn was the son of Brahma. Kasyapa cut a great gap in the mountains to the south and let out the waters of the lake and when it was drained he brought his people to occupy the land.

Scientists admit that in the physical condition of the country they can see some grounds for the basic authenticity of this legend. It has been suggested that the earthquakes which still rock the kingdom periodically ripped asunder the gorge of Baramala in ages long past and unloosed a torrent of waters pent up in the lake. There is the other theory that the Jhelum formed a lake behind the great barrier of rocks at the southern end of the valley and, by pouring millions of tons of earth and stone from its mountain torrents into the basin, gradually filled it up and "made" the land.

I am not a geologist, but there is evidence to support both theories and each very possibly may be partially correct. At any rate the name of Kasyapa is associated with the draining of the lake far beyond the veil of recorded history and the ancient chief town of the valley was called Kasyapa-pur, a name which I am told has been positively identified with the Kaspapuros of Hesiod and the Kaspapuros of Herodotus.

I have mentioned the contrast between the shooting on the Scottish moors and in India and now I want to emphasize it by describing a typical hunt in Kashmir.

To receive the Viceroy of India and other guests of great rank and dignity, a camp is pitched in the hunting grounds which resembles a miniature town. The whole place is illuminated with electric lights operated by a special portable power plant imported from England. Telegraph wires run directly to the camp so as to provide a through line to Delhi, the viceregal headquarters and seat of the Indian government. Special mail service is provided and every possible means of speedy communication with the outside world—except a railroad. There is a reason for the absence of the railroad and it mightily concerns the fate which placed Sir Hari Singh upon the throne of this Himalayan kingdom. I shall tell more about this in another chapter.

While the shooting camp is being used the roads are virtually closed to ordinary traffic so that the couriers and supply lines of the viceregal party may be uninterrupted. Fresh fish and delicacies from Karachi, more than 1,000 miles away, and from other distant points are delivered daily by special express service of trains and automobiles.

From this camp the shooting parties make their daily expeditions into the wilderness where the game is either driven or stalked. When a great drive is under way some 3,000 of the maharajah's subjects are employed as beaters and they advance through the jungle in skirmish lines, making the most terrific possible combination of noises mechanically and vocally and sending the game on ahead of them in the direction of the hunters.

The sport starts before dawn frequently and the parties are up practically the entire night before a big drive preparing for the adventure. The hunt lasts all day long, with a rest and siesta at lunch time, perhaps. About an hour after sunset they "call it a day" and the trophies are brought in.

At the last Indian shooting party in which I participated the camp was a real fairyland at night, with a military band of full strength playing concert and dance numbers. There were the most sumptuously fitted apartments for the guests with bathrooms in every suite and brick fireplaces with a blaze in them to take the bitter edge off the keen mountain air. It is never excessively hot in Kashmir because of the altitude which is never less than a mile above sea level. At night it is quite cold even at the height of summer.

The catering at the camp was the last word in excellence, variety and delicacy. The food was specially chosen to suit the tastes of the various distinguished guests. No money was spared in providing everything that might be desired and the magnificent services of nannery and gold and silver were a revelation of what is luxury in the Orient. Another of the lavishness of these shooting parties may be gained from the fact that the one I have just described cost nearly $300,000.

The shooting lasted for a period of three weeks and this is how I happened to be present. Col. Ward, who is one of the best known sportsmen in India and an authority on natural history, was responsible for the arrangement of the viceregal entertainment and the hunt, being the head of the game reservation department of Kashmir. He telegraphed to Indian army headquarters where I was serving on the staff asking that I be detailed to Kashmir as one of the few men available who had the necessary familiarity with the region and the methods to be pursued in organizing the hunt and caring for the guests.

I have spoken of the lavish expenditure of money to indicate what little consequence is placed upon mere financial outlay by the Princes of Kashmir when they are in pursuit of pleasure for themselves or their guests. This applies to all the ruling princes of India.

The stories of magnificent gifts pressed upon the guests at shooting parties are another matter. I believe the Americans have a sort of proverb concerning "Indian giving"—that is, offering a gift to some one and then requesting that it be returned. I do not know where that proverb originated. Perhaps it comes from the habits of the aboriginal tribes of America, but it may quite as well have had its origin in the customs of the East and particularly of British India. There the making of presents worth a king's ransom is very, very common. But these gifts do not remain in the recipient's hands very long.

A man may call upon you as an emissary of the maharajah with his hands filled with gold sovereigns or jewels and other precious objects, or he may even have a beast of burden laden down with gorgeous and more bulky "trifles." He tenders these to you as tokens of regard from his master, but the retention of such gifts is not to be thought of. You merely touch and admire the presents, thereby symbolizing your acceptance of them and back goes the gift given not a penny the poorer for his magnificent liberality.

Sometimes, however, it does not work out

OWN YOUR BUSINESS URGE FORD AND EDISON

"Go it alone. Do not fail to try because some one has already tried and failed."

This precept has been the rule of the lives of both Thomas Edison and Henry Ford, it is related by Harvey S. Firestone, the tire manufacturer, in the July issue of System, the Magazine of Business.

The summer vacations, usually camping tours, of these three men, when they have entertained Presidents and international business figures, have been interesting examples of how big men of business play. Speaking of one of these vacations, Mr. Firestone says: "Two points which Mr. Edison and Mr. Ford dwell on, time and again, during our talks at night around the camp-fire were:

"1. Own your business.
"2. Keep plenty of cash in bank—make the banks work for you.

"Mr. Edison is a great inventive genius with a wide business experience; he has had a marvelous experience, but he is impatient of detail that is not connected with his experiments. His largest interest is in development.

"As is well known, Mr. Ford paid 70-odd millions of dollars to buy out his minority stockholders, while Mr. Edison, who has been interested in many companies, has now full ownership and control of all his companies.

"Both men want to serve the public to the largest degree, and their vision is so long and their courage so high that it would be quite impossible for any group of stockholders to keep pace with them, and especially since neither of them will take the time or the trouble to explain exactly what he is about.

"Mr. Ford is both a mechanical genius and a business genius. He goes through conventions—through established practices—with a superb surety. He has the genius of reducing a problem to its elements in so simple a fashion that it does not appear to be a problem at all.

"I can easily see that convincing stockholders of the rightness of this or that course, especially since it might involve the payment of a small dividend instead of a large one, would demand the kind of argument that neither Mr. Ford nor Mr. Edison will make. I doubt if Mr. Ford could have carried out more than a fraction of his plans had his business not been personal with him and his family. For it was the building of the River Rouge plant that brought on the suits which resulted in his buying out all the stockholders. And the River Rouge plant has proved to be the longest single step in the direction of economy that he has ever taken.

"I agree thoroughly with Mr. Ford that one man must run a business. A business with more than one head is almost as monstrous as a man with more than one head."

A USEFUL REMEDY FOR CEILINGS.

To hold up cracked plaster ceilings, obtain a few boards from two to four feet long, and several others one inch shorter than the height of the room. The short boards are placed against the ceilings and the long boards are used to prop the cracked plaster back in place. This must be done carefully, and it is sometimes necessary to use a putty knife to clean the cracks so that the plaster will go back in place smoothly.

Make a number of countersunk holes and put a screw through each into the lath behind, sinking the screw head so that it will be well covered when the hole is filled. Use a patching plaster or plaster of paris to fill the holes and cracks. Do not remove the props until the plaster has set. A ceiling thus mended will last for years.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE ELEPHANT'S BRUISE.

A young man walked into a grocery store and asked for two dozen loaves of bread. The grocer looked surprised.

"Have you a dinner on?" he inquired.
"No," said the man. "I'm working at the zoo and the kangaroo has kicked the elephant, so I want to make a bread poultice."

The Truth About the Beauty-Baited Trap the Blackmailers Set for Sir Hari Singh

WHEN the celebrated case of "Mr. A" was in the English courts Judge Darling described Capt. J. C. Arthur, author of this series of articles, as the "biggest villain unchanged." The British authorities allege that he was the master mind of the bold plot to rob Sir Hari Singh, now the Maharajah of Kashmir and Jammu. Only last winter they had him arrested in Paris and unsuccessfully tried to extradite him to England.

But Capt. Arthur, Irishman and former officer in the British army, declares that he is innocent of these charges. He insists that the government is persecuting him for political reasons. In these pages from week to week he will present for the first time his side of the case and give what he maintains is the real truth—just why and how the blackmail trap was set and by whom.

Capt. Arthur was long the trusted friend and adviser of Sir Hari Singh. He accompanied him from India on his memorable European trip. He shared his magnificent luxury and had intimate knowledge of the way the rajah was continually menaced by the wiles of women and the plots of desperate men. All this makes what Capt. Arthur has to tell here a wonderfully thrilling narrative of love, mystery, intrigue and adventure.

as intended and the person to whom the gifts are offered, being ignorant of Eastern customs, takes the proffer literally and retains the articles. The giver, if he be a man of high station, is too proud or polite to show his surprise and chagrin, but the luckless offender soon comes to know that he has committed a terrible faux pas.

Before and after the shooting season there is the sightseeing. This is as much a delight to the visitors as the hunting itself, for there is no end of interest in the beautiful valley. There is no natural forest in the level lands, but all around on the mountain slopes there is a heavy tapestry of noble woods. In the valley are clumps and sentinel ranks of cultivated trees, the plane, poplar, willow, cypress and walnut and orchards of fruit trees.

In the spring the fields are ablaze with the bright orange colored colchicum and in autumn there are endless acres of saffron with its beautiful light purple flowers. Saffron is an anciently celebrated product of Kashmir and I am told was part of the annual tribute exacted by the Mogul emperors. No words could picture the glorious sight made by the growing crops set out in neatly ordered squares, shading from lightest green to richest gold and purple. The fields of different kinds of grain planted at varying periods throughout the year are a continual source of beauty and inspiration.

There is a large lake formed by a widening of the Jhelum at Srinagar and called the Dal and in this there are innumerable beds of flowering water plants and strangely beautiful floating gardens cultivated by the natives who place a shallow layer of rich soil on sheets formed of the great buoyant leaves of the water lilies. They plant these with vegetables or flowers with amazingly productive results.

To compare with the Scottish castles there are many historic buildings in the vale which are held in deep veneration. The most ancient of these, dating from two or three centuries before the Christian era, is the Temple of Shankar Acharya which is known as Solomon's throne, a name thought to have been adopted by the Mohammedan conquerors from that of the Rajah Sandhaman who repaired or rebuilt the structure. Most of the other Hindu buildings date from the fifth to the tenth century and they show a strong Greek influence in their architecture.

There is a temple of the sun at Matan which occupies a striking position on a natural terrace and commands a splendid view of the valley. Then there are the remains of four splendid temples at Avantipur. The temple of Bhuzo near Matan is built in a cave and the small temple of Payach on the crag of Naunagar consists only of six immense stones. There is another strange temple a short distance out of Srinagar called Andretan which has its floors below water a sort of tank.

The great palace of the maharajah is inside the ancient fort of Srinagar on the south side of the Jhelum. The old pleasure gardens of the Moguls where they were entertained by the numerous beautiful charmers of their zenanas are on the shores of Lake Dal and used still by the present day rulers. This city of Srinagar has a strange, exotic lure with its narrow crooked streets and the canals twisting among the tall and rickety houses and forming queer little water highways crossed here and there by tall arched wooden bridges. The buildings seem to lean toward each other overhead and to nearly meet.

After his rather disappointing stay at Douglas Castle I think that Sir Hari was considerably homesick for the scenic beauties of the Vale of Kashmir and its unexcelled hunting and that this was why he was so morose and petulant on the motor journey back to London.

As soon as we were well settled in Curzon Street again I quietly busied myself with pulling certain wires which I thought might help hasten the audience with King George which Sir Hari wanted and which might mean so much to his political ambitions. In the meantime the rajah busied himself with various social diversions into which I did not think there was any necessity for my inquiring too closely.

One day, however, he remarked to me that he had made a new feminine acquaintance who was proving unusually delightful. In reply to my inquiries as to who the lady was and how he had managed to meet her he showed me a letter bearing a fashionable West End address and signed "Lady K—." In this she described herself as the widow of a high official of the British government in India.

During her husband's lifetime she said she had often been entertained by the Maharajah

Mlle. Yvonne du Plessis, one of the stage beauties who served the rajah as dancing teachers and taught him all the latest steps.

of Kashmir and Jammu and now, hearing that his nephew was in London she sought the opportunity of showing him whatever hospitality she could. After several letters had been exchanged, they had met and the rajah, much impressed with her ladyship's beauty and charm and apparent genuineness, began seeing her with great regularity.

In her first letter it seemed to me that Lady K— had rather overdone matters and that the subsequent letters were altogether too gushing. Without telling Sir Hari what I was going to do I promptly went to see Sir James Dunlop Smith, secretary of the government of India, and asked him how much he could tell me about the lady in question.

What he knew about her, I found, would fill a volume—in fact it actually did fill a large dossier which was devoted exclusively to her career and which one of the clerks in Sir James' office produced at his request.

As this dossier revealed Lady K— was, as she said, the widow of a nobleman who had held an important post in the government of India and she was, just as Sir Hari so enthusiastically testified, a dazzling beauty. But her ladyship's good looks were, as the government had long since found out, only a mask to conceal an unscrupulous adventurer.

Since her husband's death she had lived mostly in London and had occupied herself with cultivating the acquaintance of rich visitors from India and sending them back home considerably poorer than they were when they arrived. The dossier which Sir James Dunlop Smith showed me contained the most positive evidence of numerous cases of blackmail and other swindles and in three of them the victims were Indian potentates who were close friends of Sir Hari Singh.

"She is a distinctly dangerous woman," said James, "and you must get Sir Hari out of her clutches immediately."

I went straight back to the rajah and told him frankly what I had found out and the not at all uncertain terms in which Sir James characterized Lady K—. Naturally enough Sir Hari was greatly shocked by my revelations and, to my intense relief, he seemed to believe them and promised to have nothing more to do with the dubious beauty. He showed every sign of being very grateful for the pains I had taken to prevent his being victimized as so many other of his countrymen had been. And yet, in spite of his apparent gratitude and sincere belief, he never confided in me again concerning any of the beauties in whom he became interested.

I later came to believe that this was the result of Ali Beg's influence over him. When Sir Hari told Ali Beg what I had done I suspect that the latter promptly cast doubts on the reliability of my information and added some comment like this:

"Ah, well, your highness, you can see what comes of taking Capt. Arthur into your confidence. He is almost as bad as the major in suspecting everybody of some evil purpose and wanting to deprive us of all the innocent pleasures of life."

A curious feature of our stay in London and one which it was hard for me to understand was the way supposedly reputable jewelers and other tradesmen tried to lure Sir Hari's interest in order to turn some of his patronage toward their establishments. Their previous experience with visitors from India had led them to believe that the surest way of attracting their interest was through pretty European women and they almost invariably tried to tempt Sir Hari with the offer of some striking young beauty as a dancing partner or dinner companion.

It happened to be in the drawing room with Sir Hari at the Curzon street house one evening when the elderly head of one of the best known jewelry firms in London found his way there. He was accompanied by a young woman with the face of an angel. While he expatiated on her charms and graces with all the frankness and enthusiasm of an auctioneer she stood coyly by his side with her opera cloak drawn tightly about her. The jeweler recommended her particularly for her grace and skill as a dancer and said that she would be delighted to be Sir Hari's partner whenever and wherever he pleased.

"Reveal more of your matchless beauty to His Highness," the jeweler at last cried with an impressive flourish of his arms and a courtly bow.

At this command his companion flung her cloak wide open and revealed a really exquisite figure, draped in a way that set off its artistic shapeliness to the best advantage in a fashionable evening gown that must have cost hundreds of dollars.

Whether it was because I happened to be present or for some other reason Sir Hari received the jeweler's offer with haughty coldness. He later admitted to me that the young woman who was offered to him as a bribe for his patronage of the jewelry store was one of the most beautiful he had ever laid eyes on. Nevertheless, he dismissed the avaricious jeweler and the young woman with great curtness.

Within a week after our return to London from Douglas castle a royal messenger brought Sir Hari the king's command to an audience at Buckingham palace. The command stated that the rajah would be escorted to the audience and presented to his majesty by Sir James Dunlop Smith, secretary of the government of India.

I was with Sir Hari when he received his royal command and I have never seen him lose his equanimity as he did on this occasion. For some unexplainable reason the assurance of the very audience he had come all the way from Kashmir to obtain threw him into a panic of nervous apprehension. The prince who was so accustomed to the glittering pomp of Oriental palaces actually shrank from the ordeal of an audience with King George. I have often wondered since the blackmailing of Sir Hari became known whether he feared that the king would confront him with some guilty incidents from his past.

JEFFERSONIAN IDEALS DECLARED IMPOSSIBLE

Thomas Jefferson could not apply his political doctrines of personal liberty and State rights to the United States of today.

Such is the conclusion of Mark Sullivan, the publicist and political interpreter, in an article on "Seeing America with Jefferson's Eyes" in the July World's Work. The complications of modern society, he finds, have forced us to repudiate Jefferson's ideals with the thousands of laws and prohibitions that now regulate the individual.

"Jefferson would be struck by the number of prohibitions in American life, the amount of regulation, the quantity of things forbidden," he writes. "The sum of them is recalled to us every year or two by the annual compilations of the several tens of thousands of new statutes written by the aggregate of Congress and the 48 legislatures. Even those totals are short of telling the story, because many of the regulations that bother us most come from city councils, or are written by the heads of police forces or by subordinated officials, under the authority they have to write what are called administrative regulations."

"Jefferson would be troubled by all this. If he should seek the explanation he would find it, not in any perverse change that came over the spirit of a people who, in the beginning, prized liberty and fought for freedom. He would find the explanation, rather, in the world of physical facts."

"Of the physical facts that Jefferson would be obliged to take into account, the first is one so simple that it is almost universally ignored; namely, increase of population. The immense increase in population in the United States, and the tendency of a large part of that population to crowd into large cities, accounts for a larger share of the quantity of law and regulation that have come to America than does any other one cause."

"In the country, in the rural districts of scattered population, there need be comparatively few prohibitions. But with cities, where men can not help bumping their elbows into each other, comes the necessity of individual consideration for the crowd."

"Next to increase of population and increased density of that population, comes increased velocity of the unit of population. Before the automobile came, the velocity of the individual was a walk or a run, or a horse's trot. The automobile brought potential speeds of 60 miles an hour, and frequently actual speeds of 40 miles an hour. Before the automobile there was scarcely any such thing as a traffic code. There was one rule: 'Keep to the right,' and that was enough. 'I am not sure but that the most conspicuous prohibition of all is directly related to the coming of the automobile. Henry Ford says so: 'When the automobile came, booze had to go.'"

"Less than 25 years ago, if a man should start to go the 40 miles of streets and roads between the center of Washington, D. C., and the center of Baltimore, for example, he would pass some 200 or 300 saloons. It is a reasonable query whether the most ardent resistor of national prohibition, the most convinced Jeffersonian, would care to make that 40-mile journey today in an automobile under the old conditions of alcoholic saturation."

"The one measurable success of American democracy in the last 50 years has been achieved by its willingness to get away from Jefferson. Its initiative and courage, in finding ways to adapt modern industry to democratic ideals of government."

CANNED MEATS ARE WHOLESOME.

At last there comes a ray of hope that the comic artist will have to abandon his time-worn joke about Mrs. Newlywed and the dinners she cooks with the can opener.

Dr. Walter H. Eddy astonished members of the New York State Medical society not long ago by declaring that the process of canning, instead of killing nutritive values in food, actually preserves them. He believes, says Popular Science Monthly, that the impression that canned foods are less healthful is based on a mistaken vitamin theory. For example, he says there is five times as much vitamin C in canned cabbage as in boiled fresh cabbage.

DREAMERS VICTIMS OF MEMORY LAPSE

Are you a dreamer? Do you find yourself staring continually far beyond the hard facts and responsibilities of the everyday grind—the bills, the family difficulties, a desk piled high with work, the maddening sameness of a drab existence? And does your tired mind seek relief by shutting out the details of the actual world about you and by conjuring up visions of a life so different that there seems no hope of bringing it about?

If so—if you grow to hate what you are doing and become a painter of fantasies, in your heart shirking the responsibilities which outwardly you shoulder—then some day, before you are aware of it, there is a chance that your weary nervous system may choose an astonishing way of taking a rest. In an instant you may lose your identity. Your humdrum life, your family, your friends, your memory of the past—all may be blotted out of your mind as completely as if they never had been. And you may wander away, counted as dead by the world you have known, to take your place as a new person in new surroundings.

Months or even years later you may "come to." In a flash all the memories of the first life may return, and you may awake again to your old personality.

Such is amnesia, one of the strangest and most baffling, yet one of the most interesting of all mental pranks known to man. It is defined simply as "loss of memory." Yet so mysteriously does it come and so odd are its effects in many cases, writes Edkin Ketchum in Popular Science Monthly for August, that physicians have been at a loss to trace its causes or to prescribe definite remedies. They have found, however, that very often its victims are dreamers. The more practical person, they say, seldom falls victim to the mental disturbance which every year causes hundreds of men and women to drop suddenly from sight as if the earth had swallowed them up.

The most common form of the ailment is known as hysterical or "dreamer's" amnesia, as distinguished from the serious form of epileptic amnesia, an organic disorder which sometimes results in criminal acts or suicide. Dr. Menas S. Gregory, noted authority on mental diseases at Bellevue hospital, New York city, declared recently that many cases of hysterical amnesia can be avoided simply by facing disagreeable facts and surroundings, instead of trying to escape them.

"For instance," he said, "if a man is unhappy in his home, but hasn't the moral courage to face the situation, he is the type likely to have amnesia. He lets the situation prey on his mind, not having the will power to set things right, and at the same time shirking the unpleasantness of telling his wife the truth, until his nervous system becomes so impaired as to bring about a mental break. He is a man accustomed to doing things in the easiest way, following the line of least resistance. Amnesia is his way of escaping reality. If he could face the situation squarely, the mental break would never happen."

EUROPE'S TRADE PROBLEM.

Hopeful signs of improvement in Europe's economic condition are seen by Basil Miles, American commissioner to the International Chamber of Commerce in Paris, in a review of the situation for the month, but as the business horizon clears, it brings into sharper outline the big general problem with which the continent will have to deal.

"As the general level of business is gradually raised," says Mr. Miles, "now here, now there, the new field of modern business comes feature by feature into view. When the level is stabilized, the grand problem will then appear in its true proportions: how can Europe with its 21 frontiers bristling with barriers to trade, compete as a whole with the uninterrupted field of production in the United States where 48 frontiers have been broken down and commerce travels back and forth on even terms over an area nearly as great as that of all Europe?"

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By Mabel Herbert Urner

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters.

Helen's hypocritical enthusiasm imposes an unexpected penalty.

"AND we get the sun in every room," Mrs. Martin angled for more praise.

"Yes, it's a wonderful apartment," enthused Helen for the nth time. "You're very fortunate."

"We think we are. The days I spent looking! And the rents in this neighborhood are prohibitive!"

"Yes, they must be," properly impressed.

"And such tiny rooms! We were almost ready to store everything and go to a hotel—when we found this. Don't you think we were fortunate, Mr. Curtis?"

Warren, talking to Mr. Martin, had not sufficiently enthused. But now at this, prod he contributed a laudatory.

"Yes, you've a nice place here. Good big rooms. What's the set-back, Martin?"

"Six thousand," preened Mrs. Martin, plainly proud of the figures.

"How many rooms? Eight? Over seven hundred a room," computed Warren. "Not so bad for this neighborhood."

"Pretty stiff rent. But we saw nothing that could touch it."

"Of course, we're not in shape yet," depreciated Mrs. Martin. "We've an extra bedroom to furnish. But I got some wonderful things at auction—the Winston suit, that Bokhara rug, and a fine old fiddle-back chair—I'm having that done over."

"I missed that sale," regretted Helen. Mrs. Stevens got a Dutch clock."

"Oh, I got a clock—an old banjo clock. But I think I paid too much for that. I haven't hung it yet—wait, I'll bring it in," rustling out.

A momentary respite. Helen leaned back. Nothing so exhausting as enthusing over a new apartment. And Mrs. Martin insatiably. Everything had to be repeatedly admired. When the encomiums were not sufficient she baited further superlatives with persistent "Don't you like it?" "Don't you think it's attractive?" "Weren't we fortunate to get it?"

AND her auction purchases! The rug, the chair—and now the clock. Helen recharged her enthusiasm.

"Oh yes, that's a very quaint one! I adore banjo clocks."

"I'm glad you like it. I thought I'd paid too much. Thirty-seven dollars."

"Why, I think that's awfully cheap," effused Helen dutifully.

"Do you really?"

"Why, yes, I wish I'd been there. I'd have bought it in a minute."

"Would you really?"

"I've always wanted a banjo clock. And this is a beauty! Only thirty-seven dollars? Why, I'd gladly have given more than that."

"Would you really? Then you can have it—just for what I paid."

"Oh, I—I didn't mean that," withdrawingly. "I wouldn't take it from you."

"That's quite all right," magnanimously. "I'm watching all the auctions now. We need so many things. I'll come across another."

"No, no, that's very kind," more flushed and flustered. "But you bought it for your bedroom—I wouldn't think of taking it."

"Why, I'd love for you to have it. You can take it with you," with clinching finality. "I'll get some paper."

Helen floundered for some excuse. But as always, when cornered, everything she said implicated her more.

A sardonic glance from Warren. He had heard! Could he—would he help her?

HER own fault—her over-enthusiasm. "Gushing," he would call it. But Mrs. Martin's praise-expectancy had led her on. Trying to seem properly appreciative, she always grew flustered and effused too much.

The old surge of bitterness at being penalized for her impulsiveness. Trying to be kind, to say the right thing. Just because she did not weigh her words. In some way, always she had to pay.

"And does Koko like his new home?" crudely changing the subject by petting the chow, now sniffing at the clock Mrs. Martin had laid on the chair.

"He loves it! More room to run. Go away, Koko, don't knock that off. That's Mrs. Curtis' clock now."

"No bother with batteries or tubes," Mr. Martin demonstrated to Warren the advantages of their wall radio. "Just plug in here—like a house telephone. The girl at the switchboard connects us—any station we want. Now, for instance, let's try WNT, and permanent wave is eligible for the contest. Just address your letters to the Hurrah Hair-dressers, Inc., care of—"

DEATH AT SEA

By BILL ADAMS.

When Shelberg died we were far south off the end of Staten island, and I was at her helm. It was gloomy though not a too dark night, a moon breaking now and again through the masses of cloud above the sea.

"He's gone, Billy," said Clegg, the second mate, coming to my side. "Let's toll the bell."

He took the lanyard of the bell in his hand and tolled the bell, its brazen clapper striking a lonely sound that echoed round us.

It was at eight bells of the following morning, eight o'clock, when the ship staggered under her six topsails, we bore the canvas hidden form of dead Shelberg aft to the quarter railing for his burial. I was one of those who bore the stretcher whereon he rested. Mad Kylon, his chum of Helmsing-fors, walked beside me. The ship was storm beaten, the sea lashing high above her rails. We clung to the lifelines, water waist-deep. Those who were not burdened with the stretcher whereon Shelberg lay so fast asleep so unconscious of the winter seas that roared above and under him, leaped to the shrouds to escape the swamping water. The bearers bore Shelberg on.

At the quarter-rail we paused, resting his feet on the railing top. The old man came out, bare of head, though we were one and all lashed up in oilskins, our heads half hidden in sou'westers. The mate was there, staring nervously aloft where the mizen-top-sail strained madly at its sheets, gale-bellied. The deck was lost in smother. The mast-heads reeled, lifting unsteadily against the clouds of the Horn. The wind was sleet-laden, bitter, crazed with hatred.

"Our Father, which art in Heaven," read the old man, from a small book in his hand, his other hand firm to a ladder stanchion. Clegg uncovered his head. The old man stopped his reading for a gray back sea.

A glare of static.

"WNT," shrugged Warren. "More like TNT."

"The Skinfo Soap Senneders have just completed their regular Friday evening program. Now the Chic Chewing Gum Girls will entertain us. Their first number will be—"

"By gum, not so bad," Warren chuckled at his strained pun.

"Very clear, isn't it? And never any fading. And no trouble with batteries. Isn't that worth something? We've got everything in this house. Wait till you see the swimming pool and gymnasium."

"And the most glorious roof garden exulted Mrs. Martin. "Don't you really think it's an exceptional house? Don't you think we were fortunate?"

"Oh, very, very," murmured Helen, unable to phrase a new adulation.

Then feeling she was not equal to any further felicitities, she tried vainly to flash Warren a time-to-gone glance.

"DEAR, it's after 10! And we've been up late every night this week," her stock excuse for an early departure.

crashing over the bulwarks to windward, swept many of us from our feet.

"Let go," said the old man, motioning to us, the stretcher bearers. Shelberg went to his rest.

"Take them upper topsails off her," said the old man.

A gloomy funeral morning upon a gloomy sea. The mate cried orders half heard in the uproar. Half-ropes rattled, ropes washing to and fro along the watery deck.—From Adventure Magazine.

RRREVENGE!

He walked into the bird and animal store and asked for the proprietor. "I want to place a rather large order and I'd like to know if you can handle it," he explained.

"I think we can take care of almost anything you put up to us," purred the bird and animal man. "What is it you want?"

"I want some cockroaches," said he. "Can you get me some?"

"Why, ah, why, I suppose—how many do you want?" stammered the storekeeper.

"Seventeen thousand, eight hundred and thirty-seven."

"Say, what are you trying to do, kid me or what?"

"No, I'm not," snapped the customer. "My lease says I must turn over my apartment to my landlord in the condition it was when I moved in. I'm going to see that that son of a gun gets it back just exactly that way."—From Everybody's Magazine for July.

TRANSFERABLE.

A Scotchman was taking a friend over a new home he had built.

"But," exclaimed the visitor, "I notice that you've not pasted the paper on the walls, but nailed it. What's that for?"

"Oh, aye," responded the Scotchman. "You see, we may not be living here always."—Good Hardware.

But they still had to see and exclaim over the ultraluxurious plumbing. Sunken baths. Built-in, glass-doored showers.

Then the pantry and kitchen—a symphony in blue and white. The last word in ranges. The newest type of electric refrigerator.

"All one solid piece of porcelain," Mrs. Martin opened the doors, exposing some alligator pears, cold chicken and a bowl of berries. "No seams. So easy to keep clean. And costs less to operate—two layers of wood and cork under this porcelain."

Again Helen marshaled her fulsome laudatory adjectives.

Finally out in the hall, hopefully she edged toward the door. But no—no escape yet.

The cedar-lined closets, with patent hangers, built-in drawers and shoe racks—still to be admired.

Another half hour before they reached the actual leave-taking stage.

"I'm so glad you like our apartment," purred Mrs. Martin. "I wish you'd take one here. You really ought to—the next vacancy. There's nothing to compare to it. We looked for weeks."

"Yes, it's all very wonderful," murmured Helen, too exhausted to vary that overtaxed phrase. "And we've enjoyed seeing it so much."

At the door now. If only they could escape without any further demands on their appreciation.

"Oh, your clock!" reminded Mrs. Martin. "You almost forgot it. On that chair, George. No, wait, I'll get it."

No chance to stop her. Nothing she could say. Helen stood helpless.

"Will this paper do?" wrapping it in rumpled, inadequate tissue. "You're going in a taxi? Oh, you needn't bother now! You can send a check any time."

Helen's flaming indignation blurred the final good-nights.

In the elevator, Warren tucked the package under his arm with a jeering.

"That's the time you got stung!"

She nudged him to silence. No comments before the boy.

Out in the street, Warren hailed a taxi that had just deposited a passenger.

"Well, that's one on you, all right," planting the clock in her lap as they whirled off.

"Why, she just forced it on me! You heard what I said. I didn't say a thing to—"

"Didn't eh? Gushed all over it. Said you were crazy for one. That you'd have paid a lot more. She thought she was doing you a favor."

"You know she didn't! She was sorry she bought it—she wanted to get rid of it."

"WELL, she did her stuff pretty neat. Called your bluff, all right. Always stives—that's your long suit. The way you buttered everything in that apartment."

"But I had to! She expected it. She kept—"

"Yes, she fished for it. Jove, she was persistent," lighting a cigar behind his cupped hand. "But you needn't have laid it on so thick. The way you raved over that clock—"

"I had to praise so many things I didn't care for—when she brought this out—Oh, look, the veneer chipped off!" examining it.

through the torn tissue. "And of course it doesn't run. These old clocks never do."

"Don't eh? What in blazes is a clock good for if it don't run? An ice cream freezer?"

And this back's all loose. Thirty-seven dollars—and I don't know what it'll cost to fix it up."

"Well, whatever it costs—be darn cheap if it'll tune your superlatives. The way you hand out flappoddlies! Spillin' all those blubs. Never say what you don't mean—that's a safe rule. Steer you clear of a lot of trouble."

"I didn't dream she'd try to sell it to me!" shielding it as they swerved a corner. "I just wanted to be polite—"

"Polite?" with a snort. "You can be polite without all that saccharine slush. The way you clapped on the 'wonderfuls.' Threw an ecstasy over everything she trotted out. No wonder she landed you with that clock."

"But, dear, I don't have to take it," flamingly rebellious. "Why can't I send it back?"

"Nothing doing! You're in for it now. She pulled a pretty raw act—but Martin's a decent sort. Don't want him to think we're pikers."

"But he saw the way she forced it on me. He heard what I said—"

"Well, that's all right, you be a sport. I'll cough up the thirty-seven. But next time soft pedal your glycerine gush! You can O. K. a thing without slobbering all over the place. If this'll cure you of that—be worth a blame sight more'n thirty-seven bucks!"

A FAWN A FEW DAYS OLD

Youth Must Be Served.

This is the month of worry and ceaseless activity for the mothers of the green forest and the green meadows and all the other haunts of the wild folk. They are hard days, these hot July days, for furred and feathered mothers alike. The young are out of the nursery. They are getting their first real lessons abroad in the great world. Birds as big as their parents still must be fed. Animals have passed from the helplessness of infancy to the period when young knows it all, yet knows nothing.

The other day I watched a starling searching for food in my back yard while two lusty youngsters fully as big as their mother followed her about ready to snatch each mouthful of food which she found. The poor mother looked tired and distressed, but her patience was a thing to admire. As if it were not enough to be forced to hunt for food for those big youngsters, this mother starling was the victim of an impudent English sparrow. This sparrow hopped along side by side with one of the young starlings behind the mother. Miss Starling found a choice morsel. Before she could turn her head to pass it to one of her children that sparrow shot forward and snatched it out of her bill. This thing happened not once, but half a dozen times while I watched.

The hazard of life is very great at this period of adolescence. The mother duck with her nestful of eggs has to keep the secret of her treasures. That is her one and only source of worry. With the hatching of her eggs her worries are multiplied by precisely the number of eggs that hatch. No longer may her treasures be hidden. For weeks those young ducks will be a never-ending source of anxiety by day and night. Until they can get the use of their wings they are dependent almost absolutely on her watchfulness, guidance and self-sacrifice.

The dainty fawn in the woods is beyond the stage of helplessness. When lying flat on the ground motionless it was by means of its spotted coat so perfectly camouflaged that it would be discovered only by chance. The coat is still spotted, but its value as camouflage has been discounted by time. It has learned the use of its legs. It has learned to jump, and also, alas! it has learned curiosity. So are the mother's worries multiplied, as she seeks to teach the necessary lessons that shall result in a survival of the fittest.

Downy but Not Handsome.

In the minds of most folk there appears to be more or less mystery about the young of certain species of birds. The nesting of the turkey buzzard, or, more properly speaking, turkey vulture, appears to be something comparatively few know about. I have repeatedly heard expressions of surprise when I have casually mentioned that this big bird does not build a nest in a tree, but that its unsavory smelling home is usually in a cave, or in an old, hollow stump, or possibly on the bare ground. Like the young of other birds of prey (strictly speaking, the vulture is not a bird of prey), the infant vulture is covered with a thick coat of down, and this coat of down he continues to wear until even after his wings are feathered out. The downy chick of the grouse is a dainty little thing, but there is nothing dainty about the downy young of the vulture. It is as unprepossessing in youth as in maturity.

A Satisfactory Fourth.

William J. Luther contributes the following pleasant Fourth of July experience, and incidentally gives us a glimpse of the methods whereby the young of the wild are taught. "We were paddling down a river," says he, "when, rounding a bend, we surprised a female black duck with a flock of young in the middle of their stream. The ducklings could not yet fly. The mother promptly swam over just in front of the canoe and tried to draw us away from the little fellows while they swam toward the bank. It didn't seem possible that they could disappear as quickly as they did. "Paddling inshore, we looked long and carefully. Finally we found the ducklings right up against the black earth of the bank. They were stretched out and motionless, except for the blinking of their little black eyes. So near the color of the earth were they that it was almost impossible to see them. We watched them for some time. Finally I reached over to see how close they would allow my hand to approach, when all acknowledged their discovery by scrambling away up stream back of the canoe. Meanwhile Mother Duck had been flying low and employing every artifice to divert our attention. It was the most satisfactory Fourth of July experience I have ever had."

The Toad That Sympathized With Jonah.

The following story is vouched for as the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. A toad—a common hoptoad—had taken up his abode under the doorstep and had become something of a pet with the mistress of the home. In fact, she had become distinctly fond of the toad. One day a neighbor called to her and told her there was a snake out in her yard. She went to investigate, and there, sure enough, she found a rather thick-set snake between 2 and 3 feet long. She noticed at once a rather conspicuous bulge in the neck and a horrifying thought came to her. "I do believe that horrid snake has swallowed my toad!" she cried. Asking the neighbor to watch the snake, she rushed for something to dispatch it with. She found a spade, killed him and cut him open just back of the bulge. Sure enough, there was the toad! He winked and blinked, gasped a bit, and then hopped away, apparently none the worse for his Jonah-like experience.

DOWNY YOUNG TURKEY VULTURE

IS IT WORTH WHILE GROWING UP? MALLARD DUCKLING.

It always has seemed to me that one of the most awful things possible would be to be buried alive. If there could be anything worse, it would be to be swallowed alive. What a pity that toad could not have been interviewed!

This Comes From Connecticut.

Here is a new one from the nutmeg State. The one who told it to me vouches for the truth of it. "I have often heard my mother tell of one time losing good-sized chicks in a mysterious way," says he. "The blood was sucked from them on the back near the wings, but what was doing it they didn't know. At last one night they heard the chickens making a racket and, rushing out, found several drying and a very large bullfrog sucking the blood from them on the back near the wings. What a pity that toad could not have been interviewed!"

A Naturalist's Question Box.

James A. Ackworth asks if there is such a thing as a species of white Lady's Slipper or Moccasin Flower, corresponding in everything but color to the pink Lady's Slipper.

No. There is a white species of Lady's Slipper, but in character it varies considerably from the pink. Probably you have found an albino specimen of the pink Lady's Slipper. I have found these in Maine.

"Does any snake except the rattlesnake rattle?" I have heard what sounded like a rattle, but the snake which appeared to have made the noise proved to have no rattles on the tail," says Mrs. Mary O. Brown.

Several snakes will vibrate the tail very rapidly when excited while coiled. If they happen to be coiled in dead leaves this vibrating tail will produce a very good imitation of the rattlesnake's warning.

"What is the difference between the Scarlet Tanager and the so-called Red Bird?" asks Nellies E. Underwood.

The male Scarlet Tanager has black wings and a black tail. The so-called Red Bird is the Cardinal Grosbeak. The only black on it is around the face. The Tanager's head is smooth. The Cardinal's head is crested.

TALES OF REAL DOGS By Albert Payson Terhune

GENGISK, THE DOG THAT SAVED A KING.

IN the beautiful gardens of the royal palace Sans Souci, the favorite abode of Frederick the Great, king of Prussia, stands (or stood) an elaborate monument erected by the monarch to mark the burial place of his dog, Gengisk.

It was not mere sentiment which led the grim old warrior-king to put this stone over the grave of a dog. For Gengisk had saved Frederick's life and liberty and perhaps had thus helped to change the history of Europe. Here is the story:

Frederick was at war with Russia. He had lifted the Prussian kingdom from its somewhat low position and had made it one of the great powers of Europe. All this Frederick had done through his own genius. Had he died or been lost taken prisoner by any of his various enemies, his newly-raised kingdom might well have crumbled back into mediocrity and the future of all Europe might have been altered.

On every campaign, Frederick was accompanied by his Great Dane dog, Gengisk, a powerful and gigantic brute that was utterly devoted to his royal master and was gifted with a queer psychic sense which warned him when Frederick was in danger.

Frederick used to play with Gengisk in rough, romping fashion that scandalized his stuffy dignified court. He nursed the dog personally through several illnesses. A foreign emissary was sent once to see the king and to report to his enemies what Frederick was doing. The emissary returned with the report that he had found the king sitting on the floor of his throne room feeding his dog from a tin basin of beef bones. But Gengisk repaid well this royal favor, as you shall see.

It was during his war with Russia that Frederick was riding along a strip of deserted ground, on his way from one division of his army to another. He was playing a "surprise visit" of inspection to this second army, and he was riding alone, except for Gengisk.

The great Dane cantered along beside the king's horse, and was the monarch's only guard and escort on the long and lonely ride. Scouts had reported that the enemy were many miles away. There seemed no need for an armed body of men to accompany Frederick on his inspection trip.

As Frederick was near the edge of a stream that ran through a bit of woodland, Gengisk halted, sniffing the air. Then suddenly the huge dog dashed to the head of Frederick's horse, and nipped at the steed's nostrils and chest, striving frantically to bring him to a standstill.

The horse merely shied and continued his journey. Flung he could not stop the charger, Gengisk leaped up at the king, driving his curved fangs into Frederick's thick riding boots and seeking to drag him from the saddle.

A lesser man, or a man who knew less of dogs, might readily have kicked Gengisk aside and have kept on. But Frederick had had experience with the great Dane's odd psychic premonitions. So, instead of kicking or lashing the dog, he brought his horse to a halt and dismounted.

At once, Gengisk ceased to snap and leap at him, and stood stock still. The king looked about him, but could see nothing to account for Gengisk's strange behavior. He turned, as if to remount his horse. Instantly the dog barred his way, shivering in a fever of eagerness.

The king knelt down, with his ear to the ground. Faintly he could hear the distant thud of hundreds of horses' hoofs. A cosack raiding party was coming directly toward him, hidden from sight by the intervening woods.

Should they catch a glimpse of him, he must inevitably be captured or killed. His horse was tired and he could not hope to escape. Leading the weary steed, Frederick hurried to the edge of the stream and took refuge under one of the bridge's arches, in a thicket of undergrowth.

A minute or two later, the Cosacks came riding over the bridge above his head. The Great Dane growled. Frederick gripped the dog's mighty jaws between his own hands to keep Gengisk silent, until the last of the riders had passed on.

Some time later, at the battle of Soor, Frederick's camp fell into the hands of the Russians. The king had left Gengisk in the royal tent when he himself went forth to the field. Thus, the great dog was captured. Every one had heard of Gengisk and of Frederick's devotion to him and of the odd way in which he had warned the unguarded monarch of the approach of the Cosack raiding party. So, instead of shooting the dog, his captors carried him to Russian headquarters.

There he was given to Gen. Nodosti, who in turn gave the magnificent brute to his wife as one of the precious spoils of war. There was talk of holding Gengisk as a hostage, or of exchanging him for some imprisoned Russian of high rank. For a time the dog became one of the important pawns in the iron game of war and statecraft.

But the Russian general, Rotherberg, intervened. Either through diplomacy or because he also was a dogman, he sent Gengisk back to Frederick. The Prussian king was pacing his study at Sans Souci when Gengisk was brought to him.

The dog leaped upon his master, licking the monarch's face and making the room re-echo with his barks of joy. Frederick broke down and wept like a child whose lost pet is restored. From that time on, until Gengisk's death, the dog and his master were never again separated for a single week.

The tomb in the Sans Souci gardens marked not only the grief of Frederick the Great at the loss of his canine chum, but his gratitude for the wise service done him by the dog in saving him from the Cosack raiders. (Copyright, 1926, by the McNaught Syndicate.)

RIGHT AND WRONG FOR BATHING

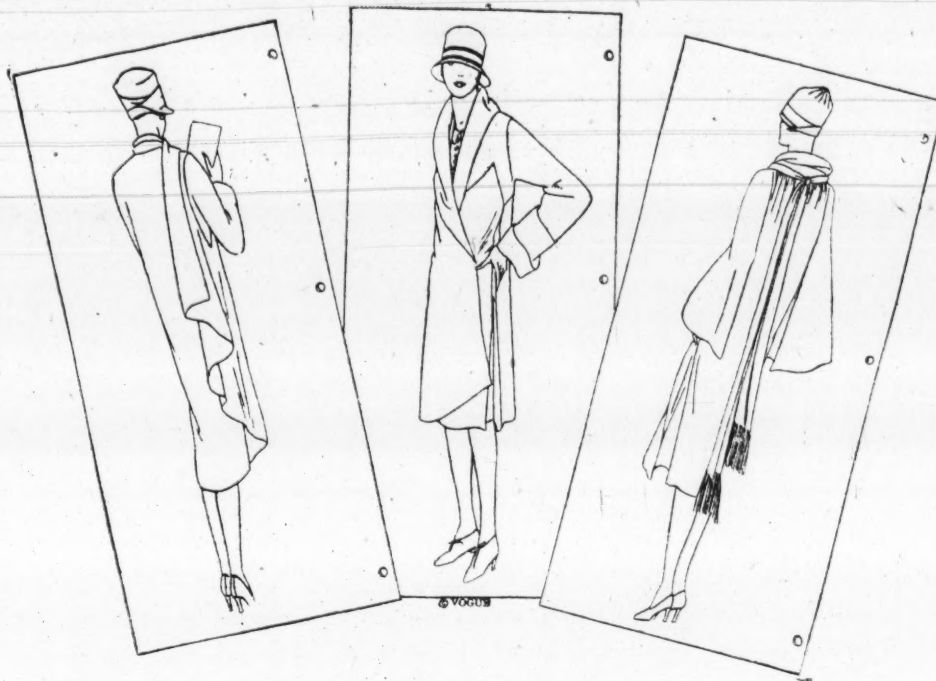

What are the wild waves saying? They're whispering, "Keep her out—keep her out—keep her out!"

Verba—at the right—had heard that this some-painting had produced things that would wash. So she painted white satin in scarlet. She made a black satin bathing suit, to which she added the painted panel. As this was a bit long, her skirt is long, too. As she hadn't much black satin left, her trunks are too tight. Her sleeves are too short to keep her arms from sunburning, too long to keep her chic alive. Her shoes—oh, Verba, don't you know they'll slip when you get in the water? And your green rubber cap with the rose rubber flower is an insult even to the brain beneath it—which is saying as much as any one could.

Lois, at the left, however, will make the ocean purr—to say nothing of the vagrant camera man for the rotogravure section. Black taffeta over black jersey trunks. A terry-cloth bathrobe, printed in red, green and beige. A simple rubber cap and sand shoes—both red to match the red in her print. Yet she isn't expensively dressed. She never is. But she has that marvelous, indefinable, infinitely valuable instinct known as "clothes sense."

THE CONVERSATIONS OF CLARIBEL

Dearest Eve—

The mode gets brilliant and brilliant—varied and varied! I love the way everybody works in two colors, or three colors. You have to be subtle to be chic—but it's so much more fun planning clothes than it was when everything had to match.

Take the coat at the left—at least I'd like to. It's green kasha lined with gray, and the woman who wore it had a green felt hat and gray lizard shoes and bag. Look at the interesting cut; the wide front falls over the back in a sort of toga line. I walked around her three times till I got it all worked out. You see there's a slit in the front and the arm goes through it.

The woman at the right was stunning—all black outside except the lining of her coat, which was chanel-red to match her dress. Black crepe for the coat, with two short capes on the sides to give a sleeve effect. Long bow ending in black fringe. Hat with the high pinched crown—so smart.

In the middle is me myself—quite demure after the other two. Just a beige kasha coat with an interesting sort of cut and a deep double cuff. Beige hat with brown and beige bands. Brown shoes.

As ever,

SEWING MADE EASY

These new tucks that are made on the inside are such an excellent way of managing fullness. See how the dress in the sketch has around the hips with just the right snugness and blouses smartly above. It's in moss-green crepe Elizabeth, and its owner wears a hat in natural Bengal straw with bands of green and black. Her shoes are made of green carved crystals. Her shoes are of beige kid and snakeskin.

She hunted for just such a dress ready made in the shops, but the trouble was that they didn't fit; the tucks were taken for five pounds more or less in every one she tried on. So she made the dress herself, and then those tucks turned out to be adjustable, because she basted them in first.

The neck-line may be picketed or bound, and there is the same choice of methods in finishing the tie, which is attached to the frock under a tuck. Even the hem may be picketed, if you're sure you won't want to wear it again next year and let it down.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Harriet Lane and Henry Elliott Johnston.

By ELISABETH ELLICOTT POE.

IN the golden rosary of notable American women who have graced the White House as first ladies of the land, the record of none shine out with more enduring beauty than the memory of Harriet Lane Johnston, niece of President James Buchanan who acted as his hostess throughout his administration and who lived in Washington until her death, a few years ago.

Harriet Lane was of the type that all women love and all men admire. She was a woman's woman, gentle and considerate with her own sex, far above the petty meanness of envy, malice or unkindness. Her beauty was most unusual. Of high color, her hair was of a golden brown worn with classic simplicity on a well-shaped head. Her eyes were of the deepest violet and her mouth a veritable cupid's bow. Rather short in stature, she was well proportioned and maintained almost to the end of her life erectness of figure. One striking feature was her beautiful hands with long artistic fingers and slender wrists.

Possessed of a strong constitution and abundance of good health, a youthful exuberance added to her natural joyousness of nature; however, was held in restraint by a dignity which, never forsook her and enabled her while still a young girl, to maintain all the traditions of the White House quite as well as an older woman might have done.

A contemporary writer speaking of this period of her life says of Harriet Lane: "Every motion was instinct with life, health and intelligence. Her head and features were cast in noble mould, and her form, which, at rest, had something of the massive majesty of a marble pillar, in motion, was instinct alike with power and grace."

It has frequently been said that no woman has ever presided over the White House who roused so universal an interest, as did Mrs. Cleveland, as did Buchanan's niece. Her youth appealed to the sentiment that is so dominant in the American character. Every move she made was of interest to the people generally. In her day, the newspapers had not developed to the point of giving in detail social happenings, but such meager items as were published were eagerly read and treasured in the scrapbooks that flourished in that simpler period. Her countrymen honored her in every conceivable way and her name was a household word.

Vessels of war and of peace bore it to foreign shores. Romance clung around it, for it was whispered that during her uncle's service as Minister to the court of St. James her hand had been sought by many titled suitors. Clubs, streets, houses and even articles of dress were named for her and every distinction of dress she adopted was immediately seized upon by watching American women and sprung into instant popularity.

It is an open secret that Harriet Lane could have married whom she pleased, suitors crowded around the White House while she was its mistress like bees around a honey pot. Titled diplomats, men of great wealth, statesmen, members of Congress all clamored for a chance to win her regard. But her heart was steadfast to the one love of her life, Henry Elliott Johnston, a Baltimore gentleman of standing and culture.

Her romance with the Marylander is one of the prettiest in American history. Its pathetic ending and short duration only throw into high relief the unusual grace of this union of two loving hearts who snatched at happiness together thinking it could survive even the fierce light that beats upon the great. Sometimes in those latter days when as Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston she sat in her beautiful home in the fashionable northwest, Mrs. Johnston would live again the historic hours of her girlhood and young married life. One of the few grand dames remaining in Washington society to the very end of her life was an inspiration of good breeding, culture and refinement. Passionately devoted to music throughout her life she left a very constructive monument to her memory in furthering her beloved art by establishing the National Cathedral Choir School for boys where the singers of the great cathedral were to be given not only a musical education, but preparation for their part in the world's work as well.

The best blood in America tracing back to sturdy Scotch-Irish and English lines ran in the veins of Harriet Lane. The first James Buchanan, her grandfather, was an intrepid emigrant from the north of Ireland who came to America in 1783, just a little too late to participate in the War of the Revolution. He joined a settlement of Scotch-Irish near Mercersburg, in Franklin county, Pa., and set out to carve fame and fortune out of his new adventure. After five years his susceptible Irish heart fell captive to the charms of one Elizabeth Speer, the daughter of a substantial farmer, a woman of strong intellect and deep piety. The oldest child of this marriage was James, afterwards President of the United States.

THE second child of this marriage was Jane, the favorite sister of the President to be and his playmate in youth. By the time she had grown to woman's estate James Buchanan, Sr., had acquired quite a considerable fortune as a trader. A frequent visitor at the Buchanan home was one Elliott T. Lane, a merchant largely engaged in the lucrative trade at that time carried on between the East and the West by the great highway that passed through Franklin county. Mr. Lane was descended from an old and aristocratic English family whose sons had settled in Virginia about the time of the Revolution and he was related to many of the first families of the Old Dominion. His suit for the hand of the vivacious Jane was crowned with success. They were married and a sheaf of little Lanes followed their marriage. Harriet was their youngest child, and history records that she inherited the vivacity of her mother, was a mischievous child, overflowing with health and good humor. It was said of her when a mere infant, "She never told a lie. She had a soul above deceit and fraud. She was too proud for it."

At an early age little Harriet formed a deep attachment for her grandfather, James Buchanan, Sr. His august presence and charming talk, his romantic life stretching from his arrival in America, a poor boy, to his present position as first citizen of Lancaster, Pa., made a deep impression upon her childish mind. He visualized for her the romance of industry and America in one and the imaginative child never forgot his sage counsel.

Sorrow soon struck at the happy family circle. The mother of the household died when Harriet was but 7 years old. Two years later sturdy Elliott Lane followed her. Harriet was left one of several orphans, lonely and desolate save that a comfortable inheritance was hers. Many of her kinsfolk clamored for the attractive child, but Harriet had a will of her own even at 9 and she decided to pick out her foster parent for herself. After surveying the circle of family aspirants she decided to "adopt" her uncle James, then a United States senator, having but recently returned from Russia, where he had negotiated our first commercial treaty with that country. He was a bachelor but possessed a beautiful old home, Wheatland, a roomy, old brick house with ample grounds, on East King street in Lancaster, one of the old colonial towns of Pennsylvania.

HISTORY does not record the dismay this quiet, bachelor soul must have felt at the invasion of his territory by such a lively bit of budding womanhood. Yet he accepted the child's trust and confidence and consented to be "adopted."

We can picture the scene when the little girl entered his sacred habitat. The kind servants soon fell captive to her charm, her first conquests, as it were, and soon adored their young mistress. Senator Buchanan, when he returned from Washington for the recesses of Congress soon had his home in admirable order, all working serenely and the good fairy of his household his 10-year-old niece. As guide, philosopher and friend to the orphan girl their interests grew more and more in common and happiness crept into his lonely heart.

Harriet, however, was of independent spirit, fun loving, and if the truth must be told, something of a tomboy. She attended a day school in Lancaster, where she was chiefly distinguished as a trick-playing romp and a leader in school mischief.

The story is told that Senator Buchanan once glanced from his study window and saw Harriet with flushed cheeks, flowing hair and hat all awry trundling along in great haste a wheelbarrow full of wood. Upon his rushing out to inquire into the cause of such an unseemly and undignified proceeding, she answered that poor, old black Aunt Tabitha was very cold and she was taking her some fuel.

BEAUTY AND YOU

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE COMB.

By VIOLA PARIS.

Many women seem to think a brush is all one needs to keep hair in good condition, forgetting that without its partner, the comb, the brush is of little use. But the comb has to be a good comb; it must be used correctly; and it must be kept clean.

A good comb has blunt teeth, to prevent scalp irritation. Moreover, it has smooth teeth, to keep it from catching the hair. It must have both wide and fine teeth, or, better still, it should be a wide-toothed comb to free the hair from tangles, and a fine-toothed comb for a variety of special services where wide teeth won't suffice.

Taking the tangles out isn't such a difficult matter with short hair, but, for those whose hair is still long, it must be done correctly, or the hair will suffer—and it very seldom is. The hair should be held near the roots by the left hand while the right hand does the combing, beginning toward the ends of the hair, and going downward, then taking a second position above this and combing the ends, rising in this way, little by little till all tangles have disappeared.

The hair should be brushed till it is quite smooth. Then it should be parted in strands, the brush should be held firmly by the back (not the handle), brushing with a brisk stroke outward at the front and sides and from the nape of the neck over the head at the back. Women who don't understand this trick—and, unfortunately, this includes a great many hairdressers—will drag the brush through the hair haphazardly, straining the roots and pulling a good deal of hair out at the same time. If the hair has a natural wave, but the brush is allowed to pull it and go against the wave, it may eventually become straight. A good deal of so-called falling hair, too, is due simply to a clumsy use of the brush.

Now that the tangles are out and the hair has been brushed, both brush and wide-toothed comb are laid aside in favor of the comb with fine teeth. No bang can be dealt with successfully without the fine-toothed comb, nor could the owner of a permanent wave hope to keep her hard-earned curl without it. The short curved combs with fine teeth, used in water-waving hair that curls naturally, are employed at night to train a permanent wave and prevent its kinking, but during the day, one may dampen an ordinary fine-toothed comb and pull the waves into place every time the hair is dressed. The

PERHAPS it was this scene that made Senator Buchanan place Harriet when he next left for Washington in the care of two elderly ladies whose spinster souls could not comprehend the carefree and merry spirit of Harriet Lane. The winter was one of new terrors, for the dear old ladies inflicted all manner of minor punishments for infractions of their rules upon the high-spirited child. Her letters to James Buchanan during this period are a series of appeals to be relieved from the care of her guardians. Her pleas were effective in so far that next September when he left for Washington again Harriet went with him en route to Charleston, W. Va., where, with her sister Mary, she entered a select boarding school. That Harriet was still mischief-loving and got into schoolgirl scrapes is shown in a letter from Buchanan to his niece, in which he writes: "Had Mary written me that you were a good girl and had behaved yourself entirely—well, I should have visited you during the Christmas holidays."

Shortly after this Buchanan became Secretary of State under President Polk. It was while in this position he took Harriet and her sister Mary to Bedford Springs, popular watering place of the period, where Harriet met for the first time handsome Henry Elliott Johnston, a cavalier from Baltimore. She was very young—not much more than 15. Their friendship was summer's romance, then they separated. Johnston returned to his law studies in Baltimore and Harriet to enter the Convent of the Visitation in Washington at quaint old Georgetown, where she remained for three years and whence she was graduated with much distinction.

Once a month on Sunday she spent at her uncle's home on F street, there catching her first glimpse of that world of which she was later to form a part. His home was frequented by the most illustrious men of the day, and when after graduating Harriet spent a winter there she came into contact with official and social Washington without the bother of making a formal debut. However, the memory of young Henry Johnston was still with her and much to her uncle's surprise she withdrew the next year from the Capital life and spent it quietly with relatives in Pennsylvania.

It has been said that no American woman ever had more offers of marriage than Harriet Lane, and even now, although she was still less than 18, suitors had already begun to present themselves. Her uncle, writing to her, said: "I wish now to give you a caution; never allow your affections to become interested, or engage yourself to any person, without my previous advice. You ought never to marry any person who is not able to afford you a decent and immediate support. In my experience I have witnessed the long years of patient misery and dependence which fine women have endured from rushing precipitately into matrimonial connections without sufficient reflection. Look ahead and consider the future and act wisely in this particular."

With the incoming of Taylor's administration Buchanan retired to Wheatland, where he remained for four years, his vivacious niece with him. Every summer they went to Bedford Springs and there again met the Johnston family, and young Henry, now a junior partner in a Baltimore law firm, renewed his suit. But in vain as yet. Her uncle was her one absorbing love.

IN 1852 Buchanan became Minister to England and took Harriet to London with him. The beautiful American so favorably impressed Queen Victoria that on state occasions she was assigned to places usually given only to the wives of Ambassadors and Ministers. At Oxford university one day her uncle was given the degree of doctor of civil laws, and the ancient walls rang with cheers from the students who rose en masse to greet the entrance of Harriet Lane, the toast of England. But she cared nothing for the young English aristocrats. Such thoughts as she could spare from her uncle were on a certain Baltimore beau vivant who sighed in vain for his lady across the seas.

The death of her sister, consequent return to America and her uncle's nomination and election to the Presidency were milestones along her path within the next two years. Her uncle was President! And she, not yet 21, was to be mistress of the White House, an onerous task for one so young, but one which James Buchanan now felt she was capable of filling.

At the Buchanan inaugural ball one of the prettiest sights there was the President's young niece leaning on his arm, clad, as best became her noble form, in the simplicity of a white dress, flower trimmed, and with a necklace of pearls. The town went wild over her. Her name was on all tongues and it began the Buchanan administration with a nationwide wave of good feeling.

Harriet Lane made no mistakes as mistress of the White House. She had been trained to her position, and this fact was strikingly portrayed when, in 1860, H. R. H. Edward Prince of Wales, afterward Edward the Seventh of England, came as a guest of the nation to Washington and stayed five days at the White House.

The memory of the historic fetes which centered about the royal visitor still lingers in Washington and was revived during the more recent visit of another Prince of Wales in 1920—Edward Prince of Wales, grandson of the other visitor. The imagination of the people was fired by the two central figures of the pageant being enacted at the White House, Harriet Lane, a princess of the American people, and Edward, a prince of the British people. It was an open secret that all America longed for a romance to bud. But no, Harriet Lane was still true to her boy friend of Bedford Springs, although she had not seen him for several years and their paths in the world now seemed widely separated.

KING EDWARD never forgot Harriet Lane. Brances came to her from overseas of the esteem in which she was held by the British royal house. When the king came into his own on the death of Victoria it is said that to the gracious old lady in Washington came a royal invitation to witness his coronation. Her health did not permit, but we may be sure no more sincere congratulations went to him than those penned by the woman who had been his hostess in their far-away youth.

At the completion of his term, Buchanan withdrew to Wheatland, leaving the White House and the shadows of war to the tragic Lincoln. Harriet Lane still continued as mistress of her uncle's home, Wheatland. Love, so long held off, grew insistent and Henry Elliott Johnston now paid a second court. He wanted her to forget official life and be the queen of his home. Harriet Lane soon found she loved him, loved him dearly, and after three years' courtship she finally consented.

So in January, 1866, she was married to Henry Elliott Johnston, by her uncle, the Rev. Edward V. Buchanan, an Episcopal minister. The honeymoon days were spent in Cuba, after which Henry Johnston took her to a beautiful home in Baltimore. There she was a social leader for many years. James Buchanan died in 1868, leaving her Wheatland, where she passed many summers.

Eighteen idyllic years were spent with Henry Elliott Johnston in married happiness. Then he died, leaving her listless, for death had robbed her of both her sons a short time before. These boys, James Buchanan Johnston, 14, and Henry Elliott Johnston, 12, had been the light of the Johnston household. It is in their memory that Mrs. Johnston established the Washington Cathedral Choir school, in memory of their sweet voices, both of whom inherited her musical genius.

In 1892 Mrs. Johnston came again to Washington, the scene of so much grandeur and so much honor to her. She lived here, serenely surrounded not only by life's comforts, but its elegances as well, old friends and new about her, quietly interested in good works, and to the end an interesting and picturesque figure of the Capital's official and social life.

LITERAL.

Deacon White had been pacing the station platform for twenty minutes. Rather hot under the collar, he went back to the ticket window.

"I thought you said the noon local was on time today," he roared at the station master's youthful assistant.

"Well, she were," replied the latter. "Went through here right on the dot, 'bout three minutes afore you come in and 'ast me!'"

The Misericord

By William Merriam Rouse

LOVE is an adventure, and the man who is daunted by the hazard cannot hope to win, or even hold the treasure once won. Women instinctively feel the steel of daring in a man's character, and when the time for the test comes she rarely falters or hesitates to make her choice. Margaret Cragg was called upon to end the conflict between the right of possession and the right of love, and on the knight who was not daunted fell her choice.

MARGARET Cragg stepped out upon the balcony that circled the living room and smiled at greeting down upon Christopher Howland. He rose from the depths of a tapestried chair in front of the fire. In the soft glow of light her black hair was misty dusk and her eyes two stars. It was at this moment that Howland realized that she looked more beautiful to him than another man's wife should.

As she came down the spiral stairway, Lyman Cragg, her husband and Howland's host, entered from the library—tall, handsome, suave Lyman Cragg, antiquarian by avocation and possessor of great inherited wealth. Mechanically Howland bowed to his host, and mechanically he took the hand of his host. The new idea had half-stunned him, and he found himself replying to their greeting with sentences which, considering his intimate acquaintance with the Craggs, were banal.

"Why, Christopher?" exclaimed Margaret. "What's happened to you? You're as formal as an ambassador at a state court."

For the first time in his life Howland's soul was frightened. He did not dare to look into her eyes. He snapped his shoulders back.

Howland was an artist, but he looked more like an army man than a wielder of little brushes within doors. His exceedingly short hair and his capable jaw invariably brought a look of disappointment when new people learned who he was.

Just now Cragg helped him out of his rigidity with a laugh and a movement toward the fireplace that broke up the stiffness of the group.

"You've been working too hard, he said. 'Isn't that likely. I worked as long as there was light.'"

"He's been in the fifteenth century," said Cragg, turning to his wife with a smile, "and he hasn't come out of it yet."

"Come back to New York now and play with us," pleaded Margaret. "Life is pleasant, I think."

"It's much the same," murmured Howland, "with a different setting. The same loves and hates—the same struggles—"

"The same, certainly," agreed Cragg. "The moving forces are inevitably the same. That's why one is able to live with Tiglathpileser in Assyria—with Lorenzo de Medici in Florence—"

"Or with the Chevalier Bayard in France, where Christopher has his days now!" cried Margaret Cragg.

"What are you doing now?" she asked. "You know I'm following the chronicle with you."

"The duel with Don Alonso de Sotomayor," replied Howland. "That's why I telephoned to ask if I might come tonight. I need a dagger, and I think Lyman has one of the right sort."

"Ah, yes, a duel!" Cragg became keen at the mention of something that touched his passion. "I think I have exactly what you want; but tell me about it. It's a long time since I read the joyous adventures of the Bayard."

"The fight on foot, with rapiers," said Howland. "Bayard delivered a blow that mortally wounded Sotomayor. The chronicle says that despite his good fortune, the rapier entered his throat four good fingerbreadths. Then Sotomayor closed in and seized the Good Knight around the body. Bayard thrust his dagger into his enemy's nostrils, and cried: 'Yield thee, Senor Alonso, or thou die!'"

"It's a dagger that would be used under such circumstances that I want to see. Of course, it must be the right thing."

"The misericord," exclaimed Cragg. "A weapon with a thin and very sharp blade about fifteen inches long. It was named from its use, which was to end the suffering of a fallen enemy. It was for the thrust of mercy, the coup de grace. But come, Howland! Those daggers—I have two of them, by the way—are in the library."

He walked quickly to the doorway and drew back the hangings for his wife to pass. Christopher Howland looked at him with a new interest. Howland liked this antithetical person, who was alternately clubman and antiquarian, although he had never felt the closeness of friendship which might have developed with another man under similar circumstances. Perhaps it was because he had never been able to tell whether the possibility of real emotion lay under the well-rehearsed exterior of Lyman Cragg's exterior so polished that at times it seemed to present a hard and unyielding surface.

In the library Cragg had placed a chair for Margaret. She sat with a faint and delicate smile for Howland, her exquisite arms resting upon the dull mahogany of the big table that stood in the corner of the room.

Howland had become acquainted with the Craggs six months before, at a time when he needed to make a drawing of a piece of shoulder armor, the great kardebras. Cragg possessed one of the finest pieces in the country, and a mutual friend at the Metropolitan Museum had given Howland a note of introduction. The painter found the antiquarian friendly, and willing even to let Howland take treasures away to his studio for intimate study. This had gone on all through the winter, and it was now spring.

A spring evening, with Lyman Cragg crossing his library to get a couple of fifteenth-century daggers, and Christopher Howland thinking that Margaret Cragg was as beautiful as a lyric read at twilight by a singing river, as fair as silver birches in the wind! He must stay away. He was unhappy and ashamed and confused.

Cragg returned, carrying two daggers. He put them down upon the table with the ring of true steel—blades keen of edge and sharp as "points." The hilts were rather heavy, of dull chased silver.

"The misericords," he said. "The one with the ring in the end of the hilt is attributed to Bayard; but I'm sure it could not have belonged to his period, because of the design."

Margaret Cragg picked up one of the daggers and Howland took the other. He turned it over, feeling the grip and its weight, and carefully pressed the point against the sleeve of his dinner coat. It seemed to penetrate the fabric with a volition of its own, so keen was the steel.

A cry from Margaret snapped his head up. A little red line ran along her forearm with Howland twisted with all the power that was in him. A long moment; then the grip relaxed and Margaret took the silver-hilted dagger in her own hands.

red drops stealing from it. Howland sprang to his feet, trembling.

"You're hurt!" he cried. "Margaret—"

He checked himself, remembering; but for the span of a second she looked up into his face with eyes he had never seen before. It was as if he could see down into them, to unfathomable depths.

Cragg had turned from a cabinet at the other side of the room and was gazing at them. Suddenly Margaret went white, and leaned forward heavily against the edge of the table.

"Some brandy, Lyman!" said Howland sharply. "I think Mrs. Cragg's going to faint."

"No!" She straightened up, and the color returned to her cheeks and lips. "How foolish of me! I'm not afraid of blood, and that little scratch is nothing. Lyman is afraid of germs, and he has everything disinfected."

She smiled, and wrapped her handkerchief around her arm. Cragg had crossed over to the table and was looking down at her thoughtfully.

"It's fortunate that I do take precautions," he said. "As it is, that scratch amounts to nothing; but I'm not sure that you are feeling quite yourself. Have you been in to see Dr. Langhorne lately?"

"Oh, yes!" she laughed. "I'm a thoroughly well person, Lyman; but I don't like your misericords. They're much too effective!"

"They were intended to be," he replied, dryly. He glanced at the clock, and turned to Howland with his invariably polite smile. "I shall have to keep that appointment that I mentioned when you telephoned, Christopher. I'm sorry; but it may mean that I'll get a piece of armor that you'll be interested in. Stay and amuse Margaret. Sketch the daggers, or take them with you, as you like. You'll excuse me, won't you?"

Cragg bowed to his wife and to Christopher Howland, and left the room. Howland sat down and stared at the daggers. The library clock ticked louder and louder. It seemed. For the moment he did not trust himself to look at Margaret Cragg.

Ought he to have said that he must go when Cragg did? He hadn't thought of it in time; and Margaret would think it strange if he left now, suddenly. He was a little dazed. He must stay away from the house of Lyman Cragg hereafter. He had no right in their lives. The hurt was too new and swift to give its greatest pain now, but he dreaded the long future.

Minutes passed. What would she think of his downcast silence? He must look at her, and speak. He lifted his gaze from the daggers.

Her eyes were upon him. He thought they were brimming with tears. Perhaps she guessed, and pitied him. He gripped the arms of his chair and felt the muscles of his forearms swell. He experienced a certain satisfaction in thinking that he had not allowed himself to take on flesh, as Cragg had. Curious, how the mind worked!

He made an effort of will, and rose to his feet.

"I must go," he found words difficult. "I must—"

Margaret Cragg was on her feet before him. The handkerchief dropped from her arm. She drew breath quickly, deeply, so that her shoulders rose, and fell. The room dimmed and swayed to the eyes of Howland. She did guess, and he might as well tell her. It would help him, and it could not harm her, since she knew.

Yet this woman was another man's wife. He walked around the table until it was between them.

"Margaret!" he whispered. "Forgive me, but I—I love you. I'm going away!"

Her arms reached toward him across the table.

"I love you, too," he said. "Not until tonight."

"Nor I, until tonight!" She smiled, and the tears that had gathered in her eyes flowed slowly down her cheeks. "When I hurt myself it was you I wanted!"

"Margaret!" said Howland, tightening his grip upon her cool fingers. "Does he love you?"

"That's my question, too, Chris—does he love me?"

"You don't know?"

"I've never known. He's so utterly—correct. I don't know whether there's a real feeling underneath the surface or not. I've never known whether I was a wife or a convenience."

"There lies the answer to our riddle, Margaret."

"Yes!"

"If we crushed him to take our happiness, then our happiness would fall us. It wouldn't be there."

"It's because you can think that way that I love you, Chris. You are like one of your own pictures, my dear, my dear—the one of my old, the Campeador, receiving knight-hood."

"Margaret!" he cried. "You shame me. I'm only trying to play the game as well as I can—and not doing it."

Howland had never before been seriously in love. He had never experienced the love which seeks first of all to express itself in giving, which seeks at the expense of everything the well-being of the beloved. He had, of course, thought that some time he would care for a woman like that, but it had never occurred to him that the woman would be the wife of another man—and of a man whose bread and salt he had eaten, and from whose courtesy he had received repeated favors.

That morning Howland did not work. He sat through the hours looking out into Gramercy park, freshening to green again. His thoughts went in fruitless circles, like the strangers who walked around the outside of the iron fence that inclosed the park. He lunched alone in a restaurant instead of going to his club, and when he came in he found that Lyman Cragg had called him by telephone.

There was nothing strange in this, in itself. Not infrequently, since he had been working on the Bayard illustrations, Cragg had called to tell him of the acquisition of a piece of armor or a weapon of the fifteenth or sixteenth century. Nevertheless, Howland felt a thrill of uneasiness as he called the Cragg apartment.

"Ah, Howland!" came in the even tones of the antiquarian. "I see you didn't take either of the daggers with you last night. Did you make a sketch?"

"Why, no," admitted Howland after a moment of hesitation. "I decided I could work from memory. Thank you very much, as usual."

"Not at all. I telephoned today to tell you that last night I brought home a basinet."

For honors with the demure, helpless type, who also is a back number. The little lady who did not know how to back her car out of the parking space and just had to ask some nice man to do it for her ran the vivacious flapper a close second. But men soon "got wise" to the girl who characterized herself as "just an old-fashioned person."

"The new vampire is a cross between all of these types. She is interested in outdoor sports as the flapper. She plays a good game of golf and tennis and knows how to be a regular fellow, but away from the tennis court and golf course she dresses in organdie and floppy hats and is just demure enough to be interesting. In evening clothes she is quite as seductive as the first vampire type."

"Because she is clever enough to combine all three types she is utterly baffling to men and hers will be a long reign."

"But the flapper, too, is passe. She vies with I think you'd like to see. I'm making a special study of head armor just now, and this piece is undoubtedly of the type that Bayard and Sotomayor wore in their duel. Often a light headpiece and a gorget were the only defensive arms in those affairs. This must be returned to the owner tonight, but I'd be glad to have you come up now and look at it, if you care to."

Howland waited a moment before replying. More than anything else he wanted to remain away from the Cragg apartment today, while he tried to bring order out of the chaos of his mind; and yet Cragg would undoubtedly think it strange if he did not seize the opportunity to sketch this helmet.

"It's very good of you," he said, at length. "I'll come up right away, if I may."

"I'll expect you then," replied Cragg. "Good-bye!"

When he arrived at the apartment he was shown directly into the library. Ordinarily Cragg met him in the living room. Today the antiquarian stood at one end of the long library table. The basinet lay before him. The two daggers were where they had been left the night before.

Howland advanced smiling into the room, and Cragg came forward to meet him, but he did not offer to shake hands, as usual. Instead, he bowed gravely and pulled together the two doors behind the hangings between the library and living room.

"Sit down, please," he said quietly. "There is something more than the basinet—something which I did not care to mention in telephoning."

Howland sat down by the table, and waited in silence while Cragg drew up another chair opposite. Anything might be coming—trivial or tragic. For the first time the painter noted the color of Cragg's eyes. They were steel blue, like the blades of the misericords.

"Howland," he said, leaning slightly forward. "I don't wish to be at all dramatic, but I've discovered that my wife is in love with you."

For the moment Christopher Howland was paralyzed. When his mind functioned again his first coherent thought was for the protection of Margaret.

"Will you believe me when I say that you have no cause whatever for complaint against your wife?"

"Last night," said Cragg, "I saw you look at each other when she picked her wrist, and I knew then that you were in love with each other, or thought you were. I had suspected for some time that you would fall in love with Mrs. Cragg, but I considered it none of my business. That she fancies herself in love with you is my business. However, I did not send for you to discuss my affairs. I sent for you to tell you that you must eliminate yourself."

"Must is a strong word, Cragg!"

"I used it advisedly, sir."

Howland was growing angry, but he realized that his wrath was nothing compared to the fury which kindled that blue light in the eyes of the other man. It was like the blue flame of a Bunsen burner—a heat to melt and fuse glass. This was the man whom he had called wooden in his thoughts!

"I am not sure, Cragg, that you have the right to command."

"Just possessions!" exclaimed the antiquarian, in a low and intense voice. "Just retentions! Those two rights are so fundamental that they are as clearly recognized now as they were under the ancient Roman law. They follow from the justum matrimonium."

"The right to possess and to retain come from love," said Howland slowly. "If you love Margaret, you will keep her without hindrance from me. If you don't, you will lose her. That is the whole truth!"

"Howland," said Cragg, "for the last time I tell you that the right is mine, and I shall enforce it!"

Lyman Cragg stood up and rested his knotted fists upon the table. He trembled with the effort by which he held himself to a semblance of self-control.

"Will you drop out?" he growled. "Or won't you?"

Howland rose and faced Cragg. He wanted to end the interview, but he had no intention of ending it by giving the promise that Cragg demanded. He hated the man now.

"Will you assure me that you are suffering from something more than smashed vanity?"

The sentence was like a spark in a powder magazine. Cragg vaulted over the table, and as he did so, caught up one of the daggers with his free hand. The instant his feet touched the floor he drove the point at Howland's neck.

The attack was so swift, so unexpected, that the blade slit the shoulder of Howland's coat as he dodged. His hand reached for the other weapon instinctively, and he leaped away from the table armed. The face of Lyman Cragg told him that he would have to fight for his life.

Cragg caught himself and steadied. His hips were pressed to a thin line. He shifted his grip upon the misericord, held it as if it were a rapier and advanced with the light step of a boxer.

Howland retreated and took a fencing position. The weapon was utterly strange to him. He faced man 20 pounds heavier than himself, taller, and with a longer reach; but he was hard, he had good wind and he was quite cool now. There was no longer any chance to escape. He must kill, be killed or tire out his antagonist. It was this last that he wished to do.

Lyman Cragg feinted and thrust. The blow was high, at the throat. Howland parried it, but his antagonist's weight and strength carried the point to within a hand's breadth of his flesh before it turned aside.

The hilts of the daggers locked. Cragg recovered. In the heat of that tense moment Howland swept his arm forward as his weapon was disengaged and brushed Cragg's aside. He came back to position before Cragg could attack again. Then the big man began to move warily around him, breathing a little hard, but trying to save his strength and wind.

Both of them had been near death in that brief engagement, and Christopher Howland had learned that he might find himself the slayer of Lyman Cragg without intent. The thrust at Cragg's side had been instinctive, an automatic reaction to the point that had almost touched his throat. He did not want the battle to end in death, and so he began to dance in and out, thrusting, engaging Cragg's blade, disengaging and retreating, in a great effort to tire the big man, to reduce him to helplessness.

Howland knew that he himself had plenty of endurance for such a contest. The breathing of Cragg had told him that after the first clash.

Cragg pressed him hard at intervals. He drove forward at unexpected moments in bull-like rushes which bore him back and back until sometimes he fought swiftly and desperately, with his shoulders almost touching a wall, and with a question in his heart as to whether this were not the end. Each time, however, his own good condition told him the battle to end in death and so he began to dance in and out, thrusting, engaging Cragg's blade, disengaging and retreating, in a great effort to tire the big man, to reduce him to helplessness.

Neither went unscathed. Howland's left sleeve was slashed from wrist to elbow, and red drops trickled down over his hand. Once Cragg had pressed so hard that only a thrust at the face had kept him from hearing Howland's cry of pain. The point had drawn a line across his cheek.

The smart of that wound spurred Cragg momentarily to greater effort and then left him panting. Howland realized that he was preparing to risk everything in an attempt to finish it. He was as if he were falling in this final attempt he would collapse.

Howland moved out into the center of the room. Then the attack came—a whirlwind of reckless jabs and thrusts that drove him steadily backward. Suddenly he felt the edge of the table pressing against his hip. Cragg's point was sweeping toward him. He could not get away and so he dropped. He flung himself inside the blow, closed his dagger and caught Cragg's arm. They spun around, locked together and fell over upon the table as they struggled for the weapon in Cragg's hand.

Howland heard a sound in the room, but the whole volume of his strength and will was concentrated upon holding his opponent's arm that held that long and gleaming blade. Slowly it yielded. He ground his elbow into Cragg's neck.

Then, before the gaze that Howland had fixed upon the dagger, the hands of Margaret Cragg reached down. She closed upon the fist of Lyman Cragg. Howland twisted with all the power that was in him. A long moment; then the grip relaxed, and Margaret took the silver-hilted dagger in her own hands.

Howland released Cragg, stumbled to one knee, snapped to his feet and stood facing Margaret. Cragg pulled himself up and leaned upon the table heavily, panting.

It seemed to Howland that Margaret Cragg was beautiful with a new and unearthly kind of beauty. There was a strange radiance in her face as she looked at them. She seemed detached, calm, aloof, glorified, wholly transcendent to the murderous battle she had interrupted. It was as if she were looking down upon them from the gold bar of heaven.

"You need not fight," she said, in a voice as gentle as flowing water. "It is settled for all of us."

"Settled?" Cragg got the word out with difficulty. He pulled at his collar. "What do you mean?"

"That you don't need this!" She tossed the dagger away and laughed softly. A sob caught in the laugh and broke it. "The— the misericord—the gods—has settled it!"

"Are you mad?" cried Howland. "What has happened?"

"Dr. Langhorne examined me a week ago, and today he has told me that I have tuberculosis of the lungs," she said.

The silence lasted until it became unendurable. Through that seeming eternity the face of Margaret Cragg did not change, did not lose its faintly smiled bravery, its triumphant detachment from all things human. It was Cragg who ripped a word into the dead stillness that lay upon them like a pall.

"Tuberculosis!" he whispered hoarsely. "Margaret made a movement swift as light and stood in front of him."

"Kiss me, Lyman!" she said. He recoiled as from naked steel, caught himself and leaned forward to kiss her upon the forehead. In that instant she drifted out of his reach and turned to Howland.

"Kiss me, Christopher!" she breathed. His arms leaped out and clasped her. He pressed his lips upon hers with a stifled cry of thanksgiving. The thirst of his spirit was quenched.

She put his arms away, but her hand remained in his as she turned to Lyman Cragg. "You will divorce me, Lyman," she said. "I shall fight it out in the mountains. Good-bye!"

"We will fight it out in the mountains!" corrected Howland, as he led her from the room.

In the doorway he turned and looked back. Cragg was still leaning upon the table, following them with his eyes.

"Jus amoris!" murmured Howland. (Copyright by Public Ledger.)

Modern Vamp Combination Of Old Types, Says Henley

Culver City, Calif., July 10 (By A. P.)—Every era has its vamp, from the days of Adam and Eve on. With the changes in civilization there are changes in styles of vamps.

The modern vamp, however, is as unlike the ancient species as the flapper is to Cleopatra. In the opinion of Hobart Henley, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie director.

"The panther-like lady who used fantastic tricks to capture men was the first modern vamp," he said. "Hers was a long reign, but she stepped out of the picture to make room for the flapper."

"This later deviator of the hearts of men rode the crest of the wave for some time. She seemed harmless, but she was really mischievous enough to cause a great deal of trouble."

"But the flapper, too, is passe. She vies

Lasky Predicts Movie Shakespeare

Hollywood, Calif., July 10 (By A. P.)—The screen is ready for its Shakespeare and the film will have its "Bard of Hollywood" as surely as the stage produced its Bard of Avon.

This is the pronouncement of Jesse L. Lasky, motion picture producer. And while he does not forecast the arrival of the super-scenarist this year or next, he declares the great need of motion pictures eventually will bring its answer—a screen Shakespeare.

"A man will come who will tower above past writers and contemporaries in the construction of original screen stories," Lasky said. "He will bring to the screen something new, some great thought, some finely wrought form of construction and story telling. He will open our eyes to new possibilities, to new dreams of the screen as a medium of art, and when he passes will leave a creative monument behind him—that many generations will gaze upon."

"There is a tremendous need and I, for one, am sure that the superauthor of pictures will rise in the not too distant future."

"The screen started from nothing 30 years ago and today has developed a marvelous medium of pictorial story telling. It is an artistic medium that has grown faster in its technical possibilities than it has in its literary and dramatic power."

"We have some trained writers who think in terms of the screen, who dream their dreams in terms of picture art. We have trained technical workers, but most of them have come to us from the world of letters or from the short-story or newspaper field. We need these workers, but we also need men and women who are thinking in terms of Olympus."

"We need some one who will bring to the screen what a Shakespeare brought to the drama of his time. He galvanized dramatic construction and gave it form. He pulled the drama out of its rut of tradition and its heritage of being a religious spectacle."

"We do not expect some one to come along with startling new plots, novel situations, or brilliant photographic effects. Shakespeare, as a matter of fact, worked his age-old material. Many of his plots were time-worn, and had been used by many other writers in many countries. But it was what Shakespeare saw in them and what he saw in the drama as a medium of expression that made him great."

THE BUNNY TOTS THE STAMPEDE AT THE CIRCUS

Written and Illustrated by Edward McCandlish.

It was right in the middle of the circus performance when the Bunny Tots tumbled off of the big, gilded wagon and landed in the sawdust in the middle of the ring. My, what excitement there was there! I doubt that anyone who was not actually there to see it can form a real picture of what actually occurred. Folks who only read about it in the newspapers can hardly begin to understand what a stampede—that a riot of excitement followed when the Bunny Tots tumbled off of the wagon and landed in the middle of the ring.

The curious part of the whole affair was that it was the CHILDREN in the audience who saw the Bunny Tots first! And they promptly broke through the ropes at the sides of the rings and swarmed into the circus rings like peas rolling out of a bag.

The circus men tried to hold them back. Several policemen tried to hold them too. The ushers, the trainers, the police, the actors and even the peanut vendors tried and tried to keep the children in their seats and out of the rings, so that the circus could go ahead. But it was of no use. Into the rings the children went; their parents and nurses came hurrying after them, which only added to the crowd and the excitement—and then, right in the very middle of THAT excitement, why—Dare-Devil Devon—the World's Highest Diver—who, you remember, was all ready to make his jump into the shallow tank when the Bunny Tots tumbled into the ring.

Well, Dare-Devil Devon became so upset by all that racket and pandemonium, that he lost his balance and tumbled into his shallow tank, head over heels; which would have been all right if he hadn't happened to land squarely on the flat of his back!

Oh my, what a splash!

It was terrible! The circus men ran up and carried poor Dare-Devil out on one of those stretchers that they always carry along the tail end of a Fourth of July procession to pick up the Lane Ducks with (I mean those who are overcome by the heat, or other things, or who have new shoes that are too tight for them). Although, why they have put people on "stretchers," and stretch them when they are in such a state as Dare-Devil was—I am sure I don't understand. But that is another story.

Anyhow, they carried Master Dare-Devil out of the tent, and the children all formed a solid ring around the Bunny Tots and crowded up to shake hands; and, OF COURSE, each child wanted to pick up one of the Bunny Tots—and the Bunny Tots were so frightened by all this excitement that they just stood huddled together in a scared little ring, until after a while they found out that the children all knew them by their real names, and knew where they lived at Good Luck Cottage, and knew all about them in fact; so then they got over their fright in a hurry and were soon chattering away to the children at a great rate, I assure you.

It just seemed like a kind of a home-coming to the children, and the Bunny Tots too—to be getting together and talking things over that way, after only having scraped up a passing acquaintance through the newspapers.

But, there they all were, sure enough, talking things over just like so many very old friends. "Why, Hello, Patches!" said one of the children to the Bunny Tot who bears that name, and Patches was so glad to see someone who really knew him that he hardly knew what to say. Of course, you know how the little girl knew which one was "Patches?" Don't say anything!

And there was Master Tiny Bob, and Nip and Tuck, and Tug and Pull, and Thinsun, and Bob Bunny Tot, and Scalawag—they were all there, and the children who crowded around them knew them all by name.

By this time that circus tent was like one great, big, swarming BEE HIVE! The performance was stopped, the acrobats sat swinging on their ropes and trapezes without knowing what to do, the circus men kept running this way and that way, and everything was one grand hullabaloo, and nobody seemed to know what to do until, just about that time, a little circus girl who rode one of the ponies stepped in and settled things so that the circus could go on. And so you must read about that in the next story.

Mars is the god of war. Where the fight is thickest he rushes in and begins to fight, regardless of either side. This won for him great disfavor in the eyes of the gods. He is good-natured and honored among men for his healing.

APOLLO.

Apollo was the god of the sun. After the flood on the earth the python crept forth and killed many people. Apollo killed him with his sun darts, or arrows. The pythian games were established in commemoration of this. He warded off diseases and healed the sick. He was revenged and killed with the arrows of his sunlight.

DIANA.

Diana was the goddess of the moon. The bow of the moon and the moonbeams are her weapons. She was graceful in form and movement. Her nymphs promised never to marry. She was goddess of the chase and also a hunter. All hunters sacrificed part of their catch to Diana. Youth, animals and right are protected by her.

A Longed-for Adventure.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

Tom, Jack and Bill were sitting on the back steps of Bill's home, wishing for an adventure.

Recently a group of prohibition violators had committed several crimes in the little New England town which meant home to these boys. After much searching the police had let the matter drop by notifying the neighboring towns.

It was near twilight, in the early fall. Suddenly the mischievous boys decided to explore some unknown woods which were quite a distance from their homes. Night had fallen by the time they reached the small forest and everything seemed quite mysterious. Every rustle made the boys more frightened. Suddenly they all kept very quiet, for a small light shone in the distance. On approaching closer the boys saw the law-breakers at their work. Just as they were about to go home to notify the police, Jack slipped on an article made of a bright yellow metal. After painful miles of tramping, the little group returned home and narrated this adventure. That night the police captured the moonshiners, for whose discovery the boys were rewarded. The next morning Bill, Tom and Jack went back to the woods. Near the spot where Jack had slipped, the boys noticed dry leaves and twigs piled in an unnatural fashion at the foot of a small hill. As they were well acquainted with the out-of-doors, their suspicions were confirmed, when upon the removal of the underbrush, they found a cave. This they entered and explored. In one of its farthest passages they found a small chest of precious stones and jewelry. The boys remembered having seen in the paper that a similar chest had been stolen and that the owner offered a great reward for its return, so the chest went back to its former owner.

The sum that the three received later made them the proud possessors of all their boy hearts had longed for, and which had been refused them as useless.

The 150th Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

(Honorable Mention.)

One hundred and fifty years ago the Declaration of Independence was signed in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, by a body of men who were so widely known then as they are now, and, consequently, were risking not only their lives, but their honor and fortunes as well. The act of these brave men made others, who were not so patriotic, fight for the cause of liberty and win the liberty, happiness and prosperity which we now enjoy. The original copy of the Declaration of Independence is now in a glass showcase in the Library of Congress and it can be seen by any person who chooses to go there. The signatures are a little bit faded but they are still discernible.

Now, 150 years after this famous patriotic act of men now in their graves, we are celebrating the signing of this so important document with a world-wide fair, the sesquicentennial exposition. The United States government has spent thousands of dollars on the exposition, which is being held in Philadelphia, the scene of the act in whose honor it is being held, so that people from all over the world will be impressed by Uncle Sam's acts of the past.

Many of the buildings have not yet been completed so the best time to visit the exposition will be during July and August. All true Americans should visit Philadelphia this year and see the many works of art which will be on exhibition there, for there will not only be scenes of the past, but all the wonders and delights of the present day will be displayed.

The Old Store.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

Silence reigned within the old store—silence, dimness, and piles of treasures. It had once been a busy store, but now alas, it was very quiet and silent. The windows that had once been whole and had let in the sunlight, were now broken and boarded to keep the cold out. What little light they let in made queer shadows and figures upon the dimmed walls. On the shelves and tables were piles and piles of treasures that had once been bright and new. Beautiful silks that had graced colonial dames, woodwork so very fragile, wonderful pottery and glass that had once been in the homes of great men, were lying around dimmed by time and forgotten by the world. In a low chair in one of the darkest corners was sitting a withered old man. He, like the other things, had once been young and bright, but as time went on it had dimmed him also. It had not dimmed his memory though, and once you could get him started he would tell you of the shop when it was new and gay. He will tell you of the fascinating people that used to visit it, of the histories of the beautiful things on the shelves and tables, and many more stories. The little store is in what once was the most fashionable part of the city. It is crowded between two tall buildings, a memory of the past, such a delightful memory, though, with all its silence, dimness and piles of treasures.

To My Favorite Flowers.

(Honorable Mention.)

This is to a little rose that all day in the sun glows,
This is to a little daisy, that all day is a little lazy.
This is to the sweet alyssum when the sun shines down and kisses them.
Then I looked, to my surprise, a little violet beheld my eyes—
So sweet, so cunning in its ways, unlike other flowers not so gay;
But sweet and mild the lily along day.

The Ole Swimmin' Hole.

(Honorable Mention.)

When school has at last let out,
And the weather's gittin' hot,
Us kids all hurry down
To an old forsaken spot.
Just two blocks round the corner,
Of old Jim Levy's store,
Then crost the field out yonder,
Where the cows don't graze no more.

Down the narrow roadway,
That leads to Cragy's old mill,
There you'll find our secret
At the bottom of the hill.

It's the coolest of all spots
Us kids has ever seen,
Where the mill race runs along
In a clear and crystal stream.

There's bushes all around it,
There's trees that make the shade,
For us big boys to swim
And the little ones to wade.

When other guys are baking
With the most terrific heat,
That swimmin' hole of ours
Is a place that can't be beat.

A breeze is always blowin',
And the water's cold as ice,
But when it's ninety in the shade,
Our swimmin' hole feels nice.

POEMS AND DRAWINGS TO WIN GRAND PRIZES

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

How I wish every one of you could have been with me on Sunday and Monday, July 4th and 5th, at the celebration in Charlottesville, Va., commemorating the 100th anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson and the turning over of his beloved home, Monticello, to the nation as a sacred shrine like Mount Vernon.

Hundreds of notable men and women from all parts of the country, representing many patriotic societies and organizations, had come to Charlottesville to take part in the exercises. The town had turned itself into a vast reception committee and its beautiful homes were open to the visitors.

On Sunday afternoon we got into automobiles and were driven miles up the steep mountain side to Jefferson's magnificent home on the peak of the mountain, still preserved as it was 100 years ago when he died there.

From the broad verandas you could look down on the city of Charlottesville below and the great University of Virginia, which he founded so that education might become more general.

At 3:30, headed by a standard bearer carrying the flag, we marched down the hill to the little graveyard to place wreaths on Jefferson's grave. There were more than a hundred wreaths and it was a solemn and beautiful moment when they were placed on the grave. A storm broke overhead, but no one cared much because we were so interested in what we were doing.

This trip made me realize more than ever the greatness of Jefferson to whom we are indebted for that priceless document, the Declaration of Independence, and who did so much to preserve our sacred liberties. We are in need of more stories on summer, my stock of reserve drawings is getting low and I hope the Junior Poets will be inspired by the sights and sounds of this lovely time of the year and get busy as well.

In thinking over what the grand prize for August should be given for I have come to the conclusion that it will be divided: $2.50 for the best drawing received by July 25, and $2.50 for the best poem received by the same date.

Be sure to write your full names, addresses, ages and schools on your entries. Drawings will not be accepted unless they are in black ink—BLUE INK WILL NOT REPRODUCE.

Try to make something more out of your vacation days than a mere playtime. Then you will really enjoy them.

What a Boy Can Do.

(Honorable Mention.)

In far away Alaska there lived a boy named Joe. His daily duty was to fetch water for his family, because his father was dead and his mother was very weak.

One day in late November while Joe was going for water he heard a strange cry and moan in the distance. He stopped and saw a dog attacking a lady.

While the dog was about to take a large piece out of the lady's face Joe rushed to the rescue.

With a large rod he beat the dog away. She rewarded him by giving him lots of old clothes and food. She also gave him $50 in cash. From that day on Joe considered himself a hero.

Sources of Lime in the Diet.

Our great cement industries extract lime from Mother Nature, put it into sacks and later the plasterer mixes his mortar from it to build or remodel a house.

Vegetables also extract lime from Mother Nature. They organize it into food minerals and store it up for our bodies to change into living tissues and use to rebuild the framework of our own body—teeth included.

Ordinary lime performs a mighty necessary job when it enters the body. A diet that furnishes an abundance of this material permits the growth of good bones and good teeth. These bony parts of the body consist essentially of pure lime phosphate. When there is lack of lime in the food, teeth suffer just as the bones do.

The bones and teeth are continually changing throughout life. It was once thought that after they are formed, no change takes place. We now see the error of this belief since certain bone changes occur during the period of puberty; the shape of the body is changed by a change in the hip bones, while the facial expression alters through the passing years because of changes that occur in the bones of the face.

Lime Supply Varies.

For these reasons the gospel of lime in the food is preached. The amount of lime in fruits and vegetables and foods in general is a varying quantity. Some are abundant with lime—in others, it is a scarce quantity. In milk we find the largest amount for 1 1/4 pints of milk per day would supply the required lime if no other food containing lime were eaten.

The same amount of lime would come from 2 1/2 ounces of cheese. When milk and cheese are not included in the diet it is difficult to provide sufficient lime, particularly with children.

There are many children who will not drink milk. There are others who will take it some days and refuse to touch it at other times. It is not always necessary or even desirable that children drink any certain quantity of milk every day. It may be mixed with other foods, beaten up with the yolks of eggs and sweetened a little with honey or maple sugar, but each child should have the equivalent of at least 1 1/4 pints of milk each day.

Unfortunately, however, the vitamin content of milk is not uniform due to a number of factors, chief among which is the nature of ration of the cow producing the milk. On account of the possibility of milk not containing sufficient vitamin C to protect the infant against scurvy, the physician prescribes daily doses of orange juice, which is especially rich in vitamin C.

Recently it has been found that certain other dietary factors favor the formation of sound teeth. Many physicians now advise that artificially fed infants be given a few drops of cod liver oil daily, perhaps mixed with orange juice, from the fourth week of age.

Plain cod liver oil is perhaps the richest source of all known substances in the vitamin which seems necessary for normal lime metabolism. In this way good bone formation and satisfactory growth is assured.

It is difficult to provide sufficient lime when enough milk is not provided in the diet. Fruits and vegetables, especially the leafy vegetables, must be eaten in large amounts to make up the required amount. Oranges, lemons, corn, strawberries, asparagus, spinach, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, watercress, peas, beans and the group known as greens are the best of them.

To show how these compare with milk a few illustrations will be given. To obtain the day's requirements from one article alone, the following would have to be taken: Asparagus, 8 pounds; spinach, 2 1/2 pounds; cabbage, 3 1/2 pounds; celery, 2 pounds; carrots, 3 pounds; oranges, 3 1/2 pounds. The average helpings of these articles run from one to five ounces.

A comparison with lime-poor foods throws further light on the subject. The following would be the necessary amounts of food intake to supply the required daily quota of lime: White wheat bread, 5 pounds; white bread, 9 pounds; potatoes, 11 pounds; beef tenderloin, 17 pounds.

MARRIAGE OF COUSINS.

THE marriage of first cousins is contrary to law in Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah, Washington, and Wisconsin—sixteen States.

The article in the Eugenics Review in which this information appears also gives the following States as having laws against marriage of blood relations without specifying the degree of relationship in the article: Arkansas, New York, Tennessee, and Virginia, a grand total of twenty States that has legislated on the subject.

In the same magazine there is an article by Jon Mjoen in which that scientist contends for the marriage of persons of the same family stock. His theme is, "Genius as a Biological Problem."

"Why does not a genius beget children who are geniuses, or even who possess superior ability?" asks Mjoen.

His answer is: "Because every child has two parents." The genius is generally mated to a person of ordinary ability. The child inherits from the ordinary parent as well as from the other parent. To lessen the chance of inheriting genius we inherit the qualities of the stock more than those of the individual.

Your question will be gladly answered.

This is a criticism of those foods merely from the viewpoint of their lime supply; they have other food values that make them valuable in the diet. But for a sure and certain supply of the valuable tooth and bone building material—lime—learn to depend on milk and the generous use of fruits and vegetables.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Follow Dentist's Advice.

Q. My four front teeth began decaying when I was a small girl and I had them filled two times with cement, but each time it soon fell out. My teeth decayed very badly and were neglected, so that now I have two very large holes in my front teeth. (1) I went to a dentist and he said I must have all four teeth extracted and have four new teeth put in. Can they make such teeth stay in that way in one stretch so that they will not fall out again? (2) Will they show so that people will know that I have false teeth in my mouth? (3) How long will it take to have them put in?—L. B.

A. (1) In your case it is probably best to do as the dentist advises. This is a very common form of treatment and in most cases proves very satisfactory. (2) The bridge can be made so that the teeth will look natural. (3) It would take a week or two to construct a bridge of this kind, depending upon the amount of time devoted to it by the dentist and yourself.

Objections to Rotary Brushing.

Q. In brushing my teeth I use a circular motion on the teeth which seems to get them quite clean. Can you tell me what is the objection to this method, if any?—W. A.

A. There are two objections to the circular or rotary method of brushing the teeth. First the bristles do not work in between the teeth and therefore the spaces are not properly cleaned. Second, in the rotary motion there is a short cross-stroke. The brush with tooth paste on it acts as a fine file and wears away the enamel of the teeth. The rotary motion when used with tooth paste is beneficial as an addition to the vibratory method of brushing.

Of Nervous Origin.

Q. My husband, who is 60 years of age, has worked very hard for the last twenty years. Recently he has been acting rather queerly and the doctor thought he was losing his mind. He had his teeth X-rayed and the dentist found that many of them were abscessed. He had all of these taken out, and when the last ones were removed he began twitching all over. Do you suppose there is any connection between his nervousness and the pulling of his teeth?—M. V.

A. No. The twitching is probably nervous in origin and has nothing to do with the extraction of his teeth.

Opening the Bite.

Q. What is meant by "opening the bite" in fixing teeth? Is this procedure carried on very much, and do you think it should be undertaken?—F. A. A.

A. "Opening the bite" means adding fillings, crowns or bridges to the teeth, so that the jaws can not be closed to the point where they originally were. This procedure is carried on to a considerable extent and is recommended where it is indicated.

Q. I recently heard that eating tomatoes is good for the teeth. I can't see any connection between soft tomatoes and hard teeth. Can you explain?—F. A. N.

A. Tomatoes, either raw or canned, are rich in the vitamins A, B and C, especially vitamin C. These vitamins have a protective function in the body and therefore are of value in the prevention of dental diseases. Tomatoes also are rich in lime, a valuable and necessary material for good bones and teeth.

the sunlight. Do you think such a light would be detrimental to the eyesight? Many people tell me I work in a glare.

Gone! pain stops in one minute
CORNS

In one minute you forget you ever had a corn—so quick is the relief that Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads give. They stop the cause—pressing or rubbing of shoes. By this safe, sure method, a new corn can't come where the old one was.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are thin, medicated, antiseptic, protective, healing. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's—35c.

"Your Fat Will go as mine did"

For 19 years women have told women about Marmola Prescription Tablets. Told how easily, how pleasantly they ended excess fat. No exercise, no dieting required.

Mark the result today. Countless women keep slender with Marmola. You meet them in every circle. Over-fat figures are the exception now. People are using over one million boxes of Marmola every year. Then let it do for you what, for 19 years, it has done for others. Excess fat is a blight to beauty, health and fitness. Let Marmola show you how others control it. You'll always be glad you know.

All druggists sell Marmola at $1 a box. Or it is mailed direct in plain wrappers by Marmola Co., 1701 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Permanent waves, graceful as nature's—and more. Permanent, under the Lillias method, without demands upon the life or texture of the hair.
 For, in this particular method, clean white steam is the only agent that comes in contact with the hair.
 That is a sure safeguard against breaking or splitting of the hair, since no pressure is exerted within the hair to strain its delicate structure.
 The perfect preservation of the hair's natural beauty is an even greater achievement than the faultless grace of our wave itself.

Here's coolness for these torrid nights... an aid to restful sleep

You will welcome a sparkling, bubbling glass of "Canada Dry" at any hour of the day, but there is no one time when it brings such blessed relief as before retiring.

It is so cooling! So refreshing! So genuinely good for you!

A glass of "Canada Dry" at bedtime will help you to forget the heat and worry of the day and invite the peaceful calm that leads to restful sleep.

Especially in summer you want a beverage that you know is good and pure and you get just that when you buy "Canada Dry."

It is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsaicum (red pepper) in any form.

That is why it is served in leading hospitals in Canada and in this country. That is why it is prescribed by physicians! That is why it is so cooling and refreshing on hot summer days.

No other ginger ale will bring you the same refreshment because there is no other ginger ale like "Canada Dry."

Its matchless flavor has made it the most popular family beverage in this country today.
